Two Peace Officers and Civilian Hurt; Troops in Foreign Area.

The Situation Abroad.

Paraders Bombed.

By the United Press.

Shanghai, Friday, Dec. 3.—A hand grenade was thrown into a parade of Japanese soldiers marching through the International Settlement today.

A Chinese soldier, one Japanese civilian and two policemen were reported wounded by the explosion.

Japanese cavalry swarmed out of the line after the man. Japanese infantrymen with bayonets and settlement police with drawn revolvers raced after him as he fled down an alley.

The triumphal march through the Anglo-American section of Shanghai was intended to impress 2,000,000 Chinese civilians with the uselessness of further resistance.

Thousands of spectators, most of them foreigners, flanked the route of the march.

Police in riot cars and patrol wagons were stationed in strategic places.

Few Chinese Appear.

Twenty-five carloads of Japanese officers, officials, women and children with rising sun flags were lined up behind the troops.

Few Chinese could be seen and most were coolies. Many remained indoors for the double purpose of ignoring the show of Japanese strength and avoiding incidents which would result in intensified Japanese control. Many Chinese shops were closed.

The smartly uniformed Japanese soldiers marched along Yuyuen road, toward Avenue Foch, the boundary between the French Concession and the International Settlement. From there the route ran along Nanking road to the Bund and thence across Garden Bridge into Hongkew.

Ride Is Silent.

Company after company of helmeted infantry swept by briskly. The soldiers did not carry bayonets on their rifles. Officers carrying swords led the march.

The only sounds were those made by the troops, horses and equipment.

A machine-gun company and a

The Associated Press has picked its 1937 All-American team which will be published in tomorrow's Post—with pictures and a resume of the various players' accomplishments during the year. The A.P. selection is the most widely recognized by coaches, players and fans. Watch for it in Saturday's Post.

$100 Will Give Hope To Five Denied Relief

FOUR GENERATIONS are represented in the T family—the great-grandfather, aged 80; the grandmother, 55; the mother, 35, and her two sons, who are 9 and 10. The boys' father died two years ago.

Until six months ago this was a happy, nicely integrated family. Both the mother and grandmother had Government jobs. The great-grandfather contributed his share by taking care of the boys.

But Mrs. T's job was a temporary one, obtained after the death of her husband, and during the recent slashing of personnel for purposes of Government economy she lost it. Within two weeks, the grandmother—earning $1,260 a year—became ill. It will be two or three more months before she can return to work.

The mother took the best job she could get. She is a waitress and earns $10 a week, plus tips.

The family moved from a comfortable apartment to two damp cellar rooms on which the rent runs to $10 a week. The great-grandfather, a tall, snowy-haired man with excellent features, is sleeping on a cot in the hallway. The place is drafty and his rheumatism becomes more pronounced day by day.

There is a possibility that an old-age pension can be secured for the grandfather, but there is a long list of applicants.

Dickie, aged 9, is badly in need of a pair of special glasses.

Mrs. T would like to be reinstated in her old job, but she was born and reared in the District of Columbia so has no Senator to speak for her. A welfare agency is working in her behalf, but has been told she can expect nothing before February 1.

The family is not eligible for public relief, for Mrs. T, the mother, is considered employable.

With a little help for a few months this family—which has never known what it means to be the recipient of charity—would again be self-supporting.

The most constructive way of helping this family, the welfare agency which has investigated the case declares, is to remove them from their present quarters, purchase the glasses for Dickie, and buy a new bed and mattress for the great-grandfather.

This can be done and the family boosted through December and January for $100, which estimate includes $25 for Dickie's glasses.

Is this the family you would like to help this Christmas? If so, send your contribution to The Washington Post Christmas Fund and mark it "For the T Family."

No. 1—The T Family

The Post today presents the first case among the 25 neediest families of the District's unemployed employables for whom its Christmas fund will be collected. There is no provision in any relief fund for them. They are deserving families, investigated by the Council of Social Agencies. Their need is measured in terms of money, although six months from now—unless help comes—they may be chronic relief cases.

Woman Is Held As Texan Dies In Crash Here

Mrs. Ellen Ridgeway Gives Up; Police Seek Kin of V. E. Nelson.

V. E. Nelson, of 2410 Twentieth street northwest, was killed instantly last night when he was struck by an automobile as he tried to cross the street at Twentieth and Calvert streets northwest.

The driver of the car was Mrs. Ellen Ridgeway, of 3500 Fourteenth street northwest, who surrendered at the Ninth Precinct station about half an hour after the crash. She told police Nelson, who was 55, stepped from the curb, and her automobile side-swiped him. His body was tossed up against the roof of the car and his skull fractured.

Mrs. Ridgeway was held for a coroner's inquest and for driving on an expired permit.

Nelson's death was the ninety-third traffic fatality for the District this year.

He had moved into the apartment house on Calvert street, near which the accident occurred, on Wednesday. Residents there said they understood he had just come to Washington from Texas. Police were trying to get in touch with his wife in Dallas, Tex., last night.

CCC Reduction Is Discussed as Economy Move

Cuts of 75,000 Men and 300 Camps Proposed; Hot Fight Expected.

Reduction of the Civilian Conservation Corps by 75,000 men and of its camps by 300 has been discussed with Congressmen by Director Robert Fechner, of the CCC, in the second specific economy step proposed by the Administration, it was understood here last night.

Previously, President Roosevelt had proposed reduction of highway expenditures. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau in a recent speech had suggested the CCC as offering economy possibilities.

Estimated savings to be effected by the reported CCC cut ran as high as $75,000,000. It was understood the program was outlined by Fechner to the House Steering Committee last Monday.

Representative Jed Johnson (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman of the Steering Committee, said:

"It seems to me this may be all right if the organization is finding difficulty in recruiting men, but Mr. Fechner said that in October there had been applications for 30,000 more jobs for juniors (youths 17 to 21) than could be accommodated."

By the United Press.

Mexico City, Dec. 2.—Police tonight sought a possible link between gun-running activities of Cuban revolutionaries and the murder of Dr. Pedro Pablo Torrado, Cuban exile, whose bullet-riddled body was dumped out of an automobile today.

Two other occupants of the car, which bore District of Columbia license plates, No. 191487, drove from the scene after fatally wounding Policeman Gregorio Chavez. Later the automobile was found abandoned. The car belonged to Torrado, who purchased it before coming to Mexico a few days ago.

Torrado's companions are believed to have taken the exiled former undersecretary of justice in the cabinet of Provisional President Ramon Grau San Martin for a ride." They were described as Cubans.

A Washington State drivers' license made out in the name of Thomas Martinez, an alias under which Torrado crossed the border at Nuevo Laredo, was found in Torrado's pockets, as well as a contract for $60,000 worth of arms to be used apparently against Col. Fulgencio Batista, Cuban chief of staff and island "strong man."

The contract, signed by Mario Gonzales in behalf of Torrado, indicated that a 40 per cent deposit for the guns had been made with a San Francisco firm. The contract was with one Hisaktsky Wat Watambe, but police said this name probably was only a code for the real sellers.

(The license tags on the death car are registered in the name of Gonzalo Ulloa, 2651 Sixteenth street northwest, listed in the city directory as secretary of the Peruvian Delegation. A woman at his home said last night "we never did know Mr. Torrado."

Thieves Drop Suits One by One to Halt Pursuer in Flight

Leaving a trail of suits in their wake, two colored robbers escaped from Albert Alberstein, who runs a department store at 1030 Seventh street northwest, by a ruse as old as the great days of the Greek gods on Olympus.

Alberstein saw them snatch eight garments from the rack in front of his store, and gave chase through the crowded streets. Whenever he would draw near, one of the fugitives would throw away a suit, which Alberstein would retrieve.

By the time they had discarded six of their stolen suits, the colored men had escaped, while Alberstein returned to his store, his arms full of clothing.

Farmers Win Parking.

Farmers, who sell their wares at the K street market, aided and abetted by Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, yesterday won their fight for 90-degree parking near the market, at least until January 1, through orders issued by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

Wallace Irks Bankhead in Cotton Row

Change Forced in House Measure by Rampant Dairy Bloc.

Widely conflicting drafts of a farm bill, and a party split over "compulsory" crop-control aims, yesterday brought a backfire from the cotton South in the Senate and unexpected floor changes in the more moderate House bill.

While Southern Senate Democrats were berating Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's protests against Senate "quota" proposals, the House overrode its Agriculture Committee under insistent urging of a rampant dairy bloc.

An amendment by Representative Gerald J. Boileau (Progressive), Wisconsin, aimed at stopping the use of retired acres to pasture new dairy herds, was adopted, 114 to 95.

Amendment Approved.

As Chairman Marvin Jones struggled to save his bill against further inroads, another amendment, placing cotton quotas on a State-wide rather than a county basis, was approved 108 to 67, on motion of Representative A. F. Ford, of Mississippi.

All hope of Senate passage this week faded, as members left debate on the bill for a prolonged discussion of Wallace's objections. But House leaders still drove for a vote by Saturday.

Bankhead Flays Wallace.

Southern wrath against Wallace flared in a spirited reply to the Secretary by Senator John H. Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, strong advocate of compulsory cotton control.

"Secretary Wallace seems to be the leading advocate of dragging prices down and down," declared Bankhead. "I like the Secretary of Agriculture. I think he's honest and sincere. But I don't think he knows anything about cotton, and he should not try to impose his will on representatives of the South who do know."

Secretary Wallace, favoring processing taxes to finance the farm program, and opposing several "restrictive" control features of the Senate, had stated his objections Wednesday in a letter to two Democratic Senators. He had opposed the use of compulsory marketing features unless the ever normal granary was "running over," because he said he feared it would force American farm prices out of line with foreign markets.

Byrnes Voices Criticism.

Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary immediately seized on the Wallace letter to suggest that the farm bill be sent back to the Agriculture Committee for rewriting. He predicted a Presidential veto if the bill were passed in its present form, and asked:

"Are we to follow the recommendations of the Secretary of Agriculture? If so, it cannot be done well on the floor of the Senate; it must go back to committee."

Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, also lashed out at the Wallace letter, and said he was convinced it was written by a subordinate; not by the Secretary. Byrnes criticized Wal-

Jury Jobs Sold At Dollar a Day, So Justice Quits

By the United Press.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 2.—The machinery of justice stopped today while authorities rooted out a jury summons racket in which chances to sit as a juror at $3 a day were sold in a tavern for $1 each.

Seven men—including an elusive police character, George (Frenchy) Andre—were accused.

Two trials were stopped immediately, juries were dismissed and the cases declared mistrials.

Andre, it was said, had been hired at $1 a week to "ring doorbells" and deliver summonses. Authorities said Andre pocketed the papers if the prospective juror was not at home. Then, it was charged, they were sold at a tavern.

Texan Breaks Wages Deadlock

The deadlock over wages and hours legislation was broken in the House when Representative Joseph J. Mansfield (Democrat), of Texas, became the 218th member to sign a petition forcing a vote on the measure. Mansfield is shown with Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, stanch backer of the measure.

Vote of 218 Members Takes Measure From Rules Committee.

Basic Amendments Still Bar Success

Demand to Study Fish Logrolling Charge Is Defeated.

Signers' names—Page 10.

By Robert C. Albright.

A wage-hour bill studded with amendments and hot center of controversy in labor's own ranks yesterday was torn from control of a standpat Rules Committee by 218 House members who petitioned for a vote.

The No. 2 measure on the President's list will be brought before the House for a special session test December 13. But high legislative hurdles and amendments striking at basic provisions still lie in the path of final enactment.

Twenty-five minutes after the House convened yesterday, the last of a line of eight Democrats, three of them from neighboring Maryland, paraded to the Speaker's rostrum and signed the "discharge" petition that will bring the bill to a vote.

He was Representative Joseph J. Mansfield, of Texas, a cripple, who was cheered by House laborites as he rode to the well of the House in his wheel chair. His signature gave the required majority on a list now carrying the names of 196 Democrats, 9 Republicans, 8 Progressives and 5 Farmer-Laborites.

Fish Move Defeated.

While Mansfield was signing, the House was voting down a resolution by Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), New York, who demanded a committee investigation of alleged trades, deals and logrolling tactics to "put over" the petition.

House leaders brought the Fish resolution to an immediate vote, and it was defeated overwhelmingly, 281 to 94.

Afterward, Fish in a statement declared refusal of the House to investigate "pressure" charges "practically destroys the last rights of the minority to protect the dignity, political integrity, honor and prestige of the House of Representatives."

Rules Group Voted Down.

The adamant rules committee, which refused last session to give the wage bill right-of-way after a favorable labor committee report, and again blocked the bill this session, must now leave the decision to the full House.

On the next "discharge Monday"—December 13—a formal motion will be put to the House to discharge the committee. If that is adopted, the House then must vote on a debate-limiting rule and pro-

Final Rail Rate Hearing Feb. 7 Set as I. C. C. Clears Red Tape

Regional Meetings Scheduled; Decision by Spring Held Possible After Presidents Plead for Speed to Save Their Industry.

By Sidney Olson.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, stripping procedural red tape from the railroad rate case, announced last night regional hearings to be held throughout the country in January will culminate in a final hearing here February 7.

After the unprecedented parade of rail presidents to the witness stand had continued throughout the day, presenting the carriers' arguments for a 15 per cent freight rate increase, Presiding Commissioner Clyde B. Aitchison announced:

"We will take the testimony of shippers in Washington after the completion of other testimony.

"Ex parte 125, the application of the Pullman company for a 10 per cent increase, will be heard here on December 20. This testimony is to be presented without cross-examination and that case will then be set on the same days and at the same outside points at which I announce regional hearings."

Cross-examination of the railroad leaders will be made today.

The commission, apparently in recognition of the "real emergency" cited all week by heads of the industry, is acting with unusual speed, observers agreed last night, as numerous moves to shove the important case through the cumbersome procedure have been made.

The early date for final hearings, February 7, may even augur a final decision by next spring, it was said, in sharp contrast to the full year the commission required in deciding the last rate case, Ex parte 115, far less sweeping in scope than the present case.

The regional hearings will be as follows:

Seeing First Time At 12, Boy Beholds 'Wonderful' World

Hot Springs, N. Mex., Dec. 2 (AP).—A "wonderful" world unfolded itself before the eyes of 12-year-old Julian Galindo today. Doctors removed cataracts from the boy's eyes, sightless since birth.

"It's wonderful," said Julian, tears running down his cheeks. The next minute he was shouting in boyish glee as he caught sight of the first recognizable object.

"I can tell," he cried. "It's a bicycle!"

Mystery Thief in Home Of Intelligence Officer

The home of Maj. Earl C. Ewert, Field Artillery, 4514 Connecticut avenue, was entered last night and thoroughly ransacked, he reported to police. He said valuables worth only about $15 were taken, though the house appeared to have been minutely searched.

Maj. Ewert is attached to the office of the chief of staff, Military Intelligence.

'Nothing Exciting,' Says Son James of Roosevelt Fishing

Miami, Fla., Dec. 2 (AP).—The fisherman's paradise around the remote Dry Tortugas Islands, 300 miles southwest of here, attracted President Roosevelt, vacationing aboard the yacht Potomac, for the third straight day today.

Secretary James Roosevelt reported:

"The President spent last evening reading reports and dispatches from Washington. Fishing still excellent. (Robert H.) Jackson holds prize for largest fish. No visitors. Nothing exciting happening." Jackson is assistant attorney general.

Beauty Who Wed 2 Bigamists Asks Million From Son of Publishing Company Executive

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 2.—The marital misadventures of a dark-eyed beauty from New Orleans whose first two husbands happened to have other wives were unfolded today in the crowded chambers of a State supreme court justice.

Mrs. Marion Gustine Allgeyer sought to show that as a result of a maze of matrimonial mixups she was entitled to half of the $2,000,000 fortune which she said her second two-timing husband inherited last year.

The husband, Howard E. Spaulding, of Greenwich, Conn., not only disputed her claim but demanded the return of $100,000 which he said he had given her in monthly installments over a period of ten years.

Mrs. Allgeyer, now the wife of a New Orleans physician and clubman, charged that Spaulding neglected to tell her that he already had a wife and two children when he married her under an assumed name at Milwaukee, Wis., in May, 1925.

Spaulding, son of an executive of the Curtis Publishing Co., who died last year, replied that she knew all about his wife and children and had pointed out to him that "marriage laws are man-made and that we could get married in Milwaukee secretly."

She Knew About Wife and Children, Says H. E. Spaulding.

Lawrence S. Critchell, a New York banker, testified that he also had changed his name to marry the Louisiana girl without divorcing the wife he already had.

Critchell, now a stocky, middle-aged man, was Mrs. Allgeyer's first husband. He said they met in 1922 and within a year he was "very much enamored of her—foolishly perhaps," and so they went to Waukegan, Ill., and were married.

But that didn't last long and when she decided to obtain a divorce, he said, he obligingly dropped his assumed name and became a star witness in her behalf, testifying that her husband, a mythical "Sanford J. Clarke," was a cruel man.

Lewis and Green Fail to Agree On Peace, Try Again Tonight

By the United Press.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor and John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization, failed in their face-to-face conference yesterday to reach a truce in labor's internal war and agreed to resume conversations at 8 p. m. today.

Although both were noncommittal on leaving the hotel conference room, it was understood solution of the problem of disposing of competing unions in the same industries—dual unionism—remains the chief obstacle to peace.

Lewis, grim and curt, told newspapermen no conclusions were reached.

"Why are you meeting at night?" he was asked.

"Ask Mr. Green," Lewis retorted.

Green added no information.

Green and Lewis met with Philip Murray, who directed the C. I. O. drive in big steel, and George Harrison, head of the railway clerks.

Simultaneously, Lee Pressman, general counsel of the C. I. O., said the organization will "throw its full weight into a campaign to break the vicious anti-union drive of Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, N. J."

Senate to Quiz Appointee to District Court

Judiciary Committee Calls Prof. Edgerton About Article He Wrote.

Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, yesterday summoned Prof. Henry W. Edgerton, Cornell University law teacher, before a subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee in connection with his appointment to the United States Court of Appeals of the District.

Burke invited Prof. Edgerton to appear any day next week except Monday.

The inquiry, which is an off-shoot of the Senate fight over the President's Supreme Court reform bill, was occasioned by the disclosure that Edgerton wrote an article in the Cornell Law Quarterly attacking decisions of the Supreme Court.

Other members of the sub-committee besides Burke, who is chairman, are Senators Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, and Borah (Republican), of Idaho.

Borah Aids Defense.

Borah has indicated, however, that he believes Edgerton did not question the authority of the Supreme Court but only the wisdom of its decisions.

Meanwhile, Senator King (Democrat), Utah, favorably reported the nomination of D. Lawrence Groner, of Virginia, as chief justice of the United States Court of Appeals of the District.

King also stated that he is "not entirely satisfied with Edgerton's qualifications as an appointee to the court.

May Not Need Approval.

A suggestion that the appointment of Edgerton, Groner and Representative Vinson (Democrat), Kentucky, to the Court of Appeals might not require Senate confirmation was made to the Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday by Carr V. Van Anda, former managing editor of the New York Times.

Van Anda wrote Chairman Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona, that the recent act providing for the retirement of judges on full pay says the President shall "be authorized to appoint a successor" when the judges retire. The law, he said, does not specifically require Senate confirmation in such cases.

NLRB Certifies C. I. O. in 2 Cases

The National Labor Relations Board certified the National Maritime Union yesterday as the exclusive collective bargaining agency for ships' crews on two steamship lines. The International Seamen's Union was certified for a third line.

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—The National Maritime Union today petitioned the National Labor Relations Board to withhold certification of the rival International Seamen's Union as bargaining agent for unlicensed seamen of the Eastern Steamship Co., pending hearings on charges of unfair labor practices filed against the company by the NMU. The Associated Marine Workers, announced that it would cast its lot with the C. I. O. Until today it has been affiliated with the A. F. L.

Va. Farmers Fight Meat Regulations

A delegation representing Virginia farmers who produce "Smithfield hams" sought assurance yesterday their interstate markets would not be lost by what were described as discriminatory meat inspection regulations.

The group, through Representative Hamilton (Democrat), Virginia, urged the Bureau of Animal Industry to permit inspection of whole hogs after slaughter on the farms of a producer.

This would eliminate necessity of sending the whole carcass to a plant just to process the ham and have it inspected, he explained.

Expert Scores TVA Flood-Control Plan

Chattanooga, Tenn., Dec. 2 (AP).—The Tennessee Valley Authority's unified program was described today by Ford Kurtz, hydraulic expert of Hollis, N. Y., as being inadequate for flood control.

Kurtz, a witness for 18 power companies challenging the TVA power program, said in answer to a question by Federal Judge Florence Allen, however, that "all dams in the TVA system have some flood control value."

A system of 19 detention reservoirs on tributaries of the Tennessee River, with none on the river proper, was recommended by Kurtz to the three-judge court as "the most effective pure flood control plan."

Working for Washington

PAUL E. JAMIESON.

By Christine Sadler.

The Burroughs Citizens Association, which works for civic betterment north of Rhode Island avenue and east of Sixteenth street northeast, was organized in 1929. Its name was derived from the John Burroughs School, where its meetings still are held on each fourth Friday of the month.

Probably the major portion of the association's energies has gone into various drives for adequate school facilities. At the time of its organization, a movement was on foot to move the seventh and eighth grades from Burroughs to a school south of Rhode Island avenue. Fearing this would mean too long a delay in construction of a junior high school on land already purchased in the Burroughs territory, this move was vigorously opposed.

Plea Taken to Congress.

Association members carried their plea for a new school to Congress and later made strong pleas before the Board of Education, members of which approved an appropriation for this purpose in 1932. Despite continued opposition from other groups, the item was included in the bill as it finally passed.

Paul E. Jamieson, new president of the group, recalls that "the fight was not then over, but just begun."

An appropriation for one of the two projected wings is now being sought, and, in this effort, Jamieson says, the Burroughs group has the support of all neighboring civic organizations.

Another of the major accomplishments of the association was in securing development of Taft Recreational Center. It was the first center of its kind in the city, and, through efforts of the association, bears name also given to the new junior high school. Future objectives of the Burroughs group include completion of the recreational center in accordance with plans already drawn, including construction of a swimming pool.

Burrough was one of the first citizens' groups to advocate a new National Guard armory for the District, and is still lending its influence and support to this suggestion. Among other projects in which association members now are actively interested are further widening of Bunker Hill road east of Eighteenth street northeast, completion of plans for a park development on "Saddleback" or McKinley Hill, further rezoning of Eighteenth street northeast and suffrage for the District.

Jamieson D. C. Native.

Jamieson, who is beginning his term as head of the Burroughs group, was born in the District in 1894 and has been engaged in the practice of law here for several years. He received his education in local schools, including Central High School and National University Law School. From the latter he holds degrees of LL. B., LL. M. and M. B. L. He is an active Mason, a member of the Board of Trade, of the District of Columbia Bar Association and several other organizations.

Unlike several other civic workers of the District, he is strictly opposed to broadening power of District Commissioners—so long "as they are mere political appointees, as at present." His views might be modified, he says, "if and when these officials are elected by local residents and answerable to the electorate." As it is, the present system tends to minimize the possibility of autocratic powers which might be unwisely exercised by a small group of men in whom too much power is vested, he feels.

On Monday—Robert D. Lyons, president of the West End Citizens Association, is next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Son, 30, Settles Suit Parents Brought For His Education

San Francisco, Dec. 2 (AP).—A handshake and a kiss today ended a court suit in which an elderly couple sought $8,500 from their son, "owing and due" for his education.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Driscoll sued Dr. John A. Driscoll, jr., 30, of the city emergency hospital system. The mother testified she and her husband told the son, when he was 21, they couldn't afford to educate him further, but if he would repay them they would mortgage their home.

Superior Judge Pat R. Parker remarked "the relationship of a son to his parents is too precious to jeopardize in litigation." A few minutes later the attorneys announced the son had agreed to pay the $1,500 mortgage, and $2,500 extra at $40 a month.

Name Library For Jefferson, Bill Proposes

Treadway Would Change Congressional Library, End Commission.

A new proposal to name the Library of Congress the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Library was made in the House yesterday, with the recommendation that the Jefferson Memorial Commission be abolished.

Representative Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, who was one of the leaders in the fight to save the cherry trees last session, introduced the bill.

It provides for the erection of a statue of Thomas Jefferson in front of the main entrance of the library at a cost of not more than $25,000 and a proper setting for Jefferson's collection within the library at a cost of $10,000.

Treadway pointed out that his resolution would save the Federal Government $2,965,000 at a time when the President is talking of balancing the budget.

Because of Jefferson's connection with the Library of Congress, Treadway said, the renaming of the library for him would be a more appropriate tribute than the erection of a massive marble temple, which would be in direct contrast to Jefferson's characteristic simplicity.

Moreover, he pointed out, it would end the controversy over a site for the memorial which the commission recommended and would save the cherry trees around the Tidal Basin.

There are now in the library 2,000 volumes of the original Jefferson library of 6,487 valuable books. The remainder were destroyed in a fire in 1851.

FCA Finds Drop In Foreclosures

By the Associated Press.

The Farm Credit Administration reported yesterday a decrease in farm foreclosures and a continued increase in private financing of agricultural borrowing on real estate

Improvement in farm incomes and "growing confidence" in land values were given credit by Administration officials for these trends.

Foreclosures by all lenders in August totaled 2,991, the smallest number in any month during the last four years, it was reported.

Garner May Face Trial, Charged With Not Shooting First Deer on Hunting Party.

FOR THE SECOND TIME within five years, signature of Representative J. J. Mansfield (Texas), Democrat, yesterday forced a House vote on major legislation. He was the last to sign the wages-hours bill petition just as, in 1932, his name completed action forcing to the floor the bill legalizing 3.2 per cent beer.

Both times it was just by accident that he was last, he said. He added he had favored the beer bill but probably would vote against the wage-hour legislation.

"I never did know how I happened to be the last signer of the beer petition," Mansfield said. "But today I was just coming over to the House for a roll call vote and I signed the petition because I had told Majority Leader Rayburn some time ago I would consider it."

Mansfield, chairman of the Rivers and Harbors Committee, is crippled and has propelled himself about the Capitol for years in a wheel chair.

VICE PRESIDENT Garner, who receives considerable kidding from his senatorial colleagues, may be called upon to defend his claim of bagging the first deer while on a Pennsylvania hunting trip with several Senators.

A few colleagues expressed doubt Garner's 125-pound buck was the first killed by the party and suggested a mock trial at which the Vice President would be asked to prove his assertion. Senator Key Pittman, Senate president pro tem, offered to act as Garner's counsel.

SENATOR MINTON (Democrat), Indiana, asked a Federal trade commission investigation of manufacturers' policies on distribution and retail sale of automobiles.

Minton's resolution, similar to one pending in the House would appropriate $50,000 for an investigation of "forced marketing" of motor cars as well as "the relationship between excessive finance charges on time sales and excessive allowances on used cars."

A REQUEST for amending the merchant marine act so officers won't have to dress for dinner was put before the Senate today. Under existing law, licensed officers are required to take their meals in the main dining salon of a vessel. Introducing a bill to eliminate this requirement, Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, said many officers preferred to eat in the officers' mess. There they can wear working clothes.

SENATOR VANDENBURG (Republican), Michigan, came to the support of President Roosevelt's proposal to reduce Federal spending for highways. In a letter to State Highway Commissioner Van Wagoner, of Michigan, he said: "I cannot put myself in the equivocal position of advocating economy in the abstract and deserting it in the concrete."

HIS SPEECHES today are the ideal cure for insomnia, Senator Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona, said when a visitor to the Capitol asked Ashurst for his autograph.

"Write to my office," Ashurst told the visitor.

"I'll not only send you my autograph but the greatest thing for insomnia you ever had—a set of my speeches in pamphlet form."

Editor Defies NLRB Subpena In His Attack

By the Associated Press.

An attempt by the National Labor Relations Board to subpena the records of a magazine which criticized the board met with outright defiance yesterday.

Hartley W. Barclay, New Yorker and editor of the magazine "Mill and Factory," informed the board he would not comply with the subpena directing him to produce material used in preparing an article on the board's Weirton Steel Co. hearings.

Elisha Hanson, of Washington, attorney for Barclay and the Conover-Mast Corporation, publishers of "Mill and Factory," informed the board in an open letter that he considered the subpena a violation of the constitutional guarantee of a free press.

The Labor Board said that if Barclay failed to comply with the subpena it would ask the Federal courts to uphold its authority.

The article described the Weirton hearing at New Cumberland, W. Va., last September as "a colossal burlesque staged with taxpayers' money." The hearing dealt with the board's charges that the Weirton Steel Co. violated the Wagner Labor Relations act.

$426,003 in Receipts Reported by Baptists

Atlanta, Dec. 2 (AP).—The home mission board of the Southern Baptist convention, embracing 18 Southern States, Panama and Cuba, today reported its receipts for 10 months of 1937 were $426,000—an 11 per cent increase over the same period of 1936.

The board approved a budget approximating $468,000 for next year.

Constance E. de Bower Weds Jacques Raffray

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—Mrs. Constance E. De Bower was married at the courthouse today to Jacques A. L. Raffray, insurance broker whose former wife, Mrs. Mary H. Kirk Raffray, divorced him last November 9 in Reno to marry Ernest A. Simpson, former husband of the Duchess of Windsor. Mrs. De Bower was divorced in Reno November 27 from Herbert De Bower.

Kennedy Seeks Maritime Labor Mediation Body

Commission Chief Tells House Committee Conditions Are Deplorable.

By the Associated Press.

Reporting "deplorable" labor conditions in the maritime industry, Joseph P. Kennedy asked Congress yesterday for legislation to create a Maritime Mediation Board to handle labor disputes, together with a law to encourage private ship lines to participate in a Government-subsidized construction program.

The Maritime Commission chairman told the House Merchant Marine Committee subsidized shipping is "a very sick industry" and that the means now at hand—including Federal construction subsidies of up to 50 per cent of a ship's cost—were insufficient to cure it.

Advocating changes in subsidies, Kennedy declared:

He suggested changing a provision of the Merchant Marine Act that operators shall return to the Government one-half of any profit in excess of 10 per cent a year made on subsidized ships over a five-year period. He urged the period be changed to 10 years.

He also recommended that the Maritime Commission be authorized to pay for national defense features built into subsidized merchant ships. Further, he suggested the commission be allowed to approve the bid of any shipyard in which an operator desired to have a vesse. built, if the commission d emed the bid reasonable and fair.

As to the proposed mediation board, Kennedy said the board would not eliminate the seamen's right to strike but would seek to hold that weapon in abeyance until "reasonable efforts have been made by both parties" to settle disputes.

In reference to labor troubles in the merchant service, Kennedy declared the Government's efforts to develop a strong merchant marine would be futile "unless something can be done to reduce interunion friction, to increase the efficiency of crews and restore order and discipline aboard our ships."

Would Build Planes, Too.

Recommending consolidation of more than 50 bureaus which he said now exercise some jurisdiction over maritime affairs, he said in response to questions it would be presumptuous for him to ask that powers be taken away from Cabinet officers and given to his commission but added the commission would welcome such a step.

To provide what he termed a "new aid to the foreign commerce of the United States," he advocated extension of the merchant marine act's subsidy provisions to the construction and operation of transoceanic aircraft.

"Inasmuch as the studies of the commission indicate the inexpediency of the construction of superliners," he said, "and due partly to the probability that fast flying boats will attract a great deal of the patronage of the superliners, we believe that strenuous efforts should be made to establish this country in the forefront of overseas transportation by air."

Kennedy pointed out American ships carry about 35 per cent of the cargoes entering and leaving the Nation's ports, and said about 16.6 per cent of that amount moved in subsidized ships.

"It would not seem the part of wisdom to entrust to foreign vessels any more of our goods than they now carry," he said.

Prince von Starhemberg Weds Pretty Star of Viennese Stage

Vienna, Dec. 2 (AP).—Prince Ernest Rudiger Von Starhemberg, former vice chancellor, was married today to the pretty Viennese actress Nora Gregor in Historic St. Josef's Church.

The Prince's plans were not announced, but his bride told friends she would be back in Vienna in February to make her stage debut as a Princess—The First in Viennese history—as Lola Montez in the Hungarian play "Bell and Hammer."

Von Starhemberg was married in 1928 to Countess Marie De Salm-Reifferscheidt-Raitz. They had no children and in the last four years she had withdrawn almost entirely from Vienna's social life. The marriage was annulled after proceedings lasting more than a year.

Friends agreed Von Starhemberg's health had been improved by his vacation from politics since he broke with Chancellor Kurt Von Schuschnigg in May, 1936. The chancellor invited Von Starhemberg to lunch Tuesday for their first social meeting in a year. Some observers considered the luncheon meant Von Schuschnigg no longer considered the Prince a political threat.

Reg. U. S. Patent Office

Disappointment.

This column was on the verge yesterday of singing a pean on the tingling out-of-doors in its relation to those pretty cabins the Government has built at Skyline in Virginia.

These cabins are rustic, of course, and each has an open fireplace that would throw bright flickerings on the windowpanes. The cabins would accommodate 75 persons. In these cabins are all manner of facilities. And in the out-of-doors surrounding them are all manner of wild beauty.

And we would have written handsomely of these cabins and weekends before the open fireplaces, for the National Park Service on November 26 announced that the cabins would be open to the week-end trade all winter. But calling for some additional information on the week-end outlook, it was said that the cabins wouldn't be open; the whole matter has become impracticable.

This doesn't mean that you can't get cabin facilities at Panarama or Swift Run Gap, or that the parks won't be open. It means simply that those lovely cabins at Skyline, the most etensive of all the cabins in Shenandoah National Park, won't be open this winter. They may be open net winter, it was said.

* * * *

But before leaving this subject, we would like to award the handpainted rose of compliment to the National Park Service press release scribe who wrote the release of November 26—concerning those cabins. It was a good job, from which we pluck a sample paragraph

"This is a park where greatly expanded scenic vistas have been unscreened through the dismantling of the trees by Jack Frost; a place where occasional early snowfalls create a wild life map—tracks of tiny feet and brushing wing-tips revealing to the student of biology the presence of unseen neighbors, in furs and feathers, in this lovely land of mountains and forests."

Blessing.

Someone has come to a great realization in the Farm Credit Administration Building—the happy thought that it is difficult for the uninitiated to find his way therein. And he proposes to do something about it, to renumber all rooms; and this may help a little, if even a little then millions will rise to call him blessed and millions as yet unborn may be able, a little better, to find their way around.

Aside from this, there will be installed new metal holders containing cards disclosing room numbers and the names of occupants within the rooms. Generally, the new numbering plan will be as follows:

The basic number for each floor will be of the thousand digit, such as 1,000 for the first floor, 2,000 for the second, and so on up. The basic number for each corridor will be of the hundred digit, as east corridor, 000; north corridor, 100; west corridor, 200, and south corridor, 300. Similarly numbered rooms will be in the same relative location on all floors. The next move in the situation is for officials to decide what names they want placed in the holders outside the rooms.

You read, perhaps, a very brief news account of how 32 members of the North Carolina Congressional secretarial staff got together at luncheon on Wednesday for the first time within the memory of any of those present. Some very casual research discloses that the idea was sprung by Herbert Bonner, of Representative Warren's staff. And you suspect the truth: they all decided to meet again, once a month, to be exact. They plan to use the Speaker's dining room.

New Sailing.

The Interior Department Recreation Association—maker of more headlines than any other Federal employe group—now looks to a sailing on the air waves. Mutual's station has undertaken a series of radio programs sponsored by Government departments, the first to be presented tonight at 10:30 and featuring I. D. R. A. boys and girls under direction of Evelyn Adams.

This will be a musical and dramatic impression of the development of Interior, "tracing the cultural growth of the United States from the music of the colonies, the songs of Indians, the folk music that sprang from the songs of the people, the war songs, the ballads and so on. Among those having part are:

E. J. Stenson (Secretary's Office), Tommy Hampton and Palmer Byrd (Indian Office), Miss Julia Doster (Secretary's Office), Bob Mahoney (PWA), Mrs. Rose A. Sotter (Central Housing Commission), Miss Dorothea Lewis (Park Service), Evelyn Adams (General Land Office), Ian Forbes (Park Service), Miss Mary E. Watts (Housing Commission), and Mrs. Grace Ware (Park Service).

Notes:

The top dance tonight, among employes, is sponsored by the Indians of an A. F. G. E. lodge. To be held in the Raleigh Hotel and attended by a trainload of Congressmen, the ball is expected to be a very colorful affair. The hours are 10 to 1 . . . And tomorrow night the North Carolina Democratic Club of Washington holds its pre-Christmas dance at the Raleigh. The event is intended as a homecoming; with more than 700 members scattered throughout the Federal departments here, a genuine welcome is to be extended. On the welcoming committee will be: Mary Hoke (Senator Reynolds' office), Lucille Lennox (FHA), Kathleen Arrowood (FHA), Frank Kell (RFC), and Rena P. Hamilton (FSCC).

N. C. Representatives Invited to Club Dance

The North Carolina Representatives and their wives are expected to attend the pre-Christmas dance of the North Carolina Democratic Club of Washington at the Hotel Raleigh tomorrow evening.

Marion C. Sedberry is chairman of the entertainment committee, whose members include Mary Hoke, Lucille Lennox, Kathleen Arrowwood, Rena P. Hamilton and Frank Kell.

Hawaii Color Pictures To Be Shown Tonight

Colored motion pictures of Hawaii will be shown by George T. Armitage in a lecture before the National Geographic Society at Constitution Hall at 8:15 tonight.

The importance of sugar cane, pineapples, coffee and fish to the islands' economy will be revealed in films. Other pictures will show the recreational side of Hawaiian life.

Knife Attack Caused Killing, Ross Testifies

By Edward F. Ryan,
A Staff Correspondent.

Stafford Courthouse, Va., Dec. 2.—Walter L. Ross, 17-year-old former Marine, admitted today that he killed Elmer Davidson, attorney for the United States Chamber of Commerce, near Quantico, Va. He claimed he did so when Davidson attacked him with a knife after he refused to commit an unnatural act.

Ross' testimony contradicted an alleged confession obtained by Alexandria (Va.) police, in which Ross said he killed Davidson because the attorney refused to give him money after the act was committed.

He kept the slaying a secret, he testified, because he was "afraid of the consequences."

Wrestled With Lawyer.

"I was scared nearly to death," he said.

Frank P. Moncure, chief attorney for Ross, said tonight a psychiatrist will testify on the behavior of perverse persons.

His announcement followed a night session of court, which adjourned at 8:15 o'clock until tomorrow morning. Tonight's session was occupied with defense testimony by Ross' parents and his brother, James Bernard Ross.

The slaying, Ross said on the stand, climaxed a ride he hitchhiked from Washington to Quantico the night of October 3. He testified Davidson bought cigarettes for him and permitted him to drive the automobile and then, when they were near Quantico, took the wheel and drove to lonely Widewater road "to talk over a little matter."

There, the boy said, Davidson made a proposal, which he refused.

"Then I saw him take a knife from his pocket and start rubbing it against his hand," Ross told the jury.

"I was plenty scared, so I jumped out of the car and ran around it. He jumped out after me and caught me. We wrestled and I grabbed the knife and stabbed him in the breast. He fell on his back and I started to the car to get my coat and get away."

He had just thrust his right arm in the coatsleeve, he said, when he saw the wounded man struggle from the ground and lunge toward him. He drew the revolver from a pocket of the coat with his left hand and "blazed away."

When Davidson fell to the road, the youth became panicky, he said, threw the knife away, took Davidson's car and drove off. He denied a prosecution assertion that he rifled the dead man's pockets. A wrist watch which he admitted selling to a Baltimore pawnbroker he said was lying on the seat of the car with a flashlight.

"I didn't even know the man's name," he said, "until I read it in the newspapers."

"If you felt justified in killing him in self defense," asked Special Prosecutor W. W. Butzner, "why didn't you tell your father or your mother or some one else about it?"

"I was afraid of consequences. I was scared nearly to death."

Ross Starved, He Says.

Ross insisted the confession had been virtually dictated to him by Lieut. Edgar Simms, of the Alexandria police.

Ross charged that he had been starved into signing the confession.

Moncure late this afternoon brought three men to the stand to testify that Davidson had been widely known as morally degenerate. They were H. B. Rorrer, Alexandria bus driver, formerly stationed at Fort Myer; P. J. Getzie, Quantico taxi driver and former Marine; and Walter Schaaf, U. S. M. C.

Judge Coleman ordered the court room cleared, shortly after the second of the three witnesses took the stand. He ordered all minors out of the courtroom under threat of fine.

Walter J. Ross, the boy's father, and Mrs. Ross both testified that Sergt. E. J. McDermott, of Virginia State police and Maryland State Sergt. E. J. Peterson obtained the gun with which Davidson was killed from their home by representing themselves to be investigating the disappearance of several pistols from Quantico Marine Barracks.

James Ross, who is a private in the Marine Corps, and Corporal Charles Stroughton, of the Marines, said they knew nothing of Ross' suspected connection with the killing and that they had not been locked up or questioned. The prisoner previously had testified he signed a confession without reading it when he was told his brother and Stroughton had been questioned and had "talked plenty." Stroughton said Ross was not a "particular friend" of his. Further attacks on the character of Davidson were made through Joseph Sloan, a Marine, and Victor Menache, proprietor of a lunchroom and tourist camp near Quantico. Sloan testified he had seen Davidson several times near Quantico and had been offered money by the dead lawyer.

Menache said Davidson spent part of one night in a tourist cabin in his camp with two Marines.

Banking Head Assails Cost of Social Security

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—Orval W. Adams, president of the American Bankers Association, charged tonight the present Federal social security setup is "a special income tax on the public" and that the proceeds "are not being saved but spent."

His statement was made in a speech prepared for delivery before the New York Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, educational affiliate of the association.

Mining Congress Calls Labor Act 'Unworkable

By the Associated Press.

The American Mining Congress criticized yesterday the Wagner labor-relations act.

"The interests of the consuming public, of employes, employers and of capital are mutual and can be served best through the fullest measure of mutual cooperation," said a resolution adopted at the congress' annual convention.

"The Wagner labor-relations act, without question, has demonstrated its unworkable character and its impracticability as a means to this end."

By the United Press.

Boston, Dec. 2.—Federal narcotic agents late today seized opium and heroin valued at $100,000 in a Boston bank safety deposit box.

The seizure followed an 18-month investigation of activities of an international narcotic ring leading to arrests in Chicago, Baltimore, Washington and Dallas, according to United States Attorney Francis J. W. Ford.

The narcotics—25 large cans of pure opium and 1,000 grains of undiluted heroin—were deposited in the box October 13, 1936, by Moy You Dat, alias Chow Fook, according to Federal agents.

Manager of the Sun Huen Hank Co., Boston importers, Dat fled to China a year ago when a shipment of 20,000 heroin pills addressed to him was seized in Chicago, Ford said.

Federal agents also have traced a shipment of 300,000 opium pills to the Sun Huen Hank Co., and 180,000 more to the recently closed B. & B. laundry here.

Twenty-five Chinese, alleged members of this narcotic ring, which Ford described as perhaps the largest in the country, were under indictment in Chicago on charges of conspiracy to violate Federal narcotic laws.

The seizure was made by drilling into the safety deposit box upon permission from bank officials and Suffolk Superior Court, which previously had issued an injunction preventing opening of the box. Federal agents said permission was given because box-rent had been unpaid more than a year.

Meanwhile Federal agents continued search for two local Chinese alleged to be Dat's partners, and for another Chinese, a high official in a powerful Tong, reported to be the "master mind" of the international ring.

Florida Refuses To Extradite King

Tallahassee, Fla., Dec. 2 (AP).—The Governor's office refused permission to Maryland authorities today for the return of Edward A. King to face charges in Baltimore of not supporting his wife.

King and Mrs. Margaret Reeves, of Washington, are in a Miami hospital. They were found in a car unconscious from carbon monoxide. The gasoline tank had become empty and the motor had stopped.

Wallace's War On Crop Quotas Stirs Senators

Changes Forced in House Bill by Rampant Dairy Bloc.

lace's suggestions for processing taxes, and denied the Secretary's contention that the bill altered terms of the cotton loan and subsidy agreement.

But it was Senator Bankhead, whose cherished cotton-control plan is endangered by the Secretary's position, who opened the direct frontal attack on Wallace. He said Wallace never had favored compulsory control.

"Now, when we are in the midst of debate, after the bill has been unanimously reported by the committee, the Secretary comes along and talks to us like we didn't know anything about the South," he said.

"He's very, very strong on the subject of large supplies. He would have our granaries full and overflowing."

Warns of Bankruptcy.

He took issue with Wallace's protest against raising American prices out of line with foreign prices, and said:

"If any Senator from a cotton State wants 7½ cent cotton for farmers in order to increase exports, let him stand up here and now. If we produce 15,000,000 bales next year cotton will go to 5 cents and it will bankrupt the entire South."

Senator Josh Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, interrupted Bankhead once to say that if the President ever approved the Senate farm bill "it was when he had the toothache."

Earlier in the day, Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, took the floor to assail constitutionality of the Senate measure and to say Congress should be taking steps to halt the business recession instead of considering a measure that "will give no real benefit to the farmers."

Aimed at Subsidy.

In the House, Boileau succeeded over strong committee opposition in writing into the bill the amendment he said was aimed at "subsidizing" new Southern dairy competition. Under his amendment, farmers paid benefits for diverting acreage from production of major commodities could not use that acreage for pasturing herds. The diverted land could be used to grow products only for consumption "on the farm."

Vainly, Chairman Jones and Representative Hope, of Kansas, ranking committee minority member, contended the Boileau change was much broader than the Progressive's purpose called for. Jones said it would render soil conservation benefit payments to farmers uncertain, and deprive a farmer of benefits if a cow jumped the fence into the diverted acreage.

Representative R. Ewing Thomason, Texas Democrat, succeeded in amending the bill to provide a sliding base for cotton instead of a flat five-year base. A farmer would be allotted half of his acreage if he had grown cotton less than two years, instead of the one-fifth allotment he would have received if based on a five-year average.

The Ford amendment would make cotton acreage allotments on the same basis to all farmers within any State, instead of the bill's provision for setting up administrative areas by counties or parts of counties, with different allotment standards possible for each.

All of yesterday's votes were tentative in the sense that the House will have another opportunity to vote on each, after completing consideration of the bill.

Navy May Shoot At Craft Entering Restricted Zone

Ships and planes entering restricted areas near San Clemete Island, off the California Coast, where naval maneuvers are held, may be fired upon with justification, in the opinion of Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson.

"It would be far more advantageous to the United States to prevent an invasion of such an area than to punish the culprit after apprehension and conviction," read the statement, made public yesterday by Rear Admiral Gilbert ... Rowcliff, judge advocate general of the Navy.

"If the exigencies of the situation should demand, it is the opinion of the Secretary of the Navy," the document said, "that it would be both legal and proper to bombard a ship entering a forbidden zone if it persisted in going ahead after being duly warned . . . This conclusion applies also to the use of antiaircraft artillery in firing at aircraft flying above a forbidden zone which fails to obey immediately the warning that it is flying over such a zone."

GROWS NEW HAIR ON BALD SPOTS

The un-retouched photographs which appear below show how Thomas re-grew hair for Mr. George A. Parsley. Mr. Parsley says, "When I started Thomas treatment I had a number of bald spots on my scalp. My hair was dry and brittle and my scalp was covered with dandruff. After taking your treatment the dandruff has been eliminated, natural oil restored, and the bald spots completely filled with a new growth of hair." Mr. Parsley's hair-loss was caused by alopecia areata, one of the 14 local scalp ills which come within the scope of Thomas treatment.

Scalp Examination Free

More than a quarter-million persons have ended scalp worries by the reliable, proved Thomas method of treatment. For you, too, The Thomas' can overcome dandruff, stop abnormal hair-fall, and re-grow hair on thin and bald spots. No charge is ever made for complete scalp examination (in private) nor for consultation. Come in today and learn the truth about your hair and scalp.

Eleanor Holm Sued by Jarrett For a Divorce

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Dec. 2.—Art Jarrett, orchestra leader, charged today that Eleanor Holm's conduct "with another man" caused him to be "held up to public scorn and contempt" and asked the courts for a divorce.

Billy Rose, husband of Fannie Brice, actress, recently announced he and Miss Holm would be married when their current marital ties were cut.

Jarrett's complaint said his wife's being kicked off the 1936 Olympic team after a champagne party embarrassed him, too. Besides that, he said, once, when they were living on Long Island, N. Y., Miss Holm stayed out all night and next morning she could not remember where she had been.

281 Plane Motors Ordered by Army

Contracts for 281 aeronautical engines and spare parts, valued at approximately $2,491,819, were awarded yesterday by Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson.

At the same time Maj. Gen. Henry Gibbins, quartermaster general of the Army, announced that an order for 229 trucks, costing nearly $512,548, has been placed with the Yellow Truck & Coach Manufacturing Co., Detroit, Mich.

Two contracts for 238 aircraft engines and spare parts, totaling approximately $2,044,490, were awarded to the Wright Aeronautical Corporation, Paterson, N. J., and a third contract for 43 engines and parts, valued at nearly $447,329, was granted to the Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Division, United Aircraft Corporation, East Hartford, Conn.

Creech Perjury Trial Nearing Jury Decision

District Jail Head Denies Star Witness Was Given Beer and Narcotics.

Defense attorneys last night rested their case, and the Government replied with a few rebuttal witnesses, and the trial was given over to virtual executive session for arguments over instructions to be given the jurors by Justice Joseph W. Cox.

Stern denial that Richard C. Tackett, star prosecution witness, had been permitted to indulge in narcotics and beer while he was being detained in the District Jail awaiting the call of the La Follette subcommittee was barred from the record yesterday, though Thomas Rives, head of the District Jail, made a personal appeal to Justice Cox. Capt. Rives said he was afraid a certain portion of the public might believe "such things have been permitted to happen" at the jail.

Creech, son of a miner owner in "Bloody Harlan" County, Ky., is alleged to have approached Tackett in the corridor of the Senate Office Building, where he is alleged to have told Tackett he would see that he got from eight to ten years in jail in Kentucky when he returned. Creech has denied making the statement. At that time the subcommittee was investigating labor troubles in Kentucky.

Capt. Rives made his appeal to the court as a result of a sworn statement by Tackett that he had purchased the narcotics and beer while in the District Jail awaiting a Senate call. The statement by introduced by Creech's attorneys, and immediately after the defense attorneys closed their case yesterday Rives was called to the stand.

The statements attributed to Tackett and read into the record by Defense Attorney William E. Leahy were contained in a lengthy statement by Tackett concerning his life history.

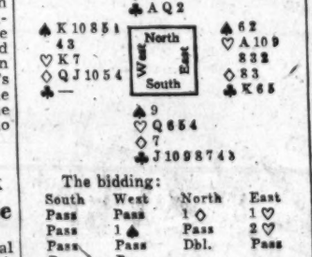
Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Too Much Traping.

Experts unanimously agree that a vulnerable team should not attempt to "trap" a nonvulnerable team in the bidding. With equal vulnerability conditions it is sound strategy to pass over an opposing bid with an excellent defensive hand, thus giving the opponents plenty of leeway in which to get into trouble. (Some inexperienced players seem to feel that such tactics are unsportsmanlike. This, of course, is absurd. It is completely ethical to lay in ambush for the opponents.) In the hand below, North attempted to trap the opponents but succeeded in trapping only himself.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	1 ♡
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡
Pass	Pass	Dbl.	Pass
Pass	Pass

North liked West's spade bid so much that he decided to remain quiet in the hope that East-West's bidding would go merrily forward and that he would have an opportunity to double two or three spades. This hope was absurdly optimistic; North must have thought he was playing against children. When East took out the spade bid to two hearts, which was passed by South and West, North found himself in a truly embarrassing position. He might have bid three diamonds of course, but there would be nothing constructive about such a bid—it would hardly elicit any action from his partner, and if the diamonds were stacked in one opponent's hand a sizable penalty might result. North was afraid to bid notrump with his singleton heart and, therefore, rather than be bilked entirely out of his "rock-crusher" he doubled. Technically, of course, this was a business double, although North hoped it would be construed by South as a takeout double. South, however, not dreaming that he would have a laydown game in clubs, felt that his two singletons and heart holding would certainly result in the defeat of two hearts. As a matter of fact, he was right—East-West did go down the terrific amount of one trick (100 points).

Considering that North-South had five clubs for game and rubber this was hardly satisfactory compensation. North should not have attempted to trap. He should have doubled one spade. This would have been a takeout double and South would have responded with his seven card club suit. Then it would not have been at all difficult to have reached the contract of five clubs.

Pump-Priming Fund Ruled Out By Morgenthau

$500,000,000 Is Sought To Pay Off Outstanding Obligations.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau yesterday apparently ruled out any "pump-priming" expenditures to stimulate business in the next two months.

He announced that the Treasury's financing program for the period made no provision for extraordinary expenses. This indicated the Administration, at least for the present, was supporting the position Morgenthau took in a November 10 speech against increased spending. He said business wanted and needed a balanced budget.

Backed by Roosevelt.

Since November 10, President Roosevelt has backed up Morgenthau publicly to the extent of asking Congress to reduce highway expenditures and by warning legislators that if the new farm bill increases Federal costs new taxes must be levied.

The Treasury will borrow more than $500,000,000 beginning December 15, but all of the proceeds, Morgenthau said, will be used to pay off maturing securities or to anticipate tax receipts for already-budgeted activities.

Spikes Inflation Rumors.

To confirm further the conservative nature of the Treasury's program, he also spiked rumors that inflationary spending of sterilized gold might be undertaken either to pay new expenses or to retire the maturing securities. If it chose to do so, the Treasury could issue gold certificates against some of the $1,242,000,000 in gold in its inactive fund, deposit the certificates in the Federal Reserve System and thus get spendable cash.

Morgenthau explained that $450,000,000 in short-term Treasury bills, which mature this month, and $277,000,000 worth of 2½ per cent Treasury notes, maturing February 1, would be paid off by the sale December 15 of $450,000,000 worth of new long-term security and by the sale of $50,000,000 worth of 90-day Treasury bills weekly. This weekly series will begin December 20 and continue for an indefinite period.

Policy Discontinued.

The Federal Reserve Board also revealed yesterday it discontinued last week—at least temporarily—its credit-stimulation program of buying Government securities.

The board's weekly condition statement for the Federal Reserve banks showed no purchases were made in the week ended December 1.

In the three preceding weeks the board bought $38,000,000 worth of Federal bills and notes for the purpose of making that much more money available to banks for lending. Such buying has been customary in the past to offset withdrawal of bank deposits for Christmas spending.

With this credit prop removed, the seasonal demand for increased money circulation and an increase in Treasury deposits caused the excess reserves, or supply of lendable money, in the Nation's banks to decline $20,000,000, to $1,120,000,000.

"I gave an ACTOR the cue to greatness in whiskey"

HE SAID
"I agree with you. Four Roses Whiskey is as smooth as a well-played scene and as rich as an old trouper's memories. But you haven't told me why this is so."

I SAID
"Look at it this way. Take the noblest tragedian, the most brilliant comedian, and the most stirring lover you've ever seen on the stage—and merge them all into one player. How would the result pan out?"

HE SAID
"A one-man show with an all-star cast!"

I SAID
"Right!...and that helps explain why Four Roses is such a glorious whiskey.

"To produce it, we select several superb straight whiskies. Each is outstanding for some special virtue—aroma, body, smoothness, or flavor.

"Then we take these straight whiskies (and nothing but straight whiskies!) and, with rare skill, blend the virtues of them all into one liquor renowned for every whiskey virtue. That's Four Roses—and I don't believe you'll find another whiskey to equal it!"

Il Duce Defies Intimidation By Trade Pacts

Italy's Arms Defy Attempt at 'Strangulation,' He Warns Democracies.

By the Associated Press.

Milan (Friday), Dec. 3.—Premier Benito Mussolini's Il Popolo D'Italia today informed the United States, Great Britain and France editorially that Italy would not be "intimidated" by economic agreements hostile to fascism.

The editorial was the second sarcastic attack on democracies published by the newspaper this week. Both were understood "to have come from Il Duce's pen.

Today's assault used an editorial of the New York Times as a springboard for an assertion that to a threat of economic war the only reply was "timely and wholehearted preparation of spirit and arms."

The Times editorial said there was no question of the three democracies employing military measures against dictatorships.

Italy Chooses "Iron."

"The Anglo-American commercial accord is the most recent example used to demonstrate the existence of other means besides military measures to defend peace," the editorial said.

(It was announced November 18 that the United States and Great Britain had agreed to negotiate for a reciprocal trade pact.

The Italian newspaper deprecated, however, the importance of economic resources in waging war.

"Between gold and iron, Machiavelli (Florentine diplomat and statesman of the fifteenth century) chose iron, and we stand with him. In a supremely idiotic dilemma—butter or cannon—we have made our choice—cannon."

The newspaper said the Times editorial constituted "an involuntary but formidable contribution to our battle for autarchy."

"Economic Strangulation."

(The New York Times in an editorial November 30 declared "the United States has lost its leadership in world affairs," because "treaty-breaking governments and dictators have become convinced that for no cause short of actual invasion will the United States initiate or join in any effective movement to assume world peace.")

(It suggested "effective peace measures" be taken to re-establish leadership, including private and public co-operation between Britons and Americans, and others.")

"What is fermenting in the fat bellies of the democracies as their program," Il Popolo d'Italia said, "is economic strangulation, asphyxiation, blockade and starvation for the poor who do not eat five times a day. In this they reveal profound cowardliness, because such form of combat affects helpless people more than combatants."

(Earlier in the week Mussolini's newspaper editorially expressed ironic "satisfaction" with the failure of the Brussels conference on the Chinese-Japanese conflict.)

Divorced Couples Plan Mate Trade

Oakland, Calif., Dec. 2 (AP).—A marital swap between two Sacramento couples appeared in prospect today upon the granting of divorces and subsequent application for marriage licenses for a change of partners.

Reno divorces separated Edward A. and Gladys Snook, and Ralph and Helen Clark. One marriage license application was filed in Sacramento by Ralph Clark and Mrs. Snook, the other in Oakland by Edward A. Snook and Helen J. Casey, the former Mrs. Clark.

Moran Is Accused Of 'Ride' Threats

Minneapolis, Dec. 2 (AP).—Frank Dorrance, a milk wagon driver, told a coroner's jury today that "Bugs" Moran, of Chicago, had threatened to take Patrick Corcoran "for a ride" about a year before the labor leader was assassinated November 17.

Dorrance said Corcoran told him Moran had seized him and driven him about town all one afternoon.

"They told him if he did not quit organizing milk and ice cream drivers they would take him for a ride," Dorrance said.

Mrs. Carol Brooks Wins Uncontested Divorce

Reno, Nev., Dec. 2 (AP).—Mrs. Carol N. Brooks, daughter of Truman H. Newberry, former Secretary of the Navy and former United States Senator from Michigan, won an uncontested divorce today on grounds of mental cruelty from Frank W. Brooks. They were married in 1912.

Delbos Carries British-French Pledge to Allies

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Dec. 2.—Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos headed for Warsaw tonight for the first of a series of visits to France's eastern and central European allies designed to bring them in line with Anglo-French efforts for a general diplomatic settlement with Germany.

Informed diplomatic sources said Delbos carried a joint Anglo-French guarantee to Poland and the Little Entente — Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania—that Germany would not be given a free hand in central Europe.

His swing about the continent was the third chapter of negotiations to set up a new European peace structure, following Anglo-German and Anglo-French discussions.

A source close to Delbos said the foreign minister was prepared to hear Poland's claims to equal rights with Germany for colonies because of her population problem.

Yugoslavia will be sounded on her relations with Italy and Russia, particularly on the likelihood of her adherence to the German-Italian-Japanese anti-Communist pact.

In Czechoslovakia, where Germany claims a special sphere of influence, Delbos sought "circumspect" treatment of the German minority in order not to give the Reich any "founded grievances."

Rumania, whose leaders were pictured by the French as turning toward Germany because of trade interests, was to receive assurances of Anglo-French economic sympathy.

From all four nations Delbos hoped to obtain renewed promises of support of their alliances with France in exchange for the assurance France and Britain did not plan to abandon them to Germany to gain local western settlement.

The French minister was reported carrying with him a none too warmly supported plan for a nine-power European security pact which Britain was said to be pushing as a "little League of Nations" for Europe.

'Tiger' Heads British Staff in Army Shake-up

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 2.—Maj. Gen. Viscount Gort, 51-year-old World War hero, tonight was named chief of the imperial general staff of the British army in what military circles considered a revolutionary shakeup of the high command.

Lord Gort was promoted to the rank of general. He succeeded Field Marshal Sir Cyril Deverell, who resigned. This was one of a series of drastic changes involving military members of the army council and their replacement by younger men.

Lord Gort, known as "the Tiger," was awarded the Victoria Cross, Britain's highest badge of valor, for carrying on his duties when wounded before Cambrai in 1918.

The changes came six months after Leslie Hore-Belisha became secretary for War.

The retiring Chief of Staff, Marshal Deverell, is 63 and one of Britain's outstanding tacticians. He was made field marshal and chief of staff only last year.

The other retiring members of the council were Gen. Sir Harry H. S. Knox, 64, adjutant general to the forces, and Lieut. Gen. Sir Hugh J. Elles, 57, master general of ordnance.

Knox is succeeded by Maj. Gen. C. C. Liddell, 54 years old.

Gen. Elles' duties will be assumed by Engineer Vice Admiral Sir Harold A. Brown, 59, who already is a member of the army council as director general of munitions, which title he retains.

Viscount Gort, sixth to bear that title, has had an almost unprecedented rise to the highest post in the British army. He reached the rank of major general in 1935. Since last September he had held the local rank of lieutenant general as military secretary to the secretary for war.

Poles Set Fire To Soviet Train; Search Crew

By the United Press.

Moscow (Friday), Dec. 3.—A Russian train was reported early today by the Tass (Soviet) News Agency to have been halted and set on fire in Polish territory after the engineer and conductor were removed and "brutally searched."

The Russian Ambassador in Warsaw was instructed to make a strong protest to the Polish Government and demand reparations. The date of the incident was not reported.

The Tass Agency said the train, enroute to Poland, was halted near the small town of Dolbruni, just across the frontier.

Train Surrounded.

Tass said the train was surrounded by an "escort" at the Polish station and the entire train crew was "subjected to a humiliating personal search, even to undressing."

The oiler khinschuk, who attempted to resist, was beaten, the agency asserted.

Polish authorities then placed the entire crew into one car, and the train proceeded to Mogilyany en route to the Soviet frontier, Tass said.

Fire Breaks Out.

A local Polish switchman handed a passenger in the car a can, after which fire broke out in the train, Tass said. Polish agents reportedly attempted to force the Soviet engineer to proceed with the flaming train into Russian territory.

"But the engine driver, sacrificing his own safety, uncoupled the burning car," Tass said.

'Flannel Foot,' Scotland Yard Bane, Sentenced

London, Dec. 2 (AP).—The man whom prosecuting counsel styled the phantom "flannel foot" burglar, who eluded Scotland Yard for 25 years, was sentenced today to five years' penal servitude for burglary.

E. J. P. Cussen, counsel for the prisoner, Henry Williams, arrested a month ago, protested against the designation. He said "'Flannel Foot,' whoever he may be, is not in this court."

Prosecuting Counsel Christmas Humphreys said Williams, who pleaded guilty, was the ghostlike "flannel foot—who usually wore flannel socks over his shoes."

George Cohan's Ex-Wife Asks Divorce From Flier

London, Dec. 2 (AP).—Ethel Levey, American-born actress and former wife of George M. Cohan, today filed a petition for divorce from Claude Grahame-White, pioneer British aviator and member of Parliament.

Miss Levey was born November 22, 1881, in San Francisco. Her marriage to Cohan was dissolved in 1907 and she married Grahame-White in 1916.

Postmen Begin Taking National Hog Census

By the Associated Press.

Postmen who recently helped take a census of the unemployed turned to pig counting yesterday. They will leave "pig census cards" in the mail boxes of 750,000 hog-raisers the country over.

The object is to determine the number of hogs to be raised for next year's market. The findings may indicate whether pork prices will be higher or lower.

Chinese Dig Coffins, Sell Boards for Fuel

Shanghai, Dec. 2 (AP).—The fuel shortage has become so acute in Shanghai that Chinese are digging up coffins in the surrounding countryside and selling the wood for fuel in the city. Today's price for coffin wood was 3 cents a bundle.

light artillery company with guns strapped on horsebacks followed the first infantry battalion.

The route of the parade was about 6 miles.

A Japanese Embassy official described the parade as "transfer of troops" from Jessfield to Hongkew. Foreign Settlement authorities had protested unofficially against the massed demonstration as "unwise," in view of the bitter anti-Japanese feeling among the Chinese.

Two British motorcycle policemen led the procession. Six Japanese cavalrymen followed with a truck bearing an antiaircraft gun after them. The first infantry company carried full equipment and marched three abreast.

The parade entered the Settlement proper at 11:30 a. m.

In the vanguard was also a double battery of .75's and soldiers carrying heavy air-cooled machine guns. Many infantrymen were bearded after the Shanghai campaign, although Japanese troops seldom wear beards at home.

Additional thousands of Japanese civilians carrying flags were scattered along the route toward the heart of the city.

Paper Claims Raid On Tardieu Barred

Paris (Friday), Dec. 3 (U.P.).—The newspaper Echo de Paris said today that Interior Minister Marx Dormoy had ordered police to search the apartment of former Premier Andre Tardieu, who had been mentioned in the investigation of the "hooded men" terrorists, but that Premier Camille Chautemps had countermanded the order.

Earlier, secret police announced they had tracked down, in two surprise raids, the first munitions factories operated by the "hooded men."

By Dint Of Logrolling.

According to reports, a number of Congressmen were induced by threatened reprisals to sign the petition that dislodged the wages-and-hours bill from the House Rules Committee. Advocates of the measure are said to have told Representatives from Southern rural districts that if they persisted in following obstructionist tactics, the farm program might be blocked.

Even Chairman Norton, of the House Labor Committee, hinted that there might be trouble if the required number of signatures to the discharge petition were not obtained. She added, moreover, that she appeared to be "in the minority" in her opposition to voting by blocs.

No doubt vote swapping is as old as legislative bodies and within limits it need not be harmful. On the contrary, it may at times expedite passage of useful legislation when no fundamental issues are involved. But in the present instance, it seems the height of legislative irresponsibility for Congressmen to dicker over bills that raise economic and constitutional issues of the utmost gravity.

It does not follow, of course, that all those whose voted to bring the wages-and-hours bill to the floor of the House for discussion are committed to voting for it. But if rumors are to be believed, many of the signers of the petition have bargained away their right to register an independent judgment on a proposal that is of vital concern to all classes and all sections of the country.

Particularly discouraging is the widespread assumption that the wages-and-hours bill is a sort of companion piece to the farm bill. The impression conveyed by stories of legislative trading is that these two measures supplement each other—the one providing benefits for industrial workers in the towns and cities; the other, aid for agricultural workers. This attitude reveals a discouraging absence of that critical spirit of inquiry which should provide safeguards against hasty passage of economically unsound and administratively infeasible plans for governmental regulation of industry and agriculture.

M. Delbos Takes To The Road.

Assured by British statesmen during the recent exchange of views at London that the Anglo-French entente remains firm, despite Britain's eagerness to come to terms with Germany, Foreign Minister Delbos can now continue his tour of allied capitals with a great load off his mind. During the next fortnight he plans to visit Warsaw, Bucharest, Belgrade and Prague in an effort to re-cement the alliances with the Little Entente nations and Poland and consider with them what steps should be taken to pacify Europe.

M. Delbos' task would have been made extremely difficult if Great Britain had decided to disinterest itself completely in central European affairs, as an important group of Englishmen have long been urging their government to do. During recent years France's position in Europe has been considerably weakened as a result of the remilitarization of the Rhineland, the newfound isolation of Belgium, the creation of the Berlin-Rome axis and other developments. But these diplomatic losses have, so far as France is concerned, been offset in no small measure by the increasing intimacy of the relations with Great Britain.

Regardless of the weakness displayed by the great European democracies from time to time, they still constitute a far more formidable combination than the Fascist bloc. As long as Great Britain and France stand together, therefore, the pull exerted by Rome and Berlin on the small nations of central and eastern Europe can, in large degree, be neutralized.

It is not yet clear whether and to what extent Great Britain is prepared to play an active role in regions east of the Rhine. But it is apparent that the Chamberlain government does not intend to throw Austria or Czechoslovakia to the wolves as part of a bargain with Hitler. The British, however, do seem to favor reasonable concessions by the Danubian states to Germany.

What such concessions could be is not very clear. Nor is it certain that Hitler would be appeased by anything less than a free hand in central Europe. But at any rate M. Delbos is now in a position to find out for himself what Czechoslovakia and the other French allies are thinking.

The fact of the matter is that France's postwar alliances, except that with Belgium, have managed somehow to survive periods of considerable pressure from the outside no less than differences from within.

Civil Service Problems.

In a report prepared for the Brookings Institution Dr. Lewis Meriam has presented a very strong case against the proposal to abolish the Civil Service Commission and transfer its functions to a single administrator. He concludes that a one-man adminstrator would not be able to attract as much public confidence and support as a board or commission. That alone would handicap a lone official even if he were a thoroughly competent and unprejudiced individual.

However, Dr. Meriam points out that there are some very strong positive objections to the single administrator which help to explain and justify an attitude of public distrust. He might, for instance, be unduly influenced by partisan and religious affiliations, or by sectional interests and personal prejudices. Similar criticism might be brought against any proposal to substitute a one-man agency for a board or commission. However, it applies with special force to the present case, since the first duty of the agency administering the civil service laws is to fight favoritism in appointment and promotion.

While fully conscious of the shortcomings of the present arrangement, Dr. Meriam does not recommend any drastic changes in the composition, status or functions of the Civil Service Commission. He does, however, emphasize the importance of keeping the commission, as far as possible free from political control and he suggests that it should have more adequate funds to improve and expand its work.

One of the most constructive parts of the report deals with the problem of dismissals and promotions within the civil service. At present the commission exercises almost no control over such matters. There are frequent and loud complaints, as a result, that favoritism, political and personal, rather than individual merit, plays a large part in determining who shall be hired and fired.

Admitting the existence of abuses, Dr. Meriam nevertheless believes that a system of competitive examinations cutting across organization unit lines might provide a remedy worse than the disease. Many factors required for success in the upper positions, he maintains, can be evaluated only by operating officials acquainted with the work of their subordinates.

A suggestion is made, however, that the Civil Service Commission could go farther than it now does in investigating nominations for promotion. Then, if evidence of improper influence were discovered, it could order a competitive examination to be held. In other words, it is contended that honest, able and efficient administrators should be free to use their ability and efficiency in selection of candidates for promotion while brakes and controls should be applied to administrators who abuse the privileges of office.

So long as we cling to the idea that to the victor belongs the spoils, the usefulness of any civil service agency will be severely limited. Dr. Meriam's awareness of that fact is shown by the significant order of his proposed remedies of defects in the existing set-up. His first recommendation is that the permanent administrative structure of the National Government shall be recognized as the people's service, and not the service of the party in power at the moment.

"Until this conception is applied to its logical limits," we are told, "it is idle to talk of career services, because selection by merit and permanence of tenure, so long as efficiency is maintained, are the minimum essentials for a genuine career service."

With real support for the basic principles of the merit system once established, the logical net step would be, as suggested, to extend the provisions of the civil service laws to cover all but a very few policy-making positions. Under these conditions, there would be little cause to worry about the kind of administrative machinery set up to enforce the civil service laws.

A Thorough Health Survey.

In the confusion of criticism and defense currently swirling about Gallinger Hospital, great value may be attached to a calm and competent appraisal of that municipal institution's difficulties. Fortunately, the United States Public Health Service is preparing to make an investigation at the invitation of the District Commissioners.

The expense to the District will be virtually nil. The Public Health Service stands always ready to make surveys for local authorities. Indeed, the Federal health officers, will, if requested, make a complete inquiry into Washington's public health status. They will even go so far as to make specific recommendations as to the financial needs of the entire District Health Department, if requested. That is precisely the sort of investigation the District needs. In view of the current demands for more effective public health and the comparative indifference of Congress, it is strange that the Commissioners have not previously taken advantage of this service.

Not since 1929 has the District had a complete check on its public health machinery. At that time, the so-called Preble report made several recommendations for the improvement of Washington's health. Unfortunately, due largely to budget restrictions, few of the suggestions have been put to practice, except the transfer of municipal hospital administration from the Board of Public Welfare to the local Health Department.

Doubtless many of the neglected proposals would reappear in a new report, along with suggested solutions for the problems which have developed since 1929. If accompanied by itemized financial recommendations urged by Federal experts, Congress and the Budget Bureau could scarcely ignore these urgent improvements a second time. The Commissioners cannot too quickly enlist the aid of the Public Health Service in the campaign to expose the disgraceful neglect of health in Washington.

Without A Leg To Stand On.

Criticism of the Senate farm bill was scarcely expected from Secretary Wallace. It had been generally assumed that there had been a meeting of minds between the Senate Agriculture Committee and those officials who control the Administration's farm policy. But apparently that was not the case. Since Mr. Wallace has added his objections to widespread denunciation of the bill, Congress ought to recognize, with no further waste of time, the impossibility of passing a satisfactory measure in the extra session.

There has been a great deal of skepticism over Secretary Wallace's ever-normal granary plan. Some careful students of agricultural economics believe it to be unworkable. Others fear that it might be effective enough to put the United States at a serious disadvantage in the exportation of farm crops. Until a few days ago the question before the country was whether the Wallace plan to raise farm incomes would be worth what it would cost in terms of restricted liberties and smaller exports. Almost no one had thought of going further than that. With even Mr. Wallace now beseeching Congress for moderation, the farm bill is left without a leg to stand on.

Specifically, the Secretary of Agriculture believes the Senate bill to be "more restrictive than necessary." Mr. Wallace would let substantial reserves of basic commodities accumulate before invoking coercive marketing quotas. The Senate bill severely limits granary reserve supplies, apparently because its sponsors wish to see farm prices maintained at high levels. In Mr. Wallace's opinion that would result in application of the quota system during "most years" and in boosting cotton prices above the world price level, with an adverse effect upon exports.

Mr. Wallace's own system is bad enough. When his plan is distorted by efforts to raise the prices of basic farm crops out of all relation to world supply and demand factors the bill becomes intolerable. Some observer unfamiliar with the ways of American politics might consider it a conspiracy to deprive farmers of their export markets by first divesting them of control over their own farms. But it is more likely just a muddle-headed effort to achieve the impossible by enacting a law, with little regard for the consequences.

Chairman Smith of the Senate Agriculture Committee greeted Secretary Wallace's repudiation of the bill with an "I told you so." His complaint that "much more time should have been devoted to such an important measure" is too obvious to need emphasis. Apparently even the farm leaders of the Senate are skeptical over their handiwork. For Congress to enact the bill under these circumstances would be a lasting reproach to its judgment.

As a matter of course, the bill should be sent back to the Senate Agriculture Committee. And the Senate might well instruct that body to keep any new farm measure within the cost of the present program, to abandon all coercive methods and to eliminate provisions tending to produce artificial prices or crop shortages that would increase the farmer's disadvantages in foreign markets.

Saluting In The Schools.

Reversing the trend in other courts, a Federal District judge in Philadelphia has ruled that public school officials may not expel children for refusal to salute the flag because of religious convictions. This is a welcome vindication for the sect known as Jehovah's Witnesses which deems saluting a form of obeisance due only the Almighty. Perhaps, too, it will put an end to the unseemly publicity to which several children of the sect throughout the country have been subjected, including a sextet in nearby Oxon Hill.

The judge held that public officials have no right to determine whether an individual's acts are based on religious grounds. So long as those acts do not affect the public safety, health or morals and do not interfere with personal or property rights, the court concluded, they do not justify exclusion of children from the public school system. The logic seems altogether reasonable. The only wonder is that any board of education needed reassurance from the courts before working out a solution for this relatively simple problem in child management.

Claiming that a lipstick contained impurities which damaged her lips to the extent that she no longer can enjoy a kiss, a Chicago woman is suing the manufacturer for $10,000. It's beside the point, but when the same effect is caused by accumulated years, there is, alas, no recourse.

How in the world did our grandparents manage to live without so many things we can't possibly get along without?

In Colorado, a man broke into his neighbor's house at night, bound him with a rope and gave him a severe lashing with a horse whip. It is fervently hoped the authorities will apprehend and punish this guilty person to the full extent allowed by law. In this country the Japanese method of self-defense must not be tolerated.

Urges Maxwell Clemency.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: After reading the letters in The Post concerning Edith Maxwell I wish to add my sympathy in her behalf, as seemingly she has been a victim of persecution, if newspaper reports have been correct.

I do not know Edith or her family except what I saw in the newspapers, which led me to believe this girl was tyrannized by an alleged "drunken father." I have known and heard so much of good women and children being tyrannized all over the country by fathers who become fiends when filled with liquor that my sympathy has been aroused.

I hope the good women of Virginia will continue their appeal to our Governor and hope he may see his way clear to exercise executive clemency and free this poor girl so she may begin life over again on a higher plane and yet be a useful citizen. (MRS.) F. M. HANEY.

A Fable.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Once there was an old farmer who lived in a quaint dell. One warm early spring morning he looked through a crack in the rear barn door and saw a crow in the barnyard, surrounded by a flock of chickens. This farmer hated crows. So he hurried to the house and got his old blunderbus. Returning to the barn he shoved the muzzle of the gun through the crack and shot at the crow.

As the smoke cleared he saw he had killed not only the crow but a dozen chickens as well. To add to his troubles, he also saw that the gun wad had set fire to some straw. The fire jumped to the strawstack and then to the barn.

When the conflagration was over the farmer went into the desolated barnyard and picked up the charred remains of the crow. He said to his wife with him, "It is just as I planned it. I aimed to kill that crow, and I did."

One of his neighbors, a retired professor of ornithology, dropped in just at this time. The professor examined the crow and said its Latin name was "non distribit profitibus." AESOP II.

Query To New Dealers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What has become of those garrulous New Dealers who a short while back were talking so much about the "last depression?" Maybe they could tell us how long the Roosevelt depression will last.

And for those who were so loud in their criticism of the do-nothing policy of the last administration. I would suggest a trip to Capitol Hill, where they can get a ring-side view of a rubber-stamp Congress fiddling while business burns and more people lose their jobs every day. I. C. GARY.

Washington, Nov. 29.

Jewish Organization.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of November 29 are news articles containing write-ups of the "700 delegates representing 4,000,000 American Jews" meeting here to "create a unified bloc of 4,000,000 American Jews" to "counter-balance other organized racial groups existing in this country" for the purpose of having the United States of America "speak that friendly word of intercession which may yet avert the destruction of Jewish life in eastern and central Europe."

It seems to me that we better mind our own business. We have enough "oppressed" right here and enough problems of our own to take care of without meddling in the domestic affairs of "eastern and central Europe." It is quite enough for us to be our brother's keeper here and "avert anti-Semitism" here.

We also have enough religious and racial blocs without the organization of any more. There certainly is nothing democratic in any such solidarities. What we need is less of such and more of nothing but Americanism. If anti-Semitism is on the increase here it is because of just such racial cohesiveness.

Mr. Schmidt's Words.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post of November 24 in reporting a meeting at the Washington Sanitarium in honor of Drs. Daniel H. Kress, Maynard S. Bourdeau, Owen S. Farrett and Virgil O. Parrett made me responsible for saying things that I did not say.

In my address reference was made to a brief that had been prepared and presented by the allied organization to the District School Board and which is now being printed for the information of those interested in a wider observance of the law requiring that the evil effects from the use of narcotics be taught in the public schools of Washington. At no point in my very brief address was any mention made of the District Commissioners or any intimation given that said brief would ever be presented to the Commissioners.

Another, but less serious error, was the statement attributed to me to the effect that Dr. Kress began his lecture work in the public schools in 1880. The correct year is 1908.

Presidential English.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A professor says President Roosevelt doesn't use good English. Some of my friends say that he smokes like a woman. What will be next?

J. E. GRAHAM.

Washington, Nov. 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your interpolated note in Prof. Aiken's letter to President Roosevelt, in which she criticizes his faulty English (The Post of November 23), you base your implied condemnation of her sentence, "And then repetition," on a supposed rule that is entirely too narrow. In fact, I doubt that any grammar gives the rule as stated in your note.

I recall that our teacher in Ohio, many years ago, drew up several rules to supplement the two dozen or so that were in Harvey's Grammar which we used at a textbook. One of the supplemental rules ran thus: "Every sentence or a clause should contain a verb, expressed or implied."

In Prof. Aiken's sentence, the verb is plainly implied and the meaning unmistakable. Such sentences are said to be elliptical. Our teacher used one each morning after the opening Bible reading and prayer when he would say: "And now to our lessons," influenced perhaps (as I have thought since) by Pepys' well-known expression in his diary, "Now to the news of the day."

Rules and grammars, too, have gone out of use in the schools these days. However, some of the guides to correct diction discuss and exemplify these elliptical sentences.

Francis K. Ball, in his "Constructive English" (sec. 347), says: "When the meaning is made clear by the context, a portion of a sentence is often omitted. Such an omission is called an ellipsis, and the sentence is said to be elliptical." (Note that he calls the elliptical expression a sentence.)

He gives numerous examples. Some omit the verb (predicate): "Nobody (is) at home." Some omit the subject: "(I) Thank you." Some omit both: "(It is) Impossible."

Literature is full of such sentences and they need no defense so long as they meet the condition expressed in the rule by Ball.

History Repeating?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is 19.4-18 history repeating itself? British diplomats are at the moment beating a conspicuous path between London and Washington with the evident purpose of inducing the United States to once again pull the British chestnuts out of the Mediterranean and Far Eastern fire. Realizing that she herself is militarily impotent to cope with Mussolini's position of military advantage in the former area and that it would be economically suicidal for her to interfere with Japan's objective regarding China, her scheming diplomats—knowing the benevolent disposition of the Government of these United States to come to the help of the underdog—have graciously offered "to help the United States in her attempt to bring the 'aggressors' to terms."

Very generously they are promising to "back" Uncle Sam in the attempt on condition that he take the initiative, and why should our Uncle Sam not yield to Britain's importunity? Is she not our mother country? Suppose she had not wrested the New Netherlands at one time in American history from the clutch of greedy old Father Knickerbocker. Where would we be today? Uncle Sam would now be a Dutchman instead of carrying the royal blood of British crowned robbers in his blood.

Let us be grateful for all she has done for her American offspring by going to her rescue in this time of sore distress. We have the gold; we have an abundance of cannon fodder ready for adventure, and besides it would tremendously mitigate our own unemployment problem. What greater considerations do we need?

Suggested Reorganization Of District

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is now and for many years there has been much discussion in the District of Columbia in favor of giving the bona fide citizens of the District the right to vote and be represented in the Congress.

There have been several forms of government for the District provided by the Congress.

In 1846 the Congress retroceded to Virginia all that part of the District that had been ceded by Virginia, leaving its boundaries as they are now.

In 1871, a so-called territorial form of government was provided consisting of a governor, a board of public works, a legislative assembly consisting of a council of 11 members and a house of delegates of 22 members. The latter and a delegate to Congress were elected by the people. This lasted until June 20, 1874, when the Congress provided for a temporary commission form of government which was made permanent on June 11, 1878, and still exists. So for nearly 60 years the District has been disfranchised, either purposely or by accident or carelessness on the part of the Congress.

I have two suggestions to make.

1. Let the Congress place the District under a territorial form of government, similar to that of Alaska, with a governor to be appointed by the President for four years, and with a house and senate and administrative officers elected by the voters, and a competent judiciary appointed by the President. Or,

2. Let the Congress retrocede to the State of Maryland all that part of the District lying north of a line starting at the Key Bridge and K street, thence east on K street to Florida avenue, thence southeast on Florida avenue to Benning road thence southeast on Benning road to the District line.

A new county in Maryland could be created of the ceded territory be attached to Montgomery and Prince George counties, and everybody live happily thereafter.

Discovery.

I FOUND a village.

The main arteries of travel no longer lead to Palmyra. The advancement of a fast-moving populace forced the village from view of the improved highway. To get to it now you must detour, and therein lies its enchantment.

* * *

Mrs. Haden has a rambling old house which has been in its place for over 100 years. The new highway goes directly in front of the lawn, where huge trees have grown for many long years.

Directly across the road is a high hill where sits the county courthouse. Alongside Mrs. Haden's there is an old hotel, not much larger than her home. Up the road a bit is the village drug store—at least I took it for such. Then there is a garage operated by a mechanic in a small way, for repairs only. Beyond that a large garage and automobile showroom.

That is Palmyra as it appears upon approaching the place on the principal highway south to Bremo, Upper James River plantation designed by Jefferson. But there is more to Palmyra than meets the eye of the autoist passing by.

On a recent visit Mrs. Haden asked if I would like to see the courthouse. She said, "We're very proud of our courthouse. I'm sure you would like to go through it."

She called to her grandson, "Ivan, go to the sheriff's and get me the courthouse keys."

When he returned Mrs. Haden and I crossed the road and started up the hill to the show place of Palmyra. And, it developed, it is really a grand one.

As we neared the top of the hill I called out, "What's all that!" She laughed and replied, "Why, that's Palmyra." And, sure enough, there was the village—a row of perfectly matched red brick two-story buildings, along a road slightly narrower than the main highway.

I said it looked like a town out of a Montgomery Ward or Sears-Roebuck catalogue. She looked rather sad then and explained that about ten years ago the village, composed of wooden buildings, mostly three stories in height, had been completely destroyed by fire.

"It was late at night and it was a spectacular sight. No one was hurt, thank the Lord, but our familiar town was swept away. We'll go down there after a bit. Let's go into our courthouse, which was built over 100 years ago. Of course it's been repainted a number of times, but it's exactly the same in every other respect."

* * *

We entered. You could visualize the townspeople seated in the heavy chairs, which faced the railing in front of the dais. It was easy to "see" the austere judge listening to the testimony of witnesses as they answered questions fired at them by attorneys. The latter appeared to pace back and forth along the railing in front of the jurors while pleading for acquittal or asking for the extreme penalty for the defendant.

"That's my uncle, now dead, who was clerk in this courtroom for more than 40 years. He raised me when I became orphaned at a very tender age. I loved him." And there were other pictures of men who are often talked about by the parents and grandparents of Fluvanna County.

We started down into the village proper. It was deserted this Sunday. The only thing to be heard was a murmur of voices coming from a dilapidated building with strong iron bars on the windows—the jail. Mrs. Haden explained that the inmates were mainly drunks who were brought in from about the county. When we reached the main street there was the town proper with its familiar village stores, garages, another hotel and gas pumps.

The hotels, I was told, were supported by the visiting attorneys, circuit judges, witnesses and occasional traveling salesmen. It was apparent the county's courthouse was the heart-pump of Palmyra.

* * *

We started back up the hill, and I looked once again at the village, nestling complacently. As we dropped down the hill again to the main highway, I glanced back over my shoulder and it was gone. Lost again.

Ahead was Progress, gradually building a new Palmyra, with Sunday travelers driving up for lunch, ice cream and gasoline. If it keeps up, another pump will be needed at the new garage.

JACK KAY BURNESS.

. . . Whose Ox Is Gored

A Communist agitator rode into Hyde Park and, after leaning his bicycle against the railing, mounted a soap box and proceeded to address the crowd.

"If your family is hungry," he shouted, "raid a shop and take food for them, and don't care what anybody says. If your wife hasn't got a coat, pick the best fur coat you can see and ignore the consequences."

After several more minutes in this strain, he dismounted from his soap box and his next words were:

"Where's the scoundrel who took my bike?"

Invitation To Disaster.

NEW YORK, the smart city, is fixing to solemnize a great theater disaster one of these gala evenings, to be followed, no doubt, by a triple probe and more stringent regulations of the conduct of those gay, irresponsible drunks, male and female, who strike matches and fire up cigarette lighters during the show and smoke cigarettes all over the place during the intermissions.

PEGLER.

The wonder is that the panic hasn't happened up to now, for the city firemen assigned to enforce regulations for the safety of the customers seem absolutely indifferent to risks which keep theater managers in a constant state of fright and which, combined with the nuisance of smelly, chattering alcoholics, undoubtedly have driven some trade away from the box office.

The firemen, members of the regular Fire Department, are supposed to be present in their official capacity, not as guests, and they have authority to call the cops and prosecute. The regulations are based on disasters of the past and on the knowledge that a little flame, a whiff of smoke from a burning carpet or a cry of "Fire!" may start a stampede.

The old admonition to look about for the exit lights and, in case of commotion, to walk, not run, to the nearest door is still presented amid the clutter of ads and credit lines in the program, but it is only a perfunctory nod to tragic experience in view of the fact that firemen on duty permit the customers to strike lights to read the lineup. Ushers sometimes put in a word against the practice, but they are poor flunkeys without authority, and the man who is running the show does nothing, out of respect for the absurd dictum that the customer is always right, even though he burn down the house.

THE BOSS MAY, if he feels tough enough about it to make a fight, call a cop in from the sidewalk and make the complaint himself, but no showman wants to be a martyr in a suit for false arrest or kick up a row with some well known town inebriate while his show is going on.

So the responsibility is passed along to the city fireman, who is ballyhooed from time to time in rotogravure pictures of his acrobatics in the training school and who is assigned to the theater on full pay (an easy job for a loafer) to enforce certain plain, simple ordinances which are not arguable. The firemen, however, have been so tolerant or indolent for years that small liberties have grown into confirmed customs, and little fires blink among the audiences, particularly on opening nights, to the horror of all who have not had the foresight to get drunk and regardless, too.

The risk is worst when the show is on. Women wear flimsy costumes, and one unfortunate wench was ignited in a lobby one night, being saved when well ablaze by some resourceful buck who wrapped his dinner jacket about her. You go ahead and imagine what might have happened, though, if she had burst into flame from stem to, let us say, stern while reading the program by the light of a gasoline torch in the midst of the audience with the lights out.

• • • •

SOMETHING very bad has happened to the theater audience in New York, anyway. It is, say, 80 per cent decent, but the peace, comfort and safety of the majority who go to the shows are violated by an element of rum pots of both sexes who come staggering in late, crawl over their betters to reach their seats, carry on their alcoholic babble above the reading of unhappy hams on the platform, and play with fire when in such a state that their own breath would burn like a blow torch.

The theater has searched its conscience earnestly for faults and found many in the writing, casting, acting and scenery, but one of these nights some smart showman, either on the stage or in the house, will become a public hero by gouging a firebug out of the audience and with a firm, accurate punt in the pants kick him or her all the way up the aisle and across the lobby into the street.

There seems to be no hope of any preventive work by the firemen. Their job is to visit with the ushers, to dig out the bodies after the panic.

Interview With a Member of a Radio Audience Stooge.

"Good morning, Mr. Miggle."

"Ha! Ha! Ha! That's good! Ho! Ho!"

"I said 'good morning.'"

"Ho! Ho! Tee hee! Ha! Ha! Ha! Splendid!"

"I haven't said anything amusing, Mr. Miggle."

"Ha! Ha! I know it, but that's all right. He! He! You're killing me."

"But there's nothing to laugh at."

"There might be. I take no chances."

"You mean, Mr. Miggle, that you laugh just in case?"

"That's it. Laugh and the radio comic laughs with you; weep and you don't get into any more broadcasts."

• • • •

"I begin to understand, Mr. Miggle, why you are in such demand by our leading radio comics. How long have you been in those professional audiences?"

"Only three or four years, but it seems forever. Ha! Ha!"

"How did you come to be so successful at it?"

"I'm a natural laugher. As a child I had a nervous affliction that made me giggle at the least sound. I never really got over it. Nothing has to be really funny or even mildly amusing. I go into stitches over anything."

• • • •

"Do these radio comics rehearse you for laughs?"

"Oh, no. They take laughs anywhere."

"But suppose the laughs come in the wrong place?"

"And that doesn't count! Now, Mr. Miggle, I noticed these studio audiences just explode with hilarity after every gag the comedian or his assistants pull, no matter how pointless."

"We don't pay any attention to the gag as a gag. In fact, I'll let you in on something. I'm deaf."

"You don't hear these radio script jokes?"

"No."

"No wonder you laugh. You're certainly lucky. Are many other members of these stooge audiences deaf?"

"Nearly all, I think. You don't have to be deaf to get in, though. They'll admit you if you can prove you have no sense of humor, don't listen very hard or are not quite right mentally. I know one man who is rated as tops in stooge audiences. He has a standing bet with a friend that no radio comedian will spring a new joke. In five years he has never lost yet. Boy, can he laugh!"

• • • •

"Mr. Miggle, doesn't it ever occur to the stooge audiences that the real radio audiences recognize that there is no occasion for laughter?"

"Oh, yes, we all know the public must be wise to us."

"But how about the radio comedians, the script authors, the advertising agency, and the sponsor who pays real money?"

"They don't seem to care. Ha! Ha! Ha! Tee hee! Ho! Ho! Haw! Haw! Haw!"

"Do you mind if I join in your laughter, Mr. Miggle?"

"Not at all."

(They laugh.)

London Letter

England Doubts Serious Commitment By Halifax; General Election In Prospect; Londoners Washing Against Typhoid.

By David Wills.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

LORD MAHOMET HALIFAX went to see Mah Mountain Hitler. The result was a speech by Hitler in Germany, an uninformative silence by the government in England. The visit is said to have lasted an hour and a half, which would allow 85 minutes for Hitlerian declamation and an odd 5 minutes for Halifax. So it is supposed that we cannot have commited ourselves to much.

There's a further reason for this supposition. Halifax's visit was arranged behind the back of the foreign minister, Anthony Eden, who was strenuously opposed to it. For a time we had in fact two flatly contradictory stories about the proposed visit, with London, meaning Chamberlain, Hoare, et al., saying he would go, and Brussels, meaning Eden at the Brussels Conference, saying he would not.

It is supposed that Eden consented to the visit on condition, first, that Halifax did nothing but explore the ground and possibly invite von Neurath over to talk with Foreign Office, and second, that Halifax, on his return, should report direct to Eden.

Hitler's speech immediately after his talk with Halifax was a puzzler. Germany is to shout louder and louder for colonies; she is to continue with the four-year plan, and demonstrate that in spite of every personal effort it is impossible for her to live without colonies; and maybe in six years' time she will be getting them.

Hitler's Talk Queer Philosophy for Nazis.

THIS WAS queer talk for a Nazi. Six years off is almost twice the lifetime of the Nazi regime. Some commentators here argue that despite its blustering tone; the speech was meant in fact to play down the colonies issue. It is suggested that Halifax's mission may have been merely to say that Britain would like to get closer to Germany, and has no intention of joining a rigid military alliance against her, but that if Hitler wants to discourage the British, and particularly the Conservatives, he can find no quicker way than to shout about returning colonies.

It is argued that this may not have been unwelcome to Hitler, because he himself, in "Mein Kampf," said that Germany did not need colonies. He may feel also that if keeping quiet about colonies will give him a free hand in Europe, with Britain going one better than Nelson and shutting both eyes, he can easily afford to oblige, secure his wants in Europe and then renew demands for colonies later if it suits his purpose. On this argument, therefore, the Hitler speech means that Halifax has left the desired impression, that Hitler is going to damp down the colony campaign, and that Britain in return is willing to see Germany secure Czechoslovakia, Austria, and so on.

There is this to be said in support of the theory: It fits the facts and is plausible. For the new British foreign policy contains no element of discarded League doctrines, once professed to be the only truth, and now found to be heresy. Non-intervention in Spain means more openly support for France, with no contaminating suspicion of adherence to a democratic bloc. The Brussels Conference means a similar evasion of previous responsibilities toward the Far East, a somewhat querulous benevolence toward Japan, and a determination as long as possible to prevent the League from having anything further to do with the Chinese war.

If we follow these policies for wars which so immediately affect our strategic position, why do anything different about possible wars in central and southeastern Europe. Black men begin at Calais.

If this is the correct interpretation of the Hitler speech, it is awkward for our government that so many Conservatives see the opposite view. They assume that Hitler was so disappointed with the absence of concessions from Halifax that he rushed out immediately and heated up the propaganda exciting Germans to a proper realization of their spontaneous desire for colonies. The Conservatives are not happy with Hitlerian speeches, even when the oratory is mild by German standards.

Government May Attempt To Solder Position Soon.

THERE HAS BEEN talk in recent days of a possible general election in the middle of 1938. The argument is that the government realizes it is now at the top of its form, for an economic depression, mild or severe, seems probable during 1938, and a general election held after its onset would not be as favorable as one held before. It is suggested that the government, following established precedent, is carefully choosing its time for appeal to the country, and the grounds upon which to fight.

Most likely grounds are that the government has rearmed, kept the country out of war, and made proper concessions for European peace. Lord Halifax's visit to Germany is seen by some as a preliminary window dressing for election purposes, although this seems very far fetched. One domestic election plank will be an antidepression campaign, based on the argument that there would be no depression but for scare talk by political enemies of the government. Return the Conservatives and you will have eternal prosperity. And second domestic issue, it is suggested, will be the protection of civilian populations against air raids.

Our beloved capacity for bungling is magnificently illustrated by the long drawn out and still unsolved quarrel between government and local authorities over air raid precautions.

Government said at first that local authority must bear the cost, which naturally is very heavy. Local authorities, of all political colors, said they could not afford to pay. Government came back with a partial subsidy which local authorities refused as inadequate. The government raised its bid and offered something which it claims, in many cases, will amount to about 90 per cent of the total cost. But the local authorities are still unwilling to accept any part of the burden.

The next step will probably be a government act making it compulsory for the local authorities to do as they are told and raise the revenue from local rates, after receiving government subsidy on the scale last offered. This dog-fight has gone on for well over a year, but nothing whatsoever has been done in the vast majority of towns to provide any air-raid precautions. This must provide Hitler and Mussolini with a classic example of the decadence of democracy; unable even to protect themselves against death from the air, because they cannot decide between themselves who is to pay the cost!

Typhoid Epidemic Throws London Doctors Into Scrap.

THERE IS an epidemic of typhoid in London; 163 cases reported so far, with six deaths. The source of infection was the water supply from one particular well in Croydon. Inoculations to prevent spread of the disease are not being used, for medical men here object that in the early days after first inoculation the patient becomes more susceptible to infection. This is of course in keeping with the British reluctance to pasteurize milk, because it "loses some of the food value."

The work of watching patients, segregating infectious cases, and keeping epidemics in control is primarily the responsibility of the local Medical Officers of Health, who are public officials. But as Lord Dawson, king's physician, has complained on several occasions, there is almost complete lack of co-operation between public health services including hospitals supported by public money and the private doctors, nursing homes and hospitals supported by charity. Each time an epidemic occurs of serious proportions there is agitation to close up the gap, get unified and prompt action, but it dies down and we continue as before.

Record Pineapple And Tourist Crops Enrich Hawaiians

World-famous pineapples and the celebrated beach at Waikiki aided in bringing prosperity back to Hawaii in the last fiscal year, Acting Governor Charles M. Hite recorded yesterday in his annual report.

Tourists reached an all-time high of 55,860, Hite said.

The pineapple crop was the greatest on record, worth $17,000,000 more than that of the previous year. Income of pineapple industries reached $51,452,483.

Commerce in Hawaii, the report showed, counted great gains, exports totaling $125,537,355, an increase of $27,000,000 over 1936, and imports aggregating $85,743,998, a rise of more than $7,000,000.

Sugar output reached 1,000,000 short tons, valued at $67,975,548, an increase of $9,000,000.

Hitler's American Agent

"IN MEMORY of Capt. Ernst Roehm and Gregor Strasser and many other Nazis who were betrayed, murdered and traduced in their graves" is the dedication to a study of the development and ideology of the Hitler movement by one of its most ardent followers, Kurt G. W. Ludecke.

These 814 pages are a literary achievement. They are written by a man who is a German to the Americans, and an American to the Germans, who is at home anywhere and everywhere and who has now confined his superior talents to an inside story of Hitler's rise to power.

"I have sinned, strived, suffered and survived," states the author in the last paragraph of the preface to his volume. The impression remains that Mr. Ludecke is still striving and that Hitler was only one incident of a very colorful career.

• • • •

BORN FEBRUARY 5, 1890, in Berlin, Ludecke was educated in one of the local preparatory schools and then entered the employ of a Hamburg export firm. According to his story, he got into some trouble with a superior officer in the regiment in which he was serving as a trainee and soon thereafter left for England and France. Then he lived as a gambler in the various casinos on the continent until the outbreak of the war, when he volunteered for service with the German army. A series of unfortunate circumstances landed the young volunteer in various jails and insane wards. After the war Ludecke left for South America—a trip which resulted in total failure. From Mexico he came to the United States and then returned to Germany.

• • • •

THIS LED HIM in the end to Hitler. Hitler is observed by Ludecke as "drawing forth details from a mind which had them ready in nice order, modulating his voice, using his body, his head, his hands, his mobile face. It was not so much conscious acting as the perfect co-ordination of impulse and expression, something that had become second nature to him as a result of his many years before the public . . . There was always a certain distance about him, that subtle quality of aloofness which unquestionably contributes to his unusual ability to deal with individuals. It is one of the gifts of a statesman." . . .

Adolf Hitler saw in the "Weltbummler," Ludecke, who had just invested some gains made in speculations in Dutch and Swiss banks, a Godsend to the impoverished Nazi Party. Ludecke found a ready reception within their inner circle. With a brilliant vision of the future opportunities of the movement, he became a Nazi.

• • • •

THE AUTHOR gives interesting inside views of the early days of the Hitler movement. He claims that Hitler was not always the distant ascetic. The Fuehrer enjoyed a glass of beer on occasions and made the rounds the beer halls of Munich.

Hitler's pot pie needed a bit of upper crust. "Putzi" Hangstangel, Munich art dealer and Harvard graduate, became Hitler's "toady in chief." The author does not seem to have done so well with Hitler; "too much of a swell" was the Fuehrer's criticism. So Ludecke was mainly detailed either to give money or to get money and to go abroad and get support. Before leaving for Italy, the author claims that Hitler made the parting admonition: "Rip out of Mussolini whatever you can."

The author's first impression of Goebbels was "of a bird of prey—an angular cadaverous face which seemed to slope from all sides toward the tip of his fleshy nose; large feverish dark eyes, curiously lidded; a loose mouth heavily creased at the corners; ears like wings, projecting at an angle; a putty-colored skin and hair of a dingy black, brushed back." That much for Goebbels.

• • • •

GOERING does not fare much better. Ludecke saw him as "an immense fat creature who hoisted himself to his feet and stumped toward me on elephantine legs, with outstretched hands, an artificial smile around an ugly mouth with inward turning lips . . . In the staircase hall, my two bulls were standing in devout posture. Goering beaming a Lohengrin welcome, greeted them with handshakes like long lost friends—the penny gaff actor suddenly playing the role of the democratic popular leader. As I looked at him standing there in pompous joviality, I wondered whether a sausage might not burst if stuffed too hard."

The details of the famous beer hall putsch of 1923 are clearly and interestingly described by the author. The party collapsed and Ludecke came to America to get money for the almost defunct movement. Ford listened to him—but that was all. So he turned to the German Americans, but with no better success. His next object was the Klan, but the Imperial Wizard of the Invisible Empire was not in the mood to invest cash in the Nazis—so Hitler's agent was highly dissatisfied with his American mission.

• • • •

KURT G. W. LUDECKE is undoubtedly a gifted writer, a student of human nature with a mature knowledge of social and political currents stretching from the Baltic to the Pacific Coast, from Mexico to Berlin. His story is magnetic, filled with human interest, enlivened by histories, philosophical excursions and tingling with a clever, sophisticated sense of humor.

A strong National Socialist, he is not a Hitlerite. This conflict of placing the idea of national socialism above the idolatry of the person of Adolf Hitler caused his ultimate downfall and banishment from the circle of the mighty within the leader's group.

The historical accuracy of his many startling statements within the 814 pages of this volume will have to be determined by the test of time, which will bring forth other accounts of this dramatic period of Germany's history.

• • • •

UNDOUBTEDLY Ludecke knows Hitler. Did Hitler know Ludecke?

"I KNEW HITLER," by Kurt G. W. Ludecke. (Scribners, $3.75.)

Merely Drunk.

Waiving trial by jury, a driver in Lowell, Mass., has been convicted for drunken driving but acquitted by the trial judge on charges of hit-and-run and the manslaughter of two persons.

In his decision the judge explained that to be guilty of manslaughter, or of hit-and-run, the driver must have been aware of his act. If drunk enough to be convicted for drunken driving, and the prisoner admitted he was, he must have sufficiently lost control of his judgment and faculties as to be not responsible for his acts.

But for the fact that this edifying logic runs counter to all accepted principles of law, it might establish an interesting precedent. A person accused of any offense could plead drunkenness. Since prosecutors find it so notoriously difficult to prove intoxication unless the subject was so drunk he could not lie on the floor without holding onto it, it presumably would be equally hard to prove that a bank hold-up or a safe-cracker was sober. In fact, it is not quite clear how the Lowell judge could rationalize the penalty of six months' suspended sentence and $200 fine he inflicted in this case for drunken driving, when, if the poor fellow was drunk enough to be convicted of drunken driving, he was drunk enough not to know he was driving drunk.

THEATER USHERS puzzle the public so it's only turn about that the public should puzzle the ushers. But while the young usher I interviewed was puzzled by the public, he was downright scared of having more than his initials, H. H. C., appear in print.

McCARTHY.

I suppose that's understandable since theater ushers aren't supposed to "take a sock," at the patrons. And Harry came very close to doing just that.

"I guess the public sort of resent us," he said, "but they ought to hear our side of the story. This job is no snap. Right now I'm off duty, but I might be called back to work at a moment's notice.

"We sometimes have to climb in and out of those 'monkey suits' three and four times a day." He pointed to a line of uniforms hung neatly along the locker room wall, and his young face wrinkled with disgust.

"Our hours are probably the craziest in the world. We work what is known as a split shift, and while we may not work more than 40 hours in a week we probably spend that much time getting to and from the theater seven days a week.

"The split shift means that we work a couple of hours in the morning, have the afternoon free, and come back to work the evening show. Sometimes when the crowd is greater than expected, an emergency order will go out to off-duty ushers. Then this room is a madhouse.

"They come in here on the run, grab for their uniforms, and since they all look alike you've got to be lucky and fast if you're going to get your own. But it's when we're on duty that the real trouble starts.

• • • •

"WE REPORT on an aisle and we haven't any idea as to the condition of the aisle. We don't know how many seats there are. And if there are any we don't know where they are. All the time people keep pouring in, and they don't want to wait a minute for seats. A half an hour on the job on a busy day, and we scarcely know our names. We just go through the motions.

"The voices keep barking out of the screen, and believe me when you've heard the same dialogue 40 times you get tired of it. We just sort of go dead from the neck up.

"We seat the people as best we can, help old ladies on with their coats, answer questions, lift up the little girls so they can get a drink of water, and say 'Yes, Sir' and 'No, Madam' till we're dizzy.

"When all the seats in the orchestra are filled up, there may be plenty of seats left in the mezzanine. But instead of taking the seats the people think you're trying to put something over on them. They start to pile up in the rear of the theater.

"All the time the man in charge of the floor is getting madder and madder. With the customers grumbling and the man in charge of the floor cursing you out, for not getting the crowd to go up the stairs, you're likely to be a little short on temper yourself.

"In fact," he said, "someday I'm going to grab the customers by the neck and march them upstairs." Harry smiled a beautiful smile when he said that.

"Boy," he said, "that would be heaven."

• • • •

"BUT I'VE BEEN talking about the general run of customers and the way they react. We've got our special problems, too. We've got the children that come to the first show in the morning and stay through three or four runs of the picture.

"After each show they come back to get a drink of water, or buy some candy from the machine. Then they can never find their seats in the darkened theater. At the end of the day you can figure that you've seated one kid no less than four or five times.

"But if kids were the worst of our worries it still wouldn't be such a bad job. Let me tell you about one gentleman we had in here the other day.

"The theater was crowded and there wasn't an empty seat in the house. We even had them lined up in the lobby. In the rear of the crowd was an old woman holding a 3-year-old child in her arms.

"Well, I'm not much on etiquette and such, but it seemed to me that if seats were going to be given out, the elderly woman ought to get one. Particularly since she was lugging this child in her arms.

"I told the usher on the aisle to save the next seat that came up, and I saw to it that the old woman got it.

"Well, just about that time I heard a howl from one of the men in the front of the line. He was a big 6-footer, and he must have weighed 180 pounds.

"'What're you doin', kid?' he asked me. 'Are you passing out seats to your friends? I've been waiting longer than that woman.'

"I'm telling you," Harry said, "it was all I could do to keep from socking him. I'd been trying to seat people for three hours so I wasn't feeling so well about that time, either.

"But before I had a chance to explain to him, he lit off looking for the manager, to get his money back. And when I tried to quiet him down he threatened to punch me in the nose. And when he couldn't find the manager right away he came back to curse me out some more.

"He was annoying everyone in the rear of the theater, and he wouldn't quiet down. After a while he invited me to step into the alley.

• • • •

"HONEST, I couldn't turn down an invitation like that," Harry said. Now, I'm not so tough but I have fought in a lot of amateur bouts. I wasn't worried. But just as we were leaving the theater the manager came along and broke it up.

"That's the worst kind of a customer we get, and we get them oftener than you think. Some of those birds ought to take time off to figure things out.

"Just because we wear a 'monkey suit' all day long, and have to have our hair plastered down, doesn't mean we can't handle ourselves. Where do they think these ushers come from? Why we've got football players, Golden Gloves champions and everything else right here in this theater.

"Gosh," Harry said, "I'm sorry the manager broke that up."

Footprints Reveal Small Dinosaurs Ate at Gettysburg

One hundred and fifty more monuments have been discovered at Gettysburg. Fossil footprints formed eons ago in primeval mud, they mark the dining hall of the first dinosaurs.

The tracks were discovered near the Civil War battlefields last summer, when workmen were quarrying rock for a bridge. Elmer R. Haile, an engineer with the Department of Agriculture, has been working on the footprints ever since.

The fossil remains date from the Triassic geologic period, about 180,000,000 year ago. This was the era of the earliest reptiles, which a few million years later developed into dinosaurs, the largest animals the earth has ever seen.

Miss Keller Helps Companion to Win Citizenship Status

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—Helen Keller went to court as a witness today for the first time in her life, and helped Miss Polly Thomson—who has been her "eyes and ears" since the death of her childhood teacher—become a United States citizen.

Sightless and deaf to all sounds save the vibrations of music and laughter, she stood hailing before Justice James T. Hallinan in Queens Supreme Court while an interpreter "spelled" into her hand the question:

"Do you vouch for this person as a citizen?"

Miss Keller, who laboriously learned to talk after a mute childhood, answered in a clear, confident voice, "I do."

Miss Thomson is a Scottish woman.

Deadline Stands For Auto Licenses

Washington motorists were warned yesterday by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen that there would be no extension of the December 31 midnight deadline for obtaining 1938 tags.

William A. Van Duzer, traffic director, previously had reported a decrease in the number of applicants for tags this year. Thus far, about 28,000 car owners have purchased tags, about 3,000 less than last year at this time.

WPA Unit to Hear Hygiene Expert

Dr. Paul J. Ewerhardt, director of the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, will speak at 11 a. m. today at a meeting of the District WPA educational and recreational group at the Public Health auditorium, 1900 Contitution avenue northwest.

Other speakers will include Hazel C. Taylor, educational and recreational assistant; C. O. Lewis, director of summer and night schools; Bernice B. Calvert, assistant director of women's and professional projects, and Hallie Flanagan, director of Federal Theater projects.

Rail Rate Case Will Get Final Hearing Feb. 7

I. C. C. to Speed Regional Inquiries; Decision in Spring Held Possible.

January 11, Commissioner Porter, Portland, Oreg.; and Commissioner Aitchison, Los Angeles.

January 17, Commissioners Aitchison and Porter, Salt Lake City, and Commissioner Caskie in New Orleans.

January 25, Commission of seven, Chicago.

"House Is on Fire."

The tone of yesterday's testimony was set by F. W. Robinson, vice president in charge of traffic, Union Pacific System, with the statement: "Our house is on fire. An immediate decision is needed.

"This is not a rate case, to be frank. We're dealing with a basic economic condition that is immediately urgent and must be met at once."

"We have seen the worst of truck and waterways competition with the railroads. With regulation, and faced themselves with increasing labor and material costs, both groups are naturally anxious for a rail rate increase, in order they may increase their own rates."

Promises Added Business.

E. E. Norris, president, Southern Railway system, was lauded by other rail officials after he had testified:

"If I could be sure the commission would grant our prayer for this rate increase, I would happily go back to my office and recall many hundreds of laid-off men to their jobs, and start at once buying some of the many millions of dollars worth of equipment, material and supplies we need, instead of laying off more men and discontinuing every purchase that can safely be deferred."

D. J. Kerr, president, Lehigh Valley Railroad, noting that in the 6 years and 10 months ended with October, 1937, his road has incurred a deficit in net income of $12,270,000, said:

"Our entire property is being maintained only to the extent necessary to make it safe. The Lehigh Valley now needs 25 new air-conditioned coaches, 1,500 open-top freight cars, 1,000 box cars, and 100 cabooses, to cost approximately $7,800,000. It is impossible under present conditions to give any consideration to these requirements."

Expenditures Off 13 Millions.

J. B. Hill, president, Louisville & Nashville Railroad, said yearly capital expenditures for his road fell off more than $13,000,000 during the 1932-1937 depression period, as the system spent less than $2,000,000 yearly in the last five years, against an average for the previous five years of more than $15,000,000.

J. B. Tigrett, president, Gulf, Mobile & Northern Railroad, expressed fear that because of the burden of new charges and additional costs "we may not only be unable to earn anything on the investment of our stockholders, but possibly cannot continue meeting interest on our bonded debt."

Rival Union Chiefs Talk Labor Peace

Vice Presidents' Union Is Proposed by Madden

J. Warren Madden, chairman of the Labor Relations Board, Wednesday suggested organization of a union of bank vice presidents.

Walter K. Tuller, attorney for motion-picture interests, was arguing that screen writers should not be classed as employes, "any more than vice presidents of a bank," when Madden, smiling, said he was "not so sure that vice presidents don't need a union. Why shouldn't they have one?"

High Wage Security Tax Payable in Lump Sums

By the Associated Press.

The Internal Revenue Bureau has ruled security taxes on salaries of more than $3,000 a year should be paid the first part of the year and not spread evenly over 12 months.

The taxes apply only to the first $3,000 earned, thus a person earning $3,000 a month must pay his year's tax in January and then would be exempt the rest of the year. The bureau also ruled no tax refund could be granted if an employe of a company voluntarily refunded part of his salary to his employer.

Inflation Fear Causing Diamond Sales Boom

New York, Dec. 2 (U.P.).—A Federal Reserve survey has disclosed that many rich people are bying diamonds, not for display but as insurance against inflation.

The diamond market is one of the most sensitive commodity markets, and if the value of the dollar shrinks, buyers expect their diamond holdings to go up in the same proportion.

Wage-Hour Bill To Face Test in House Dec. 13

Proposal Is Torn From Control of Standpat Rules Committee.

ceed to consideration of the bill, which the Senate already has passed in altered form.

The buffeted bill, providing minimum wages as high as 40 cents an hour and a work week as short as 40 hours, has been amended substantially by the Labor Committee since it was reported to the House last session.

Chairman Mary T. Norton will propose the changes from the floor. Instead of a five-man board administering the act (now a target of labor criticism), she will ask a single administrator under the Labor Department, partially in line with American Federation of Labor views.

Other committee amendments would broaden retailing exemptions to include any activities of an "outside salesman" and would eliminate the prohibition on the so-called "grave-yard" shift (midnight to 6 a. m.), for women and minors. The so-called Borah amendment, exempting farm co-operatives, would be eliminated.

Green Ponders Bill.

An additional amendment drive to bring the bill more closely into line with labor views was in prospect, as William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, brought his executive council here to consider proposed changes in wage-hour provisions and administrative and enforcement features.

Independent moves to substitute an entirely new bill for the House measure already were under way. One such substitute, which would eliminate all provision for an administering board, and freeze fixed hours and wages into the law itself, was offered yesterday by Representative Glenn Griswold (Democrat), Indiana, former railroad brakeman, and member of the trainmen's brotherhood.

The Griswold substitute provides a 44-hour week and a 40-cent-an-hour minimum pay scale. Senator George L. Berry (Democrat), of Tennessee, likewise an exponent of fixing wage-hour minimums and maximums in the law, said he would attempt to substitute his bill when the House measure came back to the Senate.

Scores Committee Bill.

"The only reason why such a multiplicity of words is required is because there is hidden in these numerous words and pages the joker intended to deceive alike labor and business," he said.

Disputes still raging around the House measure left in doubt the final outcome of the Administration's fight to enact wage-hour legislation this session. Although a clear majority of the House signed the discharge petition, few wholeheartedly indorsed the present measure, and many frankly said they "signed up" only to bring the issue to the floor.

The Fish resolution, seeking House investigation of methods used in soliciting petition signatures, quoted Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), Texas, as charging "trades" and "deals" on the Florida ship canal and other projects. He quoted Representative A. Willis Robertson (Democrat), of Virginia, as charging "log-rolling" with the farm bloc to bring out the wage-hour bill.

"Preposterous," He Says.

After the Fish resolution was defeated, Representative Arthur D. Healey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, chairman of the wage-hour "steering committee," declared the charges were "preposterous."

"Appeals for signatures were made on the basis of the principle involved in the legislation—decent wages, hours and working conditions—regardless of attitude toward the text of the bill," insisted Healey.

Questioned about the alleged Florida ship canal "trade," Representative Green (Democrat), of Florida, enthusiastic backer of the ship canal bill, said he did not think the project was "imperilled" by his co-operation with the Administration and the leadership.

But Representative Hendricks (Democrat), of Florida, another canal advocate, denied "trading" and said he received no promises in return for signing the petition. Representative Peterson, the third Florida signer, is an opponent of the canal, but has a bill involving Federal fruit fly eradication in Florida. He also denied trading.

The three Marylanders among the eight who signed the petition yesterday were Representatives Kennedy, Goldsborough and Gambrill. All said they had not been persuaded but had decided to "sign up" several days ago. Representative Palmisano, of Maryland, who did not sign, is expected to vote for the bill.

Others who joined the last-minute petition parade were Representatives Champion and Meeks, of Illinois; Representative Joe Smith, of West Virginia, and Representative Connery, of Massachusetts, all Democrats.

Leaders signing earlier included Majority Leader Rayburn, House Whip Pat Boland, Chairman Jones, of the Agriculture Committee, and Chairman Norton, of the Labor Committee. Speaker Bankhead and Chairman O'Connor, of the Rules Committee, did not sign.

Editor Assails Lump Sum in Voting Funds

Merle Thorpe Urges Congress to Earmark All Its Appropriations.

New York, Dec. 2.—Congress was urged tonight by Merle Thorpe, of Washington, editor of The Nation's Business, to abandon lump-sum appropriations for earmarking of all funds it votes.

"Only a miracle," he told the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York in a prepared speech, "can loosen the grip of the political horde upon production.

"And no relief will come in employment or increase in wealth until we return to the principles upon which our American society was organized.

"Where shall we look for a sign? If Congressmen again turn over a lump sum to the executive, only to find themselves later begging for funds for their districts and paying for them with votes for executive measures, then the America we have known we shall know no more. But, if Congress reasserts its constitutional powers over appropriations allocating funds and maintains a comptroller general to see that the funds are expended as Congress wills, then there is hope."

Declaring optimism is easier than pessimism, Thorpe said that "to those with fortitude enough to face the facts, the state of the Nation is clear."

City Aides Indicted In Airport 'Deal'

Newark, Dec. 2 (AP).—Twenty-nine persons, including all city commissioners elected in 1933 and other former city officials and individuals involved in Port Newark land transactions, were named in indictments handed up by the Essex County grand jury today.

The investigation followed a recent Supreme Court inquiry into the city government. At its conclusion Supreme Court Commissioner Dixon filed a report accusing the former city commission of wrongdoing in the purchase by the city of meadowland tracts near Port Newark and the municipal airport.

For the Holidays . . . try CAPT. LAWRENCE'S Famous Old RUM PUNCH

Captain Lawrence mixing his special rum punch on Christmas Eve in the captain's cabin of his ship the Niger. One of his eccentricities was that he always mixed it with his own hands, never permitting the steward or cabin boy to do it.

Captain Ezra Lawrence (born in Nantucket in 1805) always made for holidays a rum punch so delicious and festive that it has been used in his family ever since. We got this recipe from his great-grandson:

"Dissolve ¾ pounds brown sugar, then add 1 quart lemon juice, 2 quarts Virgin Islands Rum, 1 quart Brandy, 2 quarts water, 1 wine-glass peach Brandy, 1 tablespoon maple syrup. Let stand 2 hours." (Fills about 50 punch glasses.)

To make this recipe nowadays, you need Government House Rum, the rum from the Virgin Islands. A sound, honest rum, distilled directly from cane juice.

Hope Is Waning In Search for 2 Navy Fliers

Parachute Sighted Near Va. Beach Proves to Be Only Rescue Flare.

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 2.—Hope that two Navy fliers, missing since last night, were alive waned today when a parachute, sighted on the shore of Fresh Pond from the air, proved to be a 'chute from a flare used during the night in the search for the aviators.

After their scouting plane was seen to plunge into the ocean off Virginia Beach, Navy planes zoomed low over the swampy area of the State Seashore Park, and parties on foot conducted a search for some trace of Aviation Cadet James J. Jones, of Washington, pilot, and Troy W. Blanton, of Lafayette, Ala., aviation machinist's mate.

Naval base officials ordered the search ashore after a Virginia Beach resident reported seeing three or four rockets about 6:50 o'clock this morning, sent up a mile inland from the point where the plane plunged into the ocean. Officials held hope that the two men leaped in their parachute and landed in the park area.

Jones and Blanton were engaged in maneuvers in which several planes at the air station participated.

Jones received his training at Pensacola, Fla., and had been in the service 14 months. He had been attached to the aircraft carrier Yorktown about three months.

Was A Football Star.

The 26-year-old cadet is the son of George P. Jones, special assistant to Attorney General Cummings, who lives at the Broadmoor Apartments, 3601 Connecticut avenue. He was a football star at the University of Montana from 1931 to 1933 and later attended North Dakota State College. Leaving there about two years ago, he took a post in the Treasury Department here, which he resigned to enlist in naval aviation last year.

After a period of elimination training at Anacostia Naval Air Station, he was assigned to the Pensacola Naval Air Station for flight and ground training.

Cadet Jones' father was in Springfield, Ill., representing the Department of Justice in a coal case. Notified of his son's accident, he returned here at once. A brother of the missing flier, John Jones, was taken to Norfolk in a Navy plane to observe the search.

Governor of Guam Can't Run Palace On Captain's Pay

Capt. Benjamin V. McCandlish, U. S. N., Governor-Commandant of the tiny island of Guam, 5,000 miles west of San Francisco in the Pacific, yesterday requested enlisted servants or "preferably an equivalent allowance of funds to employ native servants."

Benevolent despot in one of the most far-flung American posessions, Capt. McCandlish, in his annual report to the Secretary of the Navy, said he found the financial burden imposed on his captain's pay almost unbearable, because of upkeep of his palace, built by one of a long line of Spanish governors, before the war with Spain.

"The Governor of Guam entertains extensively by virtue of his position," wrote Capt. McCandlish. "The Government quarters assigned to him have 4,500 square feet of floor space. The service necessary for entertainment, upkeep and maintenance carries with it a financial obligation too great for a captain, who depends on his pay alone, to bear."

Lihr, Nobile Rescuer, Drowns Landing Plane

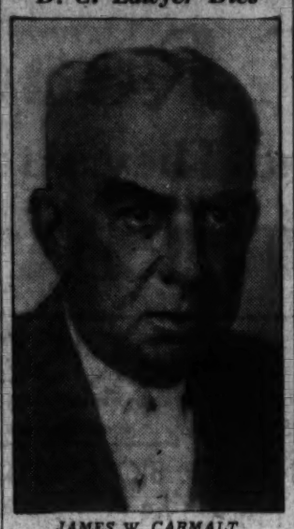
D. C. Lawyer Dies



JAMES W. CARMALT.

James Carmalt, Mediation Board Chairman, Dead

James W. Carmalt, 65, chairman of the National Mediation Board, died yesterday at his home, 1700 Rhode Island avenue northwest. He had been ill several weeks.

A native of Montrose, Pa., Mr. Carmalt was graduated from Hamilton College in 1895 and later studied law at Columbia and New York universities. Admitted to the bar in 1898, he practiced in New York for ten years, gaining a wide reputation in cases involving public carriers.

In 1909, Mr. Carmalt accepted a position on the legal staff of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and five years later was associated with Louis D. Brandeis, now on the Supreme Court, in preparation of the famous railway advance case. He was chief examiner of the I. C. C. from 1914 to 1918. During the World War he served on the staff of the War Industries Board, and in 1918 and 1919 was assistant to the general counsel of the United States Railroad Administration.

Returning to private practice after the war, he represented a number of railroad corporations and shippers. He re-entered the Federal service in 1933 as counsel to Joseph B. Eastman, co-ordinator of transportation. In 1934, President Roosevelt appointed him to the new National Mediation Board.

Mr. Carmalt is survived by a sister, Mrs. Theodore D. Starr, of Chestnut Hills, Pa., and four adopted children, Leonard, John, Wilbur and Eveline Crupper.

Emery H. Komlos Dies; Was SEC Inquiry Target

Cleveland, Dec. 2 (AP).—Emery H. Komlos, 51, Cleveland real estate operator whose sale of stock in cemetery developments was investigated several months ago by the SEC, died today in a seven-story plunge. Komlos was connected with the Bond & Share Co. and the Sunset Park Land Corporation.

L. E. Wyble, Jr., 22, Dies; C. U. Pole Vaulter

Lloyd E. Wyble, jr., 22, of 1707 Taylor street northwest, a 1937 graduate of Catholic University, died yesterday at Providence Hospital as the result of injuries suffered when he fell while pole-vaulting in June, 1936. He had been a member of the Catholic University track team for three years and also distinguished himself as a pole vaulter in his senior year at McKinley Technical High School.

The fall resulted in an injury to the youth's spine from which he suffered constantly. Last August he underwent an operation at Johns Hopkins University Hospital in Baltimore. He remained there three months and his condition appeared to be improving steadily.

Two weeks ago he was brought to his home. He suffered a relapse last Monday and was removed to Providence Hospital.

Born in Kansas City, his parents moved to this city when he was 2 years old. The young man, the oldest of five children, was educated at Sacred Heart Academy, McKinley Technical High School and Catholic University, being graduated from the latter institution as an aeronautical engineer.

Besides his parents, two sisters, Dolores, 18, a student at Holy Cross College, and Mary Jane, a student at Sacred Heart Academy; two brothers, Jay, a third-year student at Catholic University, and Charles Richard, 8, survive. Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart Church, Sixteenth street and Park road northwest, and burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Covington Burial To Be in Arlington

Funeral services for Mrs. Virginia Covington, who died Tuesday in San Antonio, Tex., will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow in the Fort Myer Chapel, followed by burial in Arlington Cemetery.

Mrs. Covington was the wife of Lieut. John C. Covington, Air Corps, United States Army, who is stationed at Kelly Field, San Antonio, Tex. She was the daughter of Col. and Mrs. E. R. Warner McCabe. Besides her husband and parents, Mrs. Covington is survived by her brother, E. R. Warner McCabe, jr., a student at the University of Virginia.

Edward Handiboe, Ex-Umpire, Realty Dealer, Dies at 58

Born in Columbus, Ohio, Mr. Handiboe was brought to Washington at the age of 4. Keenly interested in baseball, he served as umpire for the Capitol City Amateur League from 1903 to 1906 and later entered the professional field.

He umpired in the Virginia and Ohio State baseball leagues, the International Baseball League and the American Association. Following retirement 20 years ago he entered the real estate business and was connected with several organizations.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Nellie Handiboe, and two daughters, Mrs. Bernadine Haverty and Miss Katherine Handiboe.

Coal Price Fixing Fails To Affect Washington

As far as Washington residents are concerned, the Bituminous Coal Commission need not have bothered revising the minimum price schedule. Householders here use mostly low-volatile egg, nut and pea coal from West Virginia, while apartment owners burn industrial slack. The price of neither product has been materially changed by the new schedule, Washington coal dealers said yesterday.

Beauty Claims Millions of 2d Bigamist Mate

Spaulding, Mrs. Allgeyer, who said she was a descendant of the surgeon to Emperor Maximilian of Mexico, declared that when she learned she was the wife of a bigamist he promised her half of the $2,000,000 he expected to inherit from his father if she would keep quiet about it.

On finishing her testimony she retired to a corner of the room, huddled into a chair, and shielded her face with a piece of paper. Justice Kenneth O'Brien reserved decision and directed Spaulding's attorney to proceed with his countersuit.

Spaulding said he signed an agreement dictated by Mrs. Allgeyer to pay her $1,000,000 from his prospective inheritance. She became impatient, he said, and "under further threats of exposure" he began paying her $500 a month. After the stock market crash of 1929 he gradually reduced the payments to $175 and finally stopped them altogether in June, 1936, when she said he gave her a lump settlement of $50,000. Later, in response to further demands, he said he gave her 500 shares of Curtis Publishing Co. stock, then worth $105 a share.

Ex-Prison Officer Slays Daughter, 5

Pearisburg, Va., Dec. 2 (AP).—P. B. Wimmer, 55, former prison camp yard sergeant, shot and killed his 5-year-old daughter, critically wounded his wife and then ended his own life by sending a bullet through his brain, at Penvir this afternoon, Sheriff Emory Johnston said tonight.

Relatives said Wimmer had been devoted to his wife and child, and they could assign no reason for the act. They said he was subject to frequent severe headaches.

Steel Firm Fears No Quiz, Aide Says

Cleveland, Dec. 2 (AP).—A Hill & Knowlton official said tonight the firm's records, subpenaed by the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, "will not show any work done for, or connection with work done for vigilante or back-to-work organizations."

The firm is public relations counsel for Republic Steel Corporation and Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., principals in last summer's steel strike.

By the Associated Press.

Senate Civil Liberties Committee attaches said yesterday they wanted to examine records of Hill & Knowlton, a public relations firm, in connection with their study of employer organizations.

The hearings are scheduled to start in about a month.

O'Connor Bill Asks Profits Tax Easing

Chairman John J. O'Connor, of the House Rules Committee, yesterday urged the House to take "emergency" special session action, exempting all corporations earning up to $100,000 a year from the undivided profits tax in 1937.

O'Connor introduced in the House a joint resolution to provide immediate tax relief as a step toward checking the busines recession.

He explained his resolution was a temporary measure, applicable only to the year 1937. His proposal also calls for a lower graduation of corporate taxes for concerns earning over $100,000, and other tax relief adjustments. The resolution was referred to the House Ways and Means Committee.

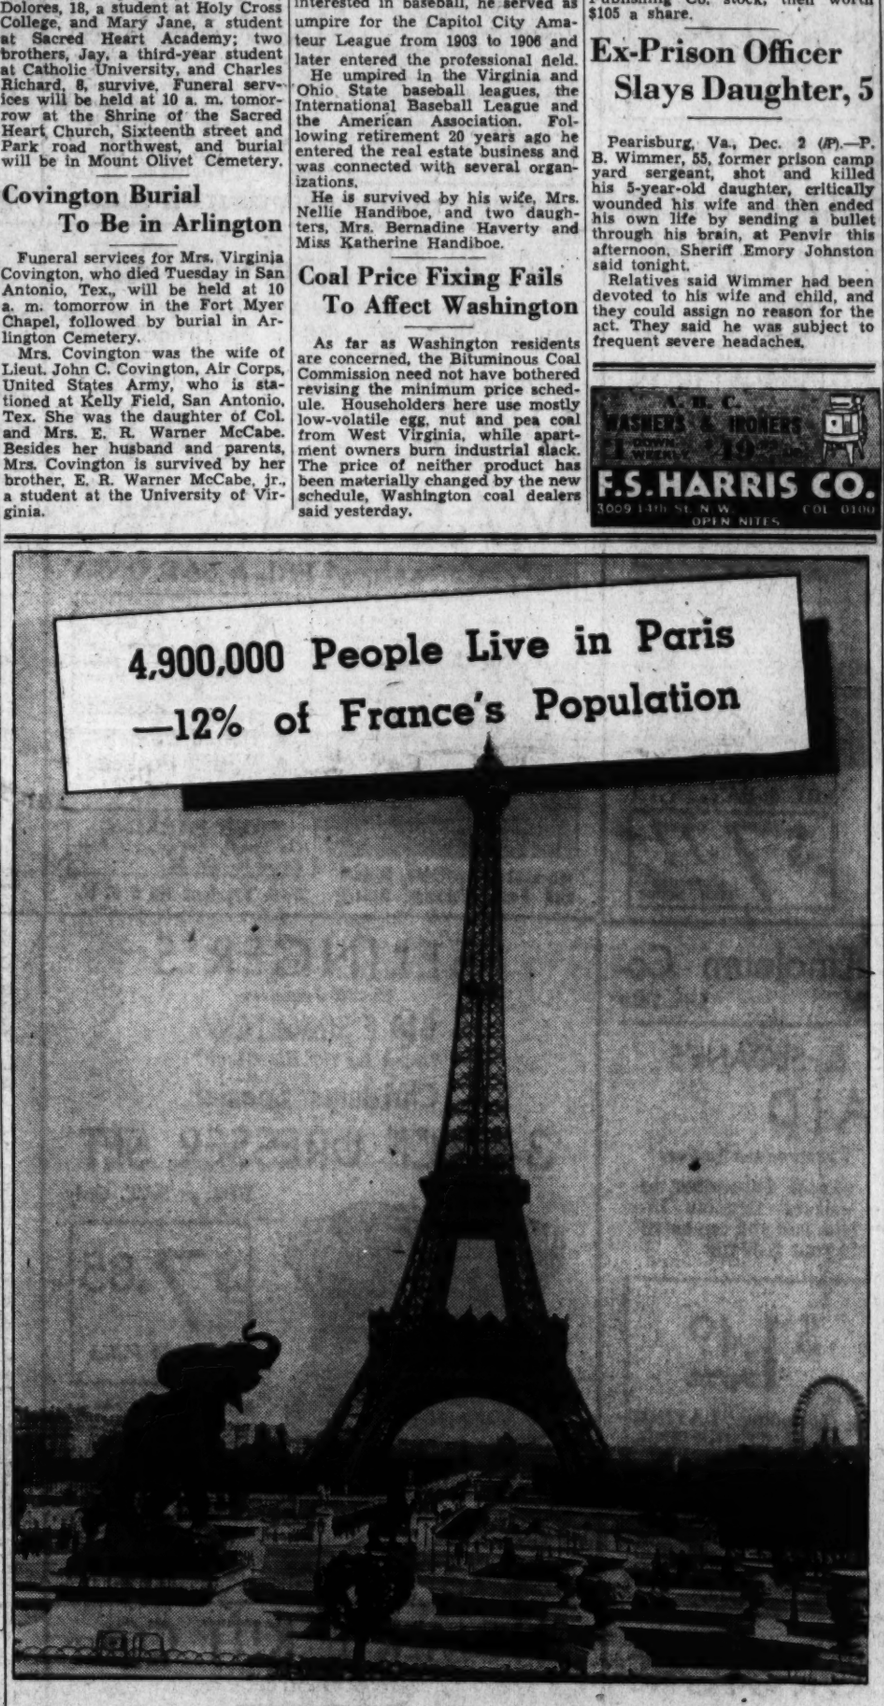
4,900,000 People Live in Paris
—12% of France's Population



As Capitals Go, Washington Is Still Small

In France, as in England, the capital is the big, important city—as it should be. Of France's 42,000,000 people, 4,900,000 live in Paris.

While Washington doesn't compare with London or Paris in population, remember, Washington is just a youngster. As a capital, Washington is destined to grow—and grow big. This becomes inevitable as Washington becomes more and more important in the life of America. Here is one city where real estate must be a sound and profitable investment—because Washington must grow as America grows.

EMBASSY RECEPTION:

The first arrivals at the Embassy party seem to be rushing right past the receiving line and right at the refreshments . . . The Ambassador and his lady appear a little lonely at the entrance to the drawing room . . .

* * * *

The gentleman from Missouri is first to criticize the refreshments: "Too many sweet cookies, not enough caviar or Bismark herring" . . . Some of the hungrier guests are following the orthodox system of sampling "one of each" off the 20 or 30 trays.

* * * *

A few of the guests are eyeing with perplexity the card tray in the entrance hall . . . One cautious Westerner refuses to check his hat; doesn't want to be delayed in the line-ups arriving and departing . . . He hasn't acquired the Washington leisureliness . . . He hides it behind a sofa.

"—they skip the Ambassador"

Second guessers are discarding their punch glasses and making for the champagne dispensers . . . Why do so many of these distinguished guests remind you of the dowagers at a cocktail party in Wichita?

* * * *

The best strategy appears to be to conduct one's chats within arm's length of the tray of your favorite sandwiches . . . Consequently the congestion around the big table is terrific, and timid guests starve in the corners.

* * * *

A conscientious American patriot is worrying whether American embassies and legations put out" as good refreshments as these foreign emissaries in Washington . . . "I'll bet son of our diplomats serve hot doges" . . . "Wouldn't a hot dog taste good, muses a Massachusetts socialite.

* * * *

The traffic jam at the Embassy's front door is terrific . . . Chauffeurs are handicapped in negotiating the tortuous driveway by cautious souls who have parked blocks away and are making the last lap on foot . . . Curious citizens are lined up on the sidewalks for a peek at the bloods.

* * * *

No the tactful ambassador has maneuvered his receiving line nearer the stairs, so he can see his guests and shake their hands graciously before they dive at the refreshments . . . Some of them are wandering into bedrooms and other private quarters in search of more viands.

* * * *

The smarties are alternating between the three champagne tables, so their blushing faces won't become too familiar . . . Some of the girls are casting sly glances at the resplendant attendants in uniform, wondering whether they are attaches or servants . . . Egad, aren't these chandeliers magnificent!

"—he takes one of each"

When a guest actually felicitates the Ambassador on the anniversary he is celebrating, His Excellency appears quite startled . . . Most of the guests seem unaware of it . . . And the Americans seem to have some difficulty enunciating the strange "Your Excellency," but that's safer than trying to pronounce his name correctly.

* * * *

That handsome Senator has made his fourth complete circuit of the big table . . . Since reading Mrs. Roosevelt's memoirs a few of the guests are quite explicit in describing themselves to the receiving line, which must make things a shade more interesting for the hosts.

* * * *

Embryonic American statesmen are appraising the foreign gentlemen and wondering whether they themselves could live up to a cutaway coat or striped pants with a wing collar . . . A few guests who had planned to eat enough to do for dinner are indignant at the suave gentry blocking the refreshments without eating anything.

* * * *

The serious-minded young man from California is disappointed because no one seems to want to talk about the international situation . . . Almost 7 o'clock . . . Another round of ices, another sip of champagne . . . Hands across the sea to the Ambassador and off to the movies . . . Maybe a bite of dinner wouldn't be amiss after all.

Stengle Urges Retention Of Civil Service Status

Internal Revenue Commissioner Guy T. Helvering was urged yesterday by Charles L. Stengle, president of the A. F. G. E., to order retention of civil service status of employes about to be transferred to field offices in connection with decentralizing the bureau's security tax auditing branch. Stengle said he understood it was planned to employ the auditors as deputy collectors, "titles which are recognized throughout the country as more or less political and therefore without the pale of civil service protection."

New Yorkers Win National Bridge Title

Mrs. Sam Rush, Harry Fishbein Take Mixed Pair Crown.

Mrs. Kavanaugh, Lester Johnson, Seventh, Are Top Local Pair.

Mrs. Sam Rush and Harry Fishbein, both of New York, playing in a pick-up partnership, beat a field of stars and won the national mixed pair championship in the Contract Bridge Tournament at the Shoreham Hotel yesterday. It was Mrs. Rush's first major win. Fishbein is an expert with many victories to his credit. He was a member of the Kaplan team that won the Vanderbilt Cup in 1937.

The pair in second place were Mrs. H. E. Latter, of Wilmington, and Jesse Slutt, of New York. They had never played together before and were paired by the management only five minutes before the first session. The position carries nine national points and completes Mrs. Latter's qualifications.

The winners scored 310.9 match points, a lead of 4.6 over the runners up. They had qualified with a carryover of 11.9, two points less than Mrs. Latter and Slutt.

Mrs. Lillian Peck and Morrie Elis, of New York, made third place. Charles Goren, the Philadelphian who is the ranking master in the country, and Mrs. R. C. Young, also a Pennsylvanian, placed fourth. Mrs. J. A. Faulkner and P. E. Sheardown, fifth, are members of the Canadian team who won the western Pennsylvania championships last week. This pair was picked to win the national mixed pair, as they had entered the finals with the maximum carryover of 23.5 points. They had led their section in both qualifying rounds, scoring a total of 413 match points for two sessions.

Sixth place went to Mrs. Mabel Ervin and Robert Appleyard, also New Yorkers. All these leaders are stars of the first magnitude.

Mrs. Charles Kavanaugh and Lester Johnson came seventh, topping all local pairs, and scoring 272 match points. Mrs. A. P. Stockvis and Al Roth, of this city, finished in twelfth place, after qualifying second in their section, having a carryover of 13.8 points.

Only seven local pairs escaped elimination. Beside those mentioned, there were Mrs. Harold Young and H. S. Woodard, runners-up in the District championships; Mrs. M. R. West and L. R. Watson, jr.; Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hamlin; Mrs. Rose Robins and A. I. Westrich, and Mrs. Daisy H. Mott and Edgar Perkins.

Mrs. Frederick Van Nuys, wife of the Senator from Indiana, was prevented from playing by the departure of her partner, R. J. Gray, of Indianapolis.

One of the most interesting hands of the mixed pair game was played in section E, in the second qualifying round. Top on the board was won by Mrs. Al Sobel and Phil Abramsohn. They were the only pair to reach a grand slam in no-trump. The hand follows:

North (Abramsohn)
S—K J 10 5 4 3 2
H—A K 10
D—None
C—10 7 3

West	East
S—8	S—9 6
H—7 6 4	H—J 5 3
D—K J 8 6 5	D—Q 10 9 7
C—K J 8 4.	C—9 6 2

South (Mrs. Sobel)
S—A Q 7
H—Q 9 8 2
D—A 4 2
C—A Q 5

Mrs. Sobel, bid the grand slam contract, after her partner had opened the bidding with a spade she bid 2 hearts. Abramsohn then bid 2 spades and Mrs. Sobel jumped to 7 notrump. The hand was played against Mrs. Peck and Morrie Elds. Mrs. Peck led the singleton spade which Mrs. Sobel won in her own hand. She then ran 7 spade tracks, the heart suit broke, bringing in four tricks, and the two minor aces were cashed.

The consolation game for disqualified pairs resulted in a tie between Mr. and Mrs. Warren Gardner, of Washington, and Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Bayliss, Richmond. Both pairs scored 183½ match points. Runners-up were Mrs. W. M. Anderson and Donald Farquharson, of Belleville, Ontario. Mrs. C. W. Zimmer and Mrs. Dora Schwartz, fourth and Mrs. W. S. Athey and C. Pennebaker, fifth. All the last-named pairs are Washingtonians.

Miss Shirley Schwartz and H. R. King won the amateur game for a second successive victory in two days. The winners played in the north-south positions. Mrs. Alma Byrne and Isaak H. York won in the east-west. Runners-up in both positions were Mrs. F. Samuel and C. C. McDonnell and Mrs. Jack Bennet and J. A. Dearing.

The first qualifying session for open teams-of-four began play at 9 o'clock last evening. It will be continued at 2 o'clock this afternoon and the finals will be played tonight.

Minors Blamed For Great Part Of Auto Deaths

Drivers Having Previous Accidents Also Cited by Research Aide.

Drivers under 21 years of age and drivers who have had a high mishap rate in the past are most apt to become involved in automobile accidents, H. M. Johnson told the Highway Research Board in session at the National Research Council yesterday.

The deduction, Johnson, who is a research associate with the board, pointed out, was based on accident histories of 29,531 Connecticut drivers, selected at random, each of whom had been licensed for six years.

Almost twice as many motorists under 21 were involved in fatal highway accidents, he asserted, and the ratio for nonfatal accidents was fully one and one-half times the average.

"If these relations are Nation-wide," Johnson pointed out, "we could have saved about 3,100 lives in 1937 by bringing the fatal accident rate of persons under 21 to the average of their elders.

Repeaters are responsible for many catastrophes of the highways, Johnson said. Those who have three or more accidents during an earlier period had between seven and nine times as many accidents during the six-year period studied as those who never had been involved in accidents before.

"While a first objective should be to segregate operators prone to accident and either eliminate them or change their habits by educational methods, it is evident that to reduce highway accidents to the lowest possible terms a long pull must be directed toward reduction of accidents more or less according to the laws of chance," he said.

One-way streets practically eliminate head-on collisions and side-swipe accidents between vehicles proceeding in the opposite direction, but make extra travel necessary to reach certain destinations and thereby increase accident exposure, M. H. Aldrich, assistant professor of civil engineering at the University of Vermont, asserted.

"Another disadvantage of one-way streets is the probability of accidents and confusion where the streets are not one-way throughout," he added.

Meanwhile, in a talk before the Cosmopolitan Club, traffic hazards as related to prospective motor vehicle operators were described by Dr. Edwin H. Silver, chairman of the Motor Vision Commission of the American Optometric Association for the past ten years.

He said persons with perfect vision could drive 60 miles an hour; with 80 per cent vision, 49 miles an hour; 60 per cent, 37 miles an hour; 50 per cent, 30 miles an hour; 40 per cent vision, never beyond 35 miles an hour, while the person with only 20 per cent vision is never safe at any speed over 12 miles an hour.

Child Birth Deaths Cut At Gallinger

Dr. Jacobs Submits Evidence of Hospital Improvements.

Clinic Facilities Co-ordinated With Home Treatment.

By Gerald G. Gross

Specific evidence that reforms recently instituted by the Health Department are helping relieve congestion at Gallinger Hospital was submitted yesterday by Dr. J. Bay Jacobs, director of maternal welfare.

Home delivery service and expansion of prenatal clinic facilities, begun in September, are resulting in a lower maternity death rate and playing an important role in curbing syphilis, as well as keeping overcrowding on the obstetrical ward at Gallinger to a minimum, he reported to Health Officer George C. Ruhland.

All Facilities Utilized.

"Heretofore, prenatal care had been rendered certain patients of Gallinger Hospital by the clinics of various private hospitals and by the clinics of the Health Department," Dr. Jacobs said. "There was practically no continuity of service between the clinics and the hospitals in regard to the treatment of indigent maternity patients.

"These women, after receiving prenatal care in some clinic, would enter Gallinger Hospital for delivery or be delivered in the home through services maintained by the medical schools. Important data acquired at the clinic concerning physical abnormalities and treatment were not available to the physicians rendering delivery care.

"With the institution of our present system, all existing facilities are utilized, patients are rendered complete obstetric care of a high character which is second to no other indigent service in the country, and the clamor which existed up until a few months ago because of the overcrowding of obstetrical wards and corridors at Gallingers has been silenced."

The report states that only 58 per cent of indigent women are being sent to Gallinger for maternity care, the remainder being assigned to home delivery. The latter type of service, said Dr. Jacobs, has brought about "a much lower material death rate than any hospital in Washington."

182 New Admissions.

When the present maternity set-up was created last September there were 182 new admission to the department's prenatal clinics during that month, compared to 48 in September, 1936. In October new admissions rose to 198, compared to 45 during the same month last year.

For the first three weeks of last month there were 151 new clinic patients, compared to 41 during the entire month of November last year.

Meantime, the United States Public Health Service yesterday awaited a formal request from the District Commissioners to conduct a public health survey in the Capital, including Gallinger Hospital and the Glenn Dale tuberculosis sanatoria.

Pending receipt of the letter, Dr. Robert Olesen, assistant surgeon general in charge of sanitary reports and statistics, has not been officially notified that he will direct the study, though Surgeon General Thomas Parran said Wednesday night he would receive the assignment.

Freedmen's Study Begun.

The scope of the investigation will depend upon the wishes of the Commissioners, Acting Surgeon General W. F. Draper said. Before leaving for New York yesterday, Dr. Parran indicated that the coming survey will follow the lines of the one conducted in 1927, bringing it up to date and covering such additional points as the Commissioners may recommend.

Richard MacKenzie, New York consultant whom the Bureau of the Budget engaged last summer to appraise hospitals supported by federal funds, began his study of Freedmen's yesterday. The Budget Bureau now has before it the informal report he submitted following a brief investigation he made of Gallinger last month.

Children's House Occupies New Quarters Today

Patsy Ann Parker, 3, and Bobby Preese, 4, will have considerably more room for their youthful energies after the Georgetown Childrens' House opens new quarters this afternoon at 3224 N street northwest. The new place, a special gift, will accommodate several more children than can be taken care of in present quarters. Two nurseries are operating in the present rented building.

'Blinkers' on Cabs Considered To Tell Criminals Are Riding

Maj. Brown Weighs Baltimore System for D. C. After Holdups of 2 Drivers, But Hesitates to Put Cost on Taxi Men.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, has been considering the installation of "danger blinkers" atop District taxi cabs, which would warn police when drivers believe they have passengers the police are seeking, he revealed yesterday.

Discussion of the "blinker" system, now in use in Baltimore, followed close upon the heels of the holdups of two District drivers, John T. Reeves, 26, of Colmar Manor, Md., and Sandy I. Pullman, of 1227 New Jersey avenue, both of whom were victimized after they had picked up passengers who turned out to be bandits.

Possibility of installation here is still remote, Maj. Brown said, because he is reluctant to ask drivers to install the lights at a cost of $1.50 to $5 each.

He is personally interested in the idea, however.

$5,751 Is Added To Chest Fund as Drive Continues

Contributions from various units continued to come to the Community Chest headquarters yesterday in the extended drive, $5,751.13 reaching the coffers during the day. Largest amount received was from the Governmental unit, which turned in $3,335.20 for yesterday and Wednesday.

H. L. Rust, jr., a member of the Tenth Anniversary Campaign Committee, upped his gift by $75, and H. L. Rust, sr., added $350 to his previous contribution. The Group solicitation Unit received $580 from one area. In another employes of the Haskin Service added $63 to their previous gift.

A contribution of $150 was sent in by Mr. and Mrs. George P. Hoover; Mrs. John Cammack, sr., contributed $100; from Alexandria a total of $922.93 additional was received and Montgomery county sent an additional $175.

2d Memorial Service To Be Held for Dewey

A second memorial service for Admiral George Dewey to be held at 11 a. m., December 26, in the Washington Cathedral was announced yesterday by Washington's Vermont Society. The Very Rev. Noble C. Powell will speak.

Texas Pastor Gets Post at Cathedral

The Rev. Everett Holland Jones, rector of St. Paul's Church, Waco, Tex., has accepted the canon chancellorship of Washington Cathedral, Bishop James E. Freeman said yesterday. He will take over his new duties the middle of next month, Bishop Freeman said.

Dr. Jones studied at the Virginia Theological Seminary and has been frequently at the College of Preachers of the Cathedral as student, long-term fellow and as a leader in the college conference for the clergy.

He is a native of San Antonio, Tex., the son of Richard C. and Enid Holland Jones. He attended the University of Texas and Columbia University and was graduated from Virgina Theological Seminary in 1926. Ordained in 1927, he was rector for three years at Grace Church, Cuero, Tex., before going to Waco.

Sale Brings Pupils 152 More Lunches

Needy school children are insured 152 more free lunches today as a result of a "grease and bone" sale made at Central Kitchen, where the lunches are prepared.

The sale was made to a soap concern and the price paid was $10.70.

"We think the transcation proves our point that every little bit helps. It also shows how closely we are cutting corners, and I hope it will inspire others to contribute," said Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the Citizens Emergency Committee in charge of the lunch campaign.

Northeast Group Elects Officers

A. F. E. Scheer, of the Dahlgren Terrace Citizens Association, last night was re-elected president of the Northeast Conference of Citizens Associations, meeting in the Twelfth Precinct Station.

Other officers chosen for the year were Marvin M. McLean, of Brookland, vice president, and W. A. Driggers, of Kenilworth, secretary.

A special committee was appointed to make a study and submit a report on "the inadequacy of hospital and dispensary services in Northeast Washington." Its members included Dr. George Ellis, of Brookland; W. B. Bollinger and George E. Miller, jr., both of Metropolis View.

Another committee was appointed to study the possibilities of a boys' club in the area north of the railroad tracks, in the Rhode Island avenue section.

Its members included Fred McDonald, of Burroughs Heights; J. J. Hurley, of Michigan Park, and Marvin McLean, of Brookland.

Rep. Collins May Retaliate For Fare Rise

Appropriations Aide Hints Salary Cuts Might Punish P. U. C.

Randolph Will Resume Transit Inquiry Early in January.

Chairman Collins of the House sub-committee on District appropriations is planning to investigate the street railway fare case in connection with the Public Utilities Commission's budget, it was learned yesterday.

While Representative Collins (Democrat), of Mississippi, said he is not ready to disclose his plan, he indicated that it may take the course of punishing the commission by reducing personnel or salaries.

Collins, who clashed with the members of the commission during hearings last session over whether or not a telephone inquiry was needed, previously had denounced the commission's order allowing the Capital Transit Co. an increase in the token fare from 7½ to 8 1-3 cents.

The commission was punished several years ago by another chairman of the House sub-committee on District appropriations by having its staff reduced substantially, and it still is trying to have the personnel restored.

Members of the commission in their estimates this year said they had been handicapped and that the public has suffered by reason of the inadequate personnel.

Meanwhile Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, formally scheduled the resumption of the Capital Transit Co. inquiry by a sub-committee of the House District Committee for the first week in January.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, author of the 7-cent fare and the two-man car bills, is studying a mass of data on the local utility set-up furnished by the Public Utilities Commission.

He said that that his inquiry will go into the financial structure of the North American Co., which controls the Capital Transit Co., as well as the streetcar and bus fares and operations.

Tennis Court Permits.

Permits to play on the concrete tennis courts opened yesterday at Seventeenth street and Constitution avenue northwest may be obtained at the permit office, National Capital Parks, new Interior Building.

The Fabled 'Eighties' Live Again in Reminiscence As Old-Stagers Meet in Mr. Evans' Dressing-Room

A. G. Andrews and Theodore Hardy, Veteran Players, Bring Back the Days of Booth in 'Richard' in '83; Reform Among the Postmen; New Paramount Pictures for Loew's; Shuberts Coming to Town; Notes.

IT WAS an interesting 15 minutes in Maurice Evans' dressing room at the National Theater after Wednesday afternoon's sell-out matinee performance of "King Richard II."

One suspects that at some time in his life Mr. Evans must have lived next door to a firehouse. Despite the late curtain that rings down on "Richard," at 5:25 by the wrist-clock, Mr. Evans—who, out of grease paint, comports himself less like an actor than any distinguished player I have ever met—was properly scoured and simonized, sitting comfortably at his dressing table in a nicely tailored brown suit, listening to that eminent former Shakespearean actor, Theodore Hardy, reminisce concerning the distant days when he played with Edwin Booth and "King Richard II" was one of the plays in their repertoire.

BELL.

Although Mr. Hardy never played in the piece himself, he cherishes imperishable memories of the Booth portrayal of the role now done such magnificent justice by the young gentleman upon whom he was calling. He had "called the turn" on the Evans interpretation before he had seen it, by committing himself to the belief that it would be better than Booth's. He was backstage to express personally to Mr. Evans the complete corroboration of his original judgment.

Booth, as Mr. Hardy pointed out, was essentially a tragic actor. If a role possessed the merest grain of tragedy, he shrouded the part in all of the sable trappings of abject grief and desperation. There was none of the lighter relief in Booth's characterization that Mr. Evans brings in such abundant measure to his. This is what Mr. Hardy was saying.

It was back in 1883 and '84 that Mr. Hardy played with Booth in the old Fifth Avenue Theater in New York. This suggested to Allan Attwater, company manager—or maybe it was to Eddie Plohn, manager of the National—that A. G. Andrews, the venerable gardener in "Richard," was playing in this country at about that time and that he and Mr. Hardy would have much in common.

Mr. Andrews, a little later, popped into the room, looking a quarter of a century younger than the octogenarian he is, and then all of us who thing we have memories—including even Mr. Evans, I believe—shrank into obscure corners and marveled at some real feats of mental retention.

Mr. Andrews seemed to know every play in which Mr. Hardy ever had appeared and Mr. Hardy was no less informed on the Andrews career. To prove it, each quoted long passages from ancient plays to sharpen recollection and bring back visions of the stage of a half-century ago. A library of stage lore was spilled right there on the spot.

On Saturday afternoon Mr. Hardy plans to present Mr. Evans with a silver-point etching of Booth, and a pen-and-ink portrait study to Mr. Andrews, both of which he executed himself. Mr. Hardy is by way of being an artist as well as a distinguished actor.

When we left, the stage entrance of the National was choked with idol worshipers and Mr. Evans was autographing a stack of programs, photographs and souvenir booklets of the play as high as his head. After that, all he had to do was audition some incidental music for a future production, keep a few appointments, dine and then go on again at 8:30.

Easy life, this being the best classic actor of your day!

Probably because the Christmas spirit is beginning to get into the air—I said "air," not "hair"—the postman behaved much better yesterday. That big package, about the size of a 24-sheet, all done in heavy board, was a Norman Rockwell portrait drawing of Gary Cooper, cordially inscribed to this desk by its subject. All framed, it is, and ready to hang in some favorable spot on Gallatin street walls that already are crowded with similarly prized mementoes. The other bundle was the life story of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, a sort of "Who's Who" of the M-G-M lot, containing complete biographies of all of the company's stars, featured players and directors and a brief history of the organization. This is from Rudy Berger, Washington manager for M-G-M. I am deeply grateful for them both and take back all I said yesterday about the mail carrier's being a no-good guy.

* * * *

Speaking of pictures of one sort or another, Master Ray "No Relation" Bell is tuning up his tripewriter and his beggary to pre-empt a spot of space for the new Paramount pitchers just dumped on his desk to augment the M-G-M, United Artists and Twentieth Century-Fox releases that find their way to Loew screens in the Capital.

Paramount, it seems, has chipped in, for early exhibition, with "True Confession," with Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray and John Barrymore cavorting in what is described as one of the most hilarious comedies of recent months; "The Buccaneer," with Frederic March and the screen's newest star, Francisca Gaal; Gladys Swarthout and John Boles in "Romance in the Dark," a film which abounds in melody and mirth, and "The Thrill of a Lifetime," featuring the Yacht Club Boys—Adler, Mann, Kelly and Kern.

"True Confession" marks the first time since that gay thing called "The Twentieth Century"—meaning the train—that John Barrymore and Carole Lombard have appeared in the same film. It was probably the memory of that earlier association that impelled the youngest of the Barrymores to make the tacit reply, when some one suggested to him that he "stole the picture," that "no one steals anything from Miss Lombard." The gal's a fellow-Hoosier.

* * * *

Just to make it impressive, No Relation also jots down that Walter Wanger's "Fifty-Second Street," giant musical; Nelson Eddy and Eleanor Powell in "Rosalie," and Twentieth Century-Fox "Love and Hisses," with Ben Bernie and Simone Simon, also are coming along to the Loew screens soon. What is it we always say? Oh yes, nice going. That's what we always say.

Lee Shubert, president of the Shubert producing firm, and Milton Shubert, producer of "Love of Women" and "The Housemaster," coming in the order named to the National these next two weeks, will be in Washington next Monday night to attend the opening performance of the former—play, not Shubert.

"Love of Women," having played three weeks on the road, goes into New York direct from the National engagement. The Messrs. Shubert will be here to pass final judgment on the production in its perfected state. The advance sale opened yesterday and is reported by Manager Plohn to be exceptionally good for a practically unknown quantity. Unknown, that is, except in London, where the play had a run.

* * * *

Flash!

Ignore all reference to "The Housemaster" as a coming National attraction. It was canceled last night at 9:15 by wire from C. P. Greneker, of the Shubert offices in New York.

Postmaster General James A. Farley and John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O., attended the performance of "King Richard II" at the National last night—but not together.

Wild Tartar vandals again ride their plunging steeds into the drawing rooms of the palaces of the aristocrats of Poland; the Countess Marie Walewska, beautiful young wife of an aged husband, once more defies Napoleon Bonaparte and then succumbs to the persistence of his wooing—and the career of the Little Corsican ends in tragic gloom because he would not listen to her counsels.

"Conquest" is back on F street.

In this immensely spectacular Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the incidents and events surrounding the one great love in the life of the conqueror, which opened yesterday at the Columbia, the stellar roles are played in their best manner by Greta Garbo and Charles Boyer, as the Countess Walewska and Bonaparte. Associated with them in assignments of rich opportunity and dramatic importance are a fine group of players, led by Henry Stephenson, Reginald Owen, Dame May Whitty, Mme. Ouspenskaya, Leif Erikson, Alan Marshall, Claude Gillingwater and hosts of others.

There are scenes of unusual fiber between the costars between Boyer and Mme. Ouspenskaya, in which the Emperor is discomfitted by the frankness of a dowager whose mind is weakening; between Napoleon and his small son, of whose existence he has been unaware, and other sequences that are unusual in a drama dealing with mighty events in the history of Europe.

Contrasted with these less pretentious intervals are others of stupendous pageantry and pictorial magnificence. In all of them, Garbo plays with repression and consummate skill; Boyer with perhaps the finest conception of the character of Napoleon the American stage or screen has known. It is all eminently worth seeing.

Brief supplementaries and "Events of the Day" augment a major feature of extravagant length and notable brilliance.

Shrapnel Hurts Screen Player

A lying piece of shrapnel in Shanghai, which scarred the hip of James Cattern, former clerk in a Los Angeles County Superior Court, nearly put an end to his plans to be technical adviser and act in Universal's "Deadlocked," a picture which features Kent Taylor, Larry Blake Fay Wray and Nan Grey as principal characters in a murder trial.

Cattern was in the International Settlement in Shanghai August 14, waiting for transportation to the United States, when Japanese shells began to fall in his vicinity. One blast ripped out the facade of the hotel he was standing near and as he dived for shelter behind a pile of masonry, the shrapnel clipped him.

Bathing Beauty.

Styles in sentiment are matters of fun after a few seasons, but there is something dateless about big adventure and earthly comedy.

This seems to be the moral of "The Covered Wagon," as revived heartily Wednesday night by the enterprising Film Society of Washington. The playful but highly pleased audience, besides hissing villain Alan Hale and applauding the nobler sub-titles, fell into astonished laughter over the amorous antics of beautiful Lois Wilson and J. Warren Kerrigan.

But the great spectacle of the covered wagon caravan trailing over the prairie, the fording of the treacherous River Platte with wagons, horses and cattle; the fighting with Indians in a narrow trap of a canyon; the killing of the buffalo in the ancient and rather glorious fashion—all these were something else again. No modern picture has anything finer to show in action or photography than these sequences. Best of them was probably the fording of the Platte, packed with beauty, and the sense of danger.

There was plenty of laughter, too, hearty and not mocking, at Tully Marshall and Ernest Torrence, a tough and unbroken old pair of Western broncos, of fabulous thirsts and a sacrilegious disregard of mere human life, either their own or others. Add onto that, quaint, tobacco-chewing 10-year-old Johnny Fox, and again try to find the current film that can do better in comedy or character richness.

Equally enjoyable as souvenirs of the past, but with their dramatic values completely turned to comedy by the passage of time were "The Last Card," starring William S. Hart and Louise Glaum, and "The Great Train Robbery" which brought the famed "Bronco Billy" Anderson to the films.

Oddly enough, it is "The Great Train Robbery," made in 1903, as against "The Last Card," made in 1914, that retains more life and spirit. This again reflects the celluloid moral of "The Covered Wagon," since the "Bronco Billy" opus is all action and no sentiment, while the William S. Hart vehicle fairly drools sweetness and light and love.

If we are to retain a vestige of faith in Bill Hart, the Film Society will have to dig up the picture in which he was toughest and dabbled least in the tender emotions.

Just to think that in 20 years our grandchildren will probably laugh too cynically at a revival of Robert Taylor's best heartbreaker! We'll bet that if the F. S. W. will bring out one of "Buddy" Rogers' cutie-boy pictures of a few years ago, the audience will find it funny right now.

Arts Club.

The muse of laughter pulls the strings with a high hand during the Arts Club's production of "Fresh Fields," a rollicking, roisterous comedy by Ivan Novello. The farce under the excellent direction of Marie E. Walcott, has been staged with a fine sense of timing, and except for a slow pacing of the first act (a seemingly chronic ailment of the drama), moves rapidly to an hilarious climax; with some of the lines which might even make Noel Coward turn a light shade of magenta, proving more than delectable to the responsive audience.

The action of the play reveals the dilemma of two ladies of the British nobility who are impoverished, one by loss of lucre and the other for lack of love, who endeavor to better their circumstances. Lady Mary Crabbe, who has unsuccessfully schemed to marry her son to wealth, contrives the idea of converting her mansion into a home for paying guests, but when said guests arrive in the persons of Australian colonials, with bushman manners, and ambitions for Buckingham Palace entre, the bite has almost proven too vast for mastication. But love finds its usual way, Sonny becomes enamored of the Australian debutante; Lady Lillian, the frigid spinster, thaws completely when she meets her nemesis in a truly masterful male, and the two mothers gallivant to the rest of Europe for fun and fashion.

Of the more than splendid cast, Anne Ives, as Lady Mary, captures stellar honors with her delightful portrayal, not missing a point in her lines. Maude Howell Smith gives an extremely convincing and enchanting characterization as Mrs. Pidgeon, the social climber with a yen for slang. Paul Murphy, plus a seductive pair of mutton chops, and minus several "haitches," scuttles and buttles most engagingly as Ludlow, the footman.

Dorothy Winchcole, Ruth Blaine Piggot, Ben Smart, Elizabeth Sypher, Wilma Flood and Herman Riess, who also deserves mention for comedy skill, complete the cast. The attractive single set was designed by Hugo Inden.

Many Hobbies.

Lew Ayers, currently portraying the leading male role in "Scandal Street," boasts of nine separate hobbies: astronomy, music, wood-carving, amateur photography, sculpture, collecting first editions and gathering old phonograph records among others.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Dec. 2.

ENTERPRISE: Billy Rose, who in his last Broadway venture had his name in lights 14 stories high, was asked whether he would be interested in taking over the French Casino. He pointed to the Casino Building and replied: "I'm not interested. It's too small for me." . . . "But Mr. Rose," his interrogator persisted, "that cafe had been grossing $50,000 a week. Is that too small?" . . . "I wasn't referring to the gross," the producer explained. "By 'too small' I meant the height of the building. It's too small for my 'Billy Rose' signs."

• • • •

ART: Henry Boltinoff, the cartoonist, recently drew a cartoon for the magazine For Men Only. It showed a sandwich man carrying a sign: "For Parties, Theater, Dinner, Supper—Call Mamie LeMaire, Academy 4-1996. Good Drinker. Good Sport." . . . Mr. Boltinoff now is regretting using that phone number—for no sooner did the magazine appear on the stands than readers called that number and asked for "Mamie." . . . The phone number is that of his fiancee.

• • • •

CHATTER: "Of Mice and Men" leads so far for the Critics Circle Prize . . . And now another cafe casualty: The Club Cavalier closed its doors . . . Harold Shattuck, head of Schraffi's, and Arthur Brown wagered $500 that they wouldn't take a drink until May 1 . . . Pat Rooney will open a restaurant at W. Fifty-seventh street next week . . . An agent is said to be booking a local tour for the Vatican Choir . . . Vernon McFarlane, he decorator who gave a command performance in drag, for British royalty, will appear as an ex-female impersonator in Phil Barry's new show.

• • • •

FAME: Herbert Wilcox, producer of "Victoria the Great," went to Hollywood, where his star, Anna Neagle, made a personal appearance at the picture's opening . . . "How does it feel to be a big shot in Hollywood?" Wilcox later was asked . . . "Oh, positively marvelous," he replied. "Everybody had to ask my name, except Constance Collier—and she called me Hitchcock."

• • • •

TURMOIL: John Trent, star of the forthcoming "Blossoms of Broadway," was a T. W. A. pilot until B. P. Schulberg discovered him some months ago and signed him. T. W. A. now is publicizing the fact that the star of this picture was a T. W. A. man and points pridefully to his accomplishment . . . What isn't being publicized is the fact that Richard Wallace, director of this film, was hurt in that plane tragedy—when a movie crew flew East to screen "Annapolis Farewell"—and his suit against T. W. A. is still pending.

• • • •

COURTESY: Arthur Cremin went to Washington recently to pose with the President in regard to a music project. After the photo ceremonies were over, Cremin, somewhat excited, thanked the President for posing with him. "But since this is the first time I've been honored this way," he confessed, "I really do not know what to say. Tell me, Mr. President, what does one say after he is through posing for pictures with the President?" . . . "Well," Roosevelt answered, "When he is as busy as I am right now, one usually says, 'Good day, Mr. President.'"

• • • •

PREMIERE: Bill Robinson, Broadway's No. 1 entertainer, returned to the Cotton Club. He was told of the Kleig lights in the street, went downstairs, and when the sidewalk mob cheered, he tap-danced for them . . . Jack Larue, menace of the screen, who was introduced, was scared off the floor—by a simple microphone . . . Helen Morgan sat on the bar, because the room was so crowded, secured a dog-doll, auctioned it for $50 and gave the proceeds to a Harlem charity . . . Mayor LaGuardia wired Robinson, who is mayor of Harlem, "If one mayor tap-dances, the other mayor is kept busy keeping the traffic open for customers to come and see him."

• • • •

REVENGE: John Anderson, the drama critic, has been attacking all the British reviewers, advising them to remain in England, etc. As a result the foreign critics aren't on friendly or even speaking or writing terms with him . . . That's why the N. Y. Drama Critics Circle have appointed Anderson—corresponding secretary!

• • • •

YOUTH: George Roosevelt, jr., became tired of cafe society last night and told some of the regulars that they were horses' necks. To illustrate, graphically, what he means, the youngster went to a Sixty-second Street Riding Academy at 10 p. m., hired a horse and rode it to the Paradise, 21, El Morocco and the Stork. He tried to ride the horse into each of these cafes and was refused . . . "If they won't let me bring you into these clubs," Roosevelt told the steed, "I'll bring the clubs to you." . . . And so at every cafe he gathered up all the sugar from the tables and fed it to the horse—advertising covers and all.

SUCCESS: Charles B. Cochran, the British producer, now is negotiating a deal to bring Orson Welles' modern-dress "Julius Caesar" to Stratford-on-Avon . . . the first time in history that an American Shakespeare troupe will entertain at the Bard's birthplace.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Dec. 2.—Several weeks ago I agreed to produce a series of two-reel pictures which will be presented under the title of "Jimmie Fidler's Personality Parade." They show old-time scenes, both off-screen and on-screen, of former stars, a few of whom have passed from the screen forever. The film was gathered and edited, and I started the job of writing and recording the commentation. I was emotionally upset for days after it was finished.

• • • •

Those people were my friends—close personal friends, many of them. Seeing them trooping across the screen once more, after all these years, was like sitting at a seance and have some master medium summon up the shades of long dead loved ones. Anita Stewart, Henry B. Walthall, Wallace Reid, Theodore Roberts, Alma Rubens, May McAvoy, Colleen Moore, Marie Dressler. Some dead—some retired—but all of them dead to the millions of fans who loved them. It brought home to me the fact that the final exit of a great star is a little death.

One or two, perhaps, retired voluntarily; most of them lost out because of a few poor pictures, which were no more their fault than the fault of the producers who ruled them out. Anyone with an ounce of sentiment and loyalty cannot help burning when he realizes that this is the only business on earth which discounts experience.

The matron in charge of lady stars' dressing rooms at Metro comes forth with a new Garbo anecdote. . . radio salesman has been trying to get an interview with the elusive Swede. Finally, he appealed to the matron, and she carried his literature and arguments into the Great One's dressing room. Garbo listened with her customary stolidity, then walked to a widow and flung it open. Across the narrow court, Jeanette MacDonald was rehearsing songs for her next picture. From the men's section boomed the barytone of Nelson Eddy. And from the nearby recording studio came the music of a string orchestra. "Gott!" said Garbo, "Vy sould I buy a radio!"

At Warner Brothers today I met an old acquaintance, Lawrence Gray. Wonder how many of you recall that name? Eight or nine years ago, Larry was one of the screen's most promising young actors. He played leads opposite Gloria Swanson, Marion Davies, Colleen Moore—then, almost overnight, went into a mysterious tailspin. He is working as an assistant director now, earning one-tenth of the salary he received as an actor. But no need to feel sorry for him—he likes the job.

Plans for New Group Clinic Studied Here

Medical Co-operative Is Under Consideration by Federal Experts.

Preliminary plans for the establishment of a "co-operative association for medical care," which might bring its membership up to 40,000 or 50,000 men and women, were considered yesterday by a group of Government experts, headed by Dr. Paul M. Pearson, former Governor of the Virgin Islands.

Dr. Pearson is chairman of the group, and Dr. A. C. Edwards, of the Department of Agriculture, is secretary.

Although the group at present is separate from the embattled Group Health Association of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, now under attack from the District Medical Society, the feasibility of co-operating, and perhaps uniting with the association, is being considered.

The group which met yesterday afternoon was a special sub-committee of the Committee for Co-operative Medical Service for Federal Employes, organized formally last May as an outgrowth of several separate groups of Government people in various parts of the Federal service.

Directors include Dr. Pearson, Dr. Morris Copeland, of the Central Statistical Board; Robert B. Craig, Miss M. A. Schnurr, Isidore Lubin, of the Department of Labor; Miss Mary Anderson, director of the Woman's Bureau of the Department of Labor; H. T. Cory and Miss Bern Berard.

"I think we will work out a co-operative association for medical care along the lines of the Group Health Association," said Edwards, "although it may take some time to do it."

Seal Investigating Association.

Group Health Association now is the subject of an inquiry in the office of Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal. The Medical Society has submitted briefs in opposition, and officials of the Home Loan Bank Board in support of the movement.

Seal requested yesterday the HOLC to submit a supplementary brief containing more information concerning the contract which binds the employe and the corporation.

Speaking for "a large number of physicians," Dr. Wallace Yater, professor of medicine at Georgetown University, head of the medical staff of Gallinger Hospital and a member of the executive committee of the society, branded the new venture "just another step in the direction of bureaucracy."

"It is hamburger service," said Dr. Yater, "not unlike a quick lunch counter. The people get about what they pay for. These folk think they're doing the right thing. They will be sadly disappointed."

Organizers of the new health group include Dr. Warner W. Stockberger, personnel director of the Department of Agriculture; Theodore S. Wilson, jr., personnel director of the Farm Credit Administration; Otto S. Beyer, National Mediation Board, and John Carmody, Rural Electrification Administrator.

Health Center Site Debated.

Efforts are being made to sell the Homeopathic Hospital to the District Commissioners for conversion into the first health center, it was learned yesterday, but District officials indicated they prefer to go ahead with the original plan.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, however, said that the matter will be taken up at budget hearings to start shortly before Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee on District appropriations.

Owners of the Homeopathic Hospital have made overtures to the commissioners, it was said, and prices ranging up to $300,000 have been discussed. The hospital, now located at Second and N streets northwest, would be rebuilt in Tennallytown.

The site is close to the Jones Elementary School, which was selected last year as the health center site. While school officials at first were adverse to vacating the school, they recently stated that the property will be available shortly after the first of next year.

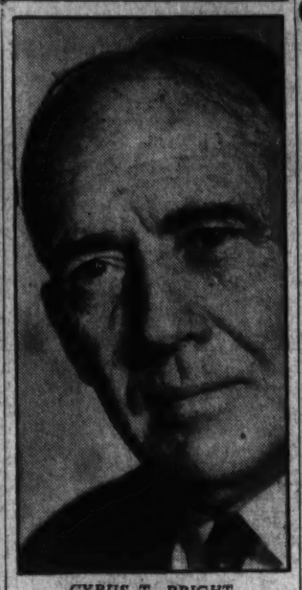
The 1938 District appropriations act carried $165,000 for construction of the first health center on the Jones School grounds. District officials estimate the value of the land at $35,000, which would bring the total value of the health center to $200,000.

However, an appropriation of $140,000 will be necessary, it was said, to replace the Jones Elementary School.

The decision, the commissioners indicated yesterday, will rest with the District appropriations subcommittees.

Stay-at-Home Gets His Travel Second-Hand, Auditing Bills

Commerce Veteran Feels He Knows World He Never Has Seen.



CYRUS T. BRIGHT.

Cyrus T. Bright has approved the bills for innumerable trips around the world, yet he himself has never left the country. A Department of Commerce auditor, he observed his sixtieth birthday Wednesday and will complete his fortieth year with the Government next summer.

Bright's job is to audit vouchers submitted by Commerce employes returning from field trips to Europe, Asia and Africa for the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. "No, I've never been abroad myself, but I talk to all the fellows when they come in with their expense accounts, and feel as though I've been everywhere they have," he said yesterday.

In all, Bright figures he has signed vouchers totaling more than $55,000,000 since 1898. His first job was with the Geological Survey of the Interior Department. Here he dealt chiefly with scientists who came back from Western expeditions with bills for corraling and feeding horses.

The biggest single bills he has audited were those incurred by Veterans' Bureau schools after the war. Sometimes these vouchers would be for as much as $50,000, broken down into such small items as cost of soap used by the former soldiers.

Bright has been with the Department of Commerce since 1921. A native of Washington, he attended school here and now lives at 13 Kennedy street northeast. He is married and has a son and a daughter, both of whom have married within the last three months.

Bright devotes his spare time to civic activities. He is vice president of the Chillum Heights Citizens Association, president of the Men's Club of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, a member and former vice president of the commerce branch of the National Federation of Federal Employes and a member of New Jerusalem Lodge No. 9 and the Trowel Club.

Nuckols and Aides Attack Indictments

Pleading that he would be subjected to double jeopardy in violation of his constitutional rights if he is brought to trial on two pending indictments, Carroll Peyton (Nubby) Nuckols, convicted two weeks ago of violating the District's antigaming statutes, yesterday filed technical objections to the remaining presentments.

His protest, as voiced by Attorneys Harry T. Whelan, W. B. O'Connell and William A. Gallagher, asserted that the three indictments returned against him, on one of which he was tried and found guilty, were all worded exactly alike, and failed to set out the differing addresses where the offenses, if any, allegedly occurred.

If the plea is sustained, an indictment against Nuckols, Moe Morganstein, Robert A. Murray and George W. Godfrey, all of whom were convicted with Nuckols in the first case, and a second indictment naming Nuckols and Morganstein, among others, will be dropped.

Gloria Holden Divorced.

Los Angeles, Dec. 2 (AP).—Gloria Holden, film actress, obtained a divorce today from Harold Winston, New York dramatic instructor, after testifying "He said he didn't believe in marriage for artists."

Shots Arouse 100 At Barracks Fire

Fort Howard, Md., Dec. 2 (AP).—Rifle shots gave the alarm today of a fire which destroyed one wing of a war-time barracks here and drove 100 soldiers into the cold dawn.

A sentry on duty saw the fire and fired the rifle to call aid. Then he stood under a second-floor window and tried to break the fall of three soldiers trapped by the flames. They were not hurt as they dropped from the window.

Youth Wielding Vial Robs Bank of $2,000

Forth Worth, Tex., Dec. 2 (AP).—A young man, who displayed a vial and presented a typewritten note demanding "1,000 or I'll blow you to hell," robbed the Union Bank and Trust Co. today of $2,000.

Teller Ferdie Johnson handed the robber two packets of currency he believed contained $500 each, but instead each had $1,000 in it.

Hospitalization Up to Victims Of Tuberculosis

Can Be Isolated Only by Court Order, Rules Seal's Office.

Tuberculosis patients in the contagious stage cannot be forced into quarantine or hospitalization in the District of Columbia, without court action, it was revealed yesterday in a ruling by the corporation counsel's office.

"At the present time there is no regulation in the sanitary laws of the District, or any act of Congress, that makes it compulsory for a tuberculosis patient to submit to either quarantine or hospitalization," Corporation Counsel Elwood E. Seal stated.

The corporation counsel's office made the inquiry at the request of Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer, who, in his report to Seal, told of a tuberculosis sufferer in the District who had refused hospitalization.

"I understand that this sufferer is living with his family and is endangering their health," Seal said. "However, it would be necessary for the Health Department to produce evidence that the man is actually violating a sanitary law before court action could be taken."

It was indicated by observers, however, that if the Health Department should bring the charge before the courts, it would be upheld.

First Junior Cinema To Be Held Tomorrow

The first Saturday morning motion-picture program under auspices of the Civic Sponsoring Committee of the Rialto Theater and the Pleasure Fund of the Junior Cinema Guild will be presented at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow at the Rialto. Delegations from the Boys Club of Washington, Children's Hospital, Christ Child Society, Children's Group of the E Street Y. W. C. A., Children's Emergency Council of the Central Union Mission, Friendship House, German Orphanage, Episcopal Home for Children and the Boys Club of the Metropolitan Police will be guests.

Champion Bull Is Sold By College for $2,608

Chicago, Dec. 2 (AP).—Hoarse voices of auctioneers substituted for cheers of spectators at the international livestock exposition today as exhibitors started pocketing more than a million dollars in sales and prize money to be distributed before the close of the show Saturday.

Ashbourne Orange, Oklahoma A. and M. College's grand champion steer, went to the auction block today. The grand champion went to the block weighing 1,110 pounds. Its sale, at $2.35 a pound, brought the college $2,608.50. The animal also won $500 in prize awards.

Civic Group to Meet.

The Bladensburg Road Citizens Association will meet Monday night at the Church of Christ, Twenty-eighth and Douglas streets. District suffrage, taxes and related issues will be discussed.

"The March of The Washington Post"

To celebrate its sixtieth birthday, The Washington Post presents "The March of The Washington Post," a one-hour radio show which will be the biggest ever produced in Washington. There will be 25 actors, dramatizing 30 of the events which made headlines during the 60 years of The Post's existence. Every minute will be packed with interest as these historic scenes are re-enacted: The first Post scoop (the 1879 G. P. O. robbery), Garfield's assassination, burning of The Post Building, 1887's famous 8 home-run ball game, Sousa's composition of The Washington Post March, the first electric street car, the first movie (1897), the Maine and the Spanish-American War, Dewey's homecoming, Sara Bernhardt in "L'Aiglon," the World War, to name only a few. Be sure to listen in!

Rhythm Singer To Make Debut At Mayflower

Caryl Gould From London Called Syncopator With New Style.

By Chanticleer

Caryl Gould, who has been showing Britishers how we Americans swing to the topical trend in syncopations, makes her Washington debut tonight in the Mayflower lounge. Her appearance in the smart cocktail rendezvous on Connecticut avenue is tagged "a rhythmic singer with a different style."

Caryl will take her first bow from the Mayflower lounge band stand at 9 o'clock and will be heard nightly between that hour and 2 a. m. However, she will not entirely replace the current trio of vocalists with the Sidney ork. Buddy Harmon, Sid Cowen and Bobby Simpson continue (as best they will be able with such a comely femme warbling from the same podium of swingaroo).

* * * *

Take, for instance—since we intend to talk about food—beefsteaks. They're so popular at the Shoreham that the choice item isn't even put on the menus. Chef Jacques fixes a steak in his own individual way, something that causes the diner to sit back and comment on "taste and difference." On the Blue Room floor this week: Harold Cummings, barytone; Andrew Sisters, dancing rhythm-makers, and the Titan Trio, marvels of slow motion.

* * * *

Wednesday night parties are delighting the patrons of the Pall Mall room at the Raleigh. You see it was "A Night In Argentina" last Wednesday and next week it will be "Viennese Night." And prizes for the best waltz demonstration. However, it's a long wait until Wednesday, so the choice morsel tonight (and every night) is the Champagne-Tango-Rumba Hour, nightly between 9 and 10. The best couple on the floor gets a bottle of champagne.

* * * *

* * * *

Maryland Club Gardens is featuring a titian-haired soprano good at fast repartee. Frances and Mary in a butterfly dancing creation, very garceful and lovely to look at, and Jimmie Santmyer and his orchestra for the rest of the billing . . . Beverly Stull, Ray Nelson and Jack Campbell combine plenty of talents to make your stay at the Mayfair most delightful any evening of the week.

* * * *

The Madrillon reports a grand Thanksgiving business. Just about the best in the Spanish rendezvous' history. Food does count doesn't it? Johnny Shaw and his band for your dancing. Helen Forrest sings . . . Chicken dinner, Southern style, still ranks first in the hearts of those who frequent the Boulevard Farms. Floor shows nightly and Big Apple night every Friday. Menagerie Night is scheduled for a bow soon.

New Mayflower Songstress

3 Physicians Win Prize for Alloy to Fix Broken Bones

New Orleans, Dec. 2 (AP).—Development of a new metal alloy for use in nailing and screwing broken bones together today won for three San Antonio, Tex., physicians the first prize for exhibits presented before the Southern Medical Association.

The new alloy, known as vitallium, is one for which bone surgeons have searched for years, Dr. Charles S. Venable, Dr. Walter G. Stuck and Dr. Asa Beach declared, because it does not cause electrolysis, or destruction by electrical activity, of the bone in which it is inserted. It is a combination of chromium, cobalt, tungsten and molybdenum.

Previously iron and steel pins, screws and nails have been used to fix modern bones together for knitting, they explained, but always the electrical reaction between the metal parts caused the bone around the metal to decay.

Benefit Fete Arranged By Friends of Spain

Washington friends of Spanish democracy will open a two-week Christmas campaign for needy children of loyalist Spain with a "carnival" at 8 p. m. Saturday at 1428 Euclid street northwest.

Patrons include Representative John Bernard, Mrs. John Boyle, jr., Mrs. Philip Dinowitz, Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel, Mrs. Richard Hope, Mrs. L. A. Morrison, Mrs. Barnet Nover, Mrs. Charles Putnam, Mrs. Norman T. Smiler, Representative and Mrs. Henry T. Teigan and Mrs. Clark Warburton.

Consumers' Conference To Consider Coal Prices

By the Associated Press.

A conference of consumers will meet here December 9 to consider effects of prices and marketing regulations promulgated by the Bituminous Coal Commission.

John Carson, appointed consumers' council under the coal control act, said about 300 representatives of governmental, industrial and private consumers had indicated they would attend the meeting.

Haitians Given $3,000.

A contribution of $3,000 for the relief of Haitian citizens, deported from the Dominican Republic, was announced yesterday by Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the American Red Cross.

Eccles, Jones Urge Speed on Housing Plan

RFC Head Tells Senate Homes Can Be Built for $30 a Month.

Early action on President Roosevelt's proposals to stimulate private housing was urged upon Congress yesterday by Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board's governing board, and Jesse Jones, Reconstruction Finance Corporation chairman.

Jones told the Senate Banking Committee, which is studying the Wagner bill embodying the proposals, that average homes could be built under the plan at an individual cost of $30 monthly over a 20-year period.

Asked by Senator John G. Townsend (Republican), of Delaware, if the RFC would invest $50,000,000 in housing mortgages as suggested by Mr. Roosevelt, Jones replied his agency is prepared to "co-operate fully."

Jones denied the new program would interfere with building and loan associations, explaining that these had not entered the low-cost housing field.

Eccles Praises Housing Law.

Appearing before the House Banking and Currency Committee, which is considering similar legislation, Eccles said he knew of no financial mechanism that could "so adequately finance homes to rent and homes to own" as the Federal housing law and the proposed amendments.

In another Senate quarter, meanwhile, investigation of the appointment of Nathan Straus, of New York, as administrator of the United States Housing Authority was sought, even while Straus was telling municipal housing leaders, called here for a conference Tuesday, to be prepared to "complete formulation of policies and procedure."

Asking for information, if possible on specific methods planned to raise "the necessary 10 per cent of capital cost through loans or contributions or otherwise," Straus added:

"With this information we expected in course of next week's meetings to earmark tentatively funds for various communities subject to formal submission of projects."

La Guardia Shunned Parley.

Straus' telegram was of some significance in his dispute with Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, of New York, since the mayor declined to attend the last Straus housing conference on the ground it would be indulging in "star-gazing."

In New York, meanwhile, the Associated Press reported that Langdon Post, who resigned Wednesday as chairman of the city's housing authority, had warned Straus might not make funds available to the city until he could satisfy himself as to make-up of the New York board.

Post's warning came on the heels of appointment by LaGuardia of his assistant secretary, Lester B. Stone, to membership on the authority.

The opposition to Straus will be discussed Tuesday at a meeting of the Senate Committee on education and labor, to which Straus' nomination has been referred.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, said he had submitted a memorandum to the committee 10 days ago setting forth "alleged facts bearing on the qualifications of Mr. Straus" but that until the committee has investigated "I don't care to discuss the matter."

Crop Bill Debated In Radio Forum

Participating in the symposium were Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation; Frank E. Gannett, head of a newspaper chain, and Howard Kester, member of the executive council of the Southern Tenant Farmers Association.

Gannett, opposing the plan said "the bill sets up a dictator over American farming and farmers."

Kester, describing cotton sharecropping as "the new slavery," declared: "We may and do need to conserve our soil. We also need to conserve our men, women and children. This Nation will become wise and prudent when it takes the necessary steps to return the land to those who till it."

Bounty for Babes To Eat Surpluses Urged by Woman

By the United Press.

Mrs. Ruth Hall Chatfield, of Baldwin, N. Y., descended on Congress tonight with a plan to provide cash bounties for bumper baby crops to consume farm surpluses—a proposition calculated to make Mussolini and Hitler turn an envious green.

Mrs. Chatfield's plan, primarily presented on a mimeographed sheet, was addressed to Senator James P. Pope (Democrat), of Idaho, coauthor of the Senate farm bill, and suggested that Uncle Sam pay a $500 "infant subsidy" to married American citizens each time there's a birth in the family, and if the family is large—$1,000.

"As we witness the birth rate dropping, we can only expect more and more wastful Government spending," Mrs. Chatfield observed.

Lack of Playground In Chevy Chase Scored

Lack of playground facilities for more than 600 students of the Lafayette Elementary School in Chevy Chase was attacked by members of the Home and School Association Wednesday. The organization voted to take immediate steps to obtain development of the school property.

A committee headed by A. M. Dickson was appointed to secure financial aid to develop the 17-acre tract of land which surrounds the building. Assistance from the Works Progress Administration and the Public Works Administration has already been sought by the body.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Please tell me whether it is proper for me to give my boy friend—with whom I have been going for nine years—a gold-and-onyx ring as a Christmas gift. We are not engaged but he gave me a diamond dinner ring for my birthday. We do not go steady, but we have talked a little of marriage. I have had opinions pro and con in this matter and would appreciate your opinion. Thank you.

UNCERTAIN.

* * * *

DEAR UNCERTAIN: Strictly speaking, a lady never gives any unrelated gentleman other than her fiance a gift of jewelry, and that, as a rule, only as "the bride's gift to the bridegroom," as the society commentators say. And, on the other hand, a woman is supposed—according to best social usage—not to accept gifts of jewelry from unrelated gentlemen other than the man she is engaged to marry. Yet these are hoary rules of decorum that for two decades, at least, have been more honored in the breach than in the observance by American youths and maidens who have money of their own to spend as they choose.

* * * *

The heavens won't fall and your friends won't shun you even if you do give this man a gold-and-onyx ring. Girls have been giving men such trinkets for years—rings, cuff links, shirt studs, wrist watches and watches on chains, with bland disregard for what Emily Post has to say on the subject. And I daresay their men friends liked them just as well, or possibly better, for using their sweet initiative in the matter of choosing what they meant to be a knockout gift.

* * * *

Since you've already run counter to strictest propriety in the matter of accepting a diamond dinner ring though not engaged to the donor, you might be said to have swallowed the camel and be straining at the gnat in wondering whether you can reciprocate in modest kind. M. H.

More About Gifts.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My problem is the simple one of not knowing what is considered an appropriate Christmas gift for a young man whom I have known, and with whom I have been going regularly for the past six months. As Christmas is so near, I would appreciate any suggestion you may give me, as soon as possible. Yours sincerely, MARIETTA.

* * * *

DEAR MARIETTA: Books, stationery, a letter-writing portfolio, a fountain pen, a leather billfold with his initials stamped on it, a framed print which presumably reflects either his artistic preference or his out-door hobby—such things as these make nice impersonal gifts from girls to their beaux. The gift should not be too expensive, yet excellent of its kind, and should represent casual remembrance rather than an attempt to overwhelm. M. H.

Widow Has Question.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Will you kindly tell me if it is proper, as a widow, to have one's cards engraved with one's deceased husband's name? In my State of Virginia quite a few legal documents have to be signed in the wife's own name, as for instance, "Mrs. Mary Stanley Jones." This has given rise to some uncertainty in my mind concerning the advisability of using my late husband's name. Many thanks for any light on the subject.

NEWLY WIDOWED.

* * * *

DEAR NEWLY WIDOWED: When a woman marries, she assumes her husband's name for life—or until she relinquishes it by divorce or by second marriage subsequent to widowhood. So long as she is a widow, she continues to use her husband's named prefixed by "Mrs." both on her cards and in her social contacts where the full name is used. In your case, your cards would be engraved "Mrs. John Hunter Jones," and all social and personal mail would be addressed to you under that name. This holds good even though you may be required to sign the name of "Mrs. Mary Stanley Jones" to legal papers, and though you might enter the business world and be known there as "Mrs. Mary Jones." M. H.

Marriage License Query.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I should very much like to know if there is a period of probation between the date when a marriage license is issued, and the time when marriage can be performed, in the States of Maryland and Virginia. If you can get this information, kindly let me have it through your column as soon as possible. Thank you. ANONYMOUS.

* * * *

DEAR ANONYMOUS: I am told one can be married immediately on procuring the license in the States of both Virginia and Maryland, despite the fact that efforts have been made of recent date in the latter State to enforce a probationary period of waiting. Such provision passed the legislature, but its enforcement has been held up, temporarily, at least, by a citizens' petition calling for referendum. In Virginia, if the girl to be married is a resident of the State, she must apply for license at the county seat of the county in which she resides. If she is not a resident of the State, she may apply for a license in any county. M. H.

Exotic Leathers Used for Gloves

New York (AP).—Many of the smartest gifts for men are of leather. Among them are new "jungle gloves" made of antelope, wild donkey or water moccasin skin—anything that comes from the jungle—and given a smoothly tailored finish.

Alligator and snakeskin make sleek new cigarette cases—long, narrow and closed with a folding flap top—while the smartest evening bill folds are made of black moire. Another of the season's novel Christmas gifts for men is a toilet water with a leather scent.

Towels for Children.

For a child's Christmas, give monogrammed towels. These can be purchased with the name of Tommy or Mary written across in gay embroidery. Other towels in amusing design have tin soldiers, penguins, or peasant girls marching across them.

Today's HEALTH TALK

by Logan Clendening, M. D.

Tuberculosis Instruction.

Adolescence is that time of life from 12 to 25 years of age. The commonest cause of death in that period, which one would suppose should be so healthy and so full of life and vigor, is tuberculosis. During these formative years, 20,000 young people die annually in the United States from tuberculosis.

Tuberculosis is a disease which probably begins in childhood, but assumes a different form in early adult life and adolescence. It is easier to recognize in adolescence than it is in childhood. The incidence of tuberculosis in the period between 12 and 25 is twice as great as that between the ages of 5 and 10 years. This has been proved by tuberculin tests.

Diet, clothing fads, exposure and physiological changes which occur in the body at this age may have something to do with it, but it is principally the fact that the disease, which has begun in childhood, is now blossoming.

The hopeful thing about it is that treatment at this time usually means treatment of an early case, and the chances are 50 times better that permanent cure will be obtained than if treatment is begun later in life or later in the course of the disease.

Young people at this age should receive instruction in tuberculosis especially so that they may help themselves to bring their cases to the physician.

In a series of 100 cases, the first symptoms noted were as follows:

Fatigue, tiredness	25 per cent
Cough	25 per cent
Loss of weight	14 per cent
Loss of appetite	7 per cent
Hemorrhage	7 per cent
Severe cold	7 per cent
Hoarseness	4 per cent
Pleurisy	4 per cent
Night sweats	4 per cent
High pulse	3 per cent

It will be noted that most of these symptoms are insidious, and often do not bring the patient to the physician unless their significance is known. It is pain that usually makes people go to a doctor. Fatigue is explained in many different ways, always to the satisfaction of the victim. As a matter of fact, fatigue at this age is almost always unnatural, and even extreme exertion should not bring it on.

Peasant Influence in Resort Wear

From Trimingham Bros., Bermuda.

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

THERE ARE numerous interpretations of the type of costume that is smart and appropriate for informal resort wear. You can go masculine in slacks or shorts and mannish shirts of cotton broadcloth or silk, for instance, or adapt the popular peasant influence like the model shown above. The peasant influence, according to predictions, will be important for spring, not only in casual beach attire but in frocks and suits of the spectator sports type.

In keeping with the trend started this winter for sweaters and skirts, the clever resort costume pictured here is made up of a turquoise blue skirt and sweater of angora in matching color. It has a soft little collar with tiny scalloped edges and may be worn either with or without a jacket, or a cardigan of the angora.

The Liberty silk bandana, tied peasant-style around the head, is golden corn color with painted hunting scenes; you will see many of these head-scarfs worn in town this summer, say stylists. The colorful bag is made on a unique frame of cedar; it could accompany a cotton suit or frock with equal swank.

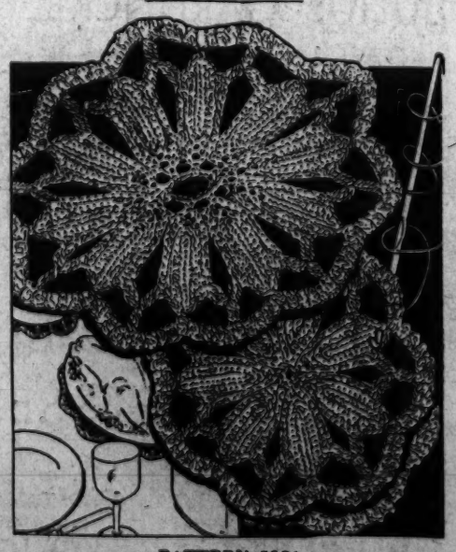
Buttered turnip greens
Head lettuce salad
Fresh nut gingerbread

FRESH NUT GINGERBREAD

1-3 cup of fat
1 cup of brown sugar
1 egg
2 teaspoons of cinnamon
1 teaspoon of ginger
1 teaspoon of cloves
1 teaspoon of nutmeg
¼ teaspoon of salt
1 cup of boiling water
½ cup of molasses
2½ cups of flour
1 teaspoon of soda
1 teaspoon of baking powder
½ cup of nuts

Cream of fat and sugar. Add the beaten egg. Sift the dry ingredients. Chop the nuts and roll in part of the flour mixture. Blend the molasses with boiling water and add alternately with flour. Stir in floured nuts. Pour into a shallow pan lined with wax paper. Bake for 30 minutes in a moderate oven. Cool. Serve with whipped cream.

Jiffy Mats to Smarter Table Can Be Made Before Christmas



PATTERN 5986

CHRISTMAS is almost here, but there's still time to make a whole set of these double-purpose mats.

They're made in jiffy crochet with perle cotton or four strands of string. It's well-named "jiffy crochet," for it works up into a mat in no time at all. And the mats are exceptionally useful because they are heavy enough to protect your table from hot plates

In pattern 5986 you will find complete instructions for making an oval mat 14 x 12 inches and round ones 10½ inches in diameter; an illustration of them and of the stitches used; a photograph of a section of a mat; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern, send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post Household Arts Department, 259 West Fourteenth Street, New York N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Business Girls' Lack of Beaux Blamed on Cooking Ignorance

By Jean Green.

IF YOU are a business woman without a beau, the chances are you don't know how to feed yourself or "get a man with a meal." So maintains Marjorie Hillis in her new book, "Corned Beef and Caviar," which she has written in collaboration with Bertina Foltz.

Miss Hillis, who recently showed women how to "live alone and like it" and also have "orchids on their budget," now explains how they can improve their own digestions and obtain more masculine admirers by the right kind of cookery.

"Maybe you do live alone," she advises, "but we hope you don't dine alone with too great regularity. Dining should be an adventure in sociability as well as in taste, and there's no telling what other adventures it may lead to. But don't depend altogether on getting invitations. You may get something even more advantageous by issuing a few yourself, especially to the gentlemen you like to keep on your list of possible escorts."

Menu Depends on Man.

Here are some of Miss Hillis' suggestions for getting a man with a meal. "First of all, don't invite him at all unless you are sure that you can give him a meal that he'll enjoy. The type of menu depends on the man, but in general it should not be too sketchy and should certainly not mean visible strain or fuss."

The next rule is "never ask a man to balance a plate on his knee. Any he-man likes to put his feet under a table when he eats dinner. If you haven't enough space for one large table then have a nest of little ones and set each table individually with a complete cover."

As to the menu, Miss Hillis gives sound advice. She has found that the menu can never be planned according to the size of the man. Fat men often are on diets and some small men can consume an enormous quantity of nourishment, so "do have enough food," she advises. And, she adds, "don't make the mistake of serving the man his native dish." The man from Boston has an exaggerated opinion of the deliciousness of the baked beans he used to eat and will treat yours with condescension.

Treats Various Types.

As for foreign dishes there is only one type of man on which you can safely try them. That is the man who has a penchant for native restaurants and goes in for places with foreign atmosphere. However, in general you can be sure that Latins like things cooked in oil and Spaniards and Mexicans like hot things.

Miss Hillis gives these suggestions for dealing with various types of men:

Type I, The Teetotaler—"Think up a lot of creamy things and plenty of sweets. Take it for granted that this guest will be very hungry and plan accordingly."

Type II, The Guest on the Wagon"—"Have good meats and such things as sharper cheeses. Season well, as this guest is apt to be critical."

Type III, The Heavy Drinker—"Give him a substantial meal that he will remember pleasantly if vaguely and don't spend too much time in its preparation. No matter how delicious the meal, he will eat it absentmindedly."

Type IV, The Young Beau or younger brother of your current young man—"Settle the menu question with steak which is preferred by practically all young men and unsophisticated men of any age."

Type V, The Older Man—"If not a dyspeptic or faddist, he has wisely observed that there is a time for everything, and he must now observe reasonable care in eating."

Type VI, The Man With Digestion on His Mind—"Feed him his diet and make it seem like a party. He'll think you are the only woman who understands him."

VII, The Gourmet—"A difficult problem who compensates for the trouble he costs by his keen appreciation of your culinary skill. Either serve a real epicurean dinner or concentrate on one dish that you or your cook can serve supremely well."

Type VIII, The Perfect Gentleman—"Choose food with discrimination if not with prayer as he is not only the perfect guest but a possible perfect husband.

Type IX, The Constant Beau.—"Meet this problem by letting him contribute something to the menu. This he will love to do, especially if you let him bring something he likes."

Without a Maid.

Vegetable soup
Steak (ask him how he likes it cooked)
Baked stuffed potatoes
(or French fried potatoes if you can manage them)
Celery Radishes
Corn (if in season, peas if not)
Fresh fruit pie and American cheese

With Part-Time Maid.

Brook trout Amandine
New potato balls
Green salad, frozen cheese
Crepes with orange marmalade
Cafe noir

Miss Hillis gives many practical tips on how to glorify canned foods. She suggests a number of simple dishes that can be prepared with plenty of charm. By means of casseroles, sous cloches, a tea wagon, and such, she shows ways in which this can be accomplished with no maid. As for results, here is her promise:

"There are few things more alluring to the average male than unruffled and competent domesticity," so with the mastery of this technique, the "live-aloner" will have a head start with practically any masculine guest.

Miss Hillis also insists that all women who live alone should dine amply and graciously both for their home meals as well as when they entertain.

Lamp Shade Trick.

To double the life of your lamp shade, leave the cellophane wrapper on it for several months. This can be done especially with the 10-cent paper shade. It gives a crisp, modern appearance, and makes the shade look more expensive, too. Then when the paper soils, remove it and your shade lasts twice as long.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Dec. 2.

IT SEEMS to me that the most zealous and consistent merchandise drive is the one always in progress to prove that Dorothy Parker was fibbing when she wrote her immortal couplet to the effect that "Men seldom make passes at girls who wear glasses."

ALICE HUGHES.

The eyeglass makers have spent years in making spectacles which are practically invisible, and now an alert and resourceful firm headed by Mr. Frank Martin is about to sponsor a beauty contest open only to those young ladies, up to 30, who wear glasses. Brother Martin opines his contest will prove that thousands of girls are very lovely indeed even though they cover the "windows of the soul" with small panes of glass.

"With the modern styles that exist in glasses at present, no one who needs to wear them should refrain from doing so because she feels that they will mar her beauty," Martin says. "Frames announced for 1938 will be more stylish than ever."

This is the first beauty contest of the sort ever run off, and it should be very interesting, since it doesn't depend on the form divine in a 6-ounce bathing suit, or any other conventional things. And I am pretty sure that La Belle Parker will be proven all too pessimistic when Mr. Martin lines up his spectacled beauties. In fact, she may have written that little verse merely because she found that "glasses" and "passes" rhyme so nicely.

Even so, glasses still are glasses, however stylish the frames for 1938, and most of us will always prefer our beautiful orbs unglazed—if possible!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—A chronic New York disease is "theater lateness," which is caused by too many cocktail parties or a prolonged dinner that runs right through curtain time. This tardiness is cursed by the actors, who hate it because it ruins their big first-act scene, and by the early comers, who loathe getting trampled by the thundering herd. Many remedies have been tried, the latest being the Sherry Netherland Hotel's buffet dinner, or eat and run. It starts at 7:30 and allows the patron to eat as much as she likes before galloping to the play. It's a real pretty gesture but, of course, it won't cure "theater lateness." Prompt seat-holders will be stamped on, as usual, by elegant folk about whom still lingers the faint aroma of the last brandy.

Well, we got our first snowfall, but a mean and little one it was—not enough for the town kids to get out their sleds, or to make even one snowball fit to knock off a banker's plug hat!

Midas Would Envy This Season's Gold

King Midas would be wistful if he could see the amount of gold in this season's Christmas gifts. Necklaces, clips, compacts, cigaret cases—all these feature the gold theme.

The new necklaces include multiple rows of gold beads, Etruscan and filigree chains and tubular twists of gold. Clips are calla lilies, pine cones, acorn clusters and modernistic tube designs, all lacquered in gold. Compacts are cut in shape of gold leaves, hearts and even apples.

Gold belts to dress up afternoon and evening gowns are featured as gifts. There are also gold evening bags and gold buckles and, of course, golden slippers. A golden gift of some kind is bound to fit into any woman's wardrobe.

Wrapping of Gifts For Men Is Easy

For a man's gift, the package can be effectively wrapped in black, red or green shiny paper and tied with voluminous bows of gold or silver ribbon. Patterned tissue in hunt scenes, Scotties and skyscraper motifs in vari-colored schemes, are also appropriate for this purpose; tissue and cellophane ribbons in the same designs can complete the theme. Such packages can be topped with pine cones, either in natural color or glistening with gold or silver dust.

For children's gifts, there are numerous wrappings with juvenile motifs in Christmas colors; made more festive by placing a miniature Santa Claus or a tiny Christmas tree atop the package.

Duchess of Windsor Makes Social Record

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

On the heels of the report that the Duchess of Windsor made "Who's Who" comes news she also is included in the Social Record of Virginia, just off the press.

Compiled by Mrs. Clifford Caperton, of Richmond, first cousin of the Duchess of Windsor's mother, the book contains the first listing of its kind in the history of Virginia and carries names of a number of persons well known in Washington.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Rumors some time ago that the name of the Duchess would be included have had a number of us scouting around to find out if the Duke's name also would be listed. It's not. The only Windsor in the book is identified simply as "Her Grace, the Duchess of——."

Among other names are those of Mrs. Karl Boy-Ed and Mrs. William B. Watkins, daughters of the late Rev. and Mrs. Alexander Mackay-Smith. Mrs. Boy-Ed, widow of Capt. Boy-Ed, who was an attache of the German Embassy before the war, was Miss Virginia Mackay-Smith and made her debut in Washington. She and Mrs. Watkins, both of whom live in the Virginia "hunting country," are sisters of Mrs. Charles Lester Marlatt, who lives here.

* * * *

Add another to the roster of distinguished persons coming to Washington this month. Vera Brittain, author of "Testament of Youth," and "Honourable Estate," will be the principal speaker at a dinner to be given by the National Woman's Party December 14. Miss Brittain's books, by the way, have probably done more to impress the world with the need of equality between men and women than all the soapbox oratory on women's rights ever expounded.

* * * *

Incidentally, women's rights—now and formerly—came up for discussion yesterday across a luncheon table at Mrs. Homer S. Cummings' house. Dynamic Emily Newell Blair, writer and former suffrage leader, made some especially enlightening remarks about woman's chance in a changing world and what should be made of it.

Talks as a whole, however, did not linger long on any subject so serious, but moved merrily along from one topic to another, each one being nicely seasoned with witty comments from Mrs. Cummings.

Mrs. William Stanley was another who helped to make the small, informal party an especially pleasant one. She and Mr. Stanley and other members of their family will move in from their Maryland home shortly after Christmas to pass the rest of the winter at the Mayflower.

After the luncheon and a chat over the coffee cups in the cozy upstairs library of the Cummings' home, the hostess took some of her guests to the Corcoran Gallery to see Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone's current art exhibit.

* * * *

OF PERSONAL NOTE: The Attorney General and Mrs. Cummings will entertain at one of their delightful breakfasts December 19, complimenting Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Downe, of Paris, who are scheduled to arrive December 13 . . . Philip Guedalla, the author, and Mrs. Guedalla will be the guests of honor at a luncheon of the Women's National Press Club Tuesday . . . Col. Vicenzo Coppola, the Italian Embassy's Air and Military Attache, and Signora Coppola, who are now in their homeland and were due to return this week, will not sail from Italy until January 5.

Attend Thrift Shop's Annual Doll Sale

Underwood & Underwood.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

THE STEADY PARADE of English titles—duchesses, countesses, and just plain "ladies"—which has been passing across the Washington social front this winter has included a number of different types. They have ranged from the distinguished Lord Cecil, winner of this year's Nobel Peace Prize, to the Big-Appling and remarkably good-looking Duchess of Westminster.

In the more seriously minded Cecil category are Sir Evelyn and Lady Wrench, who are here today for a dinner to be given in Sir Evelyn's honor by the English Speaking Union. Lady Wrench and her husband are first cousins. Before that she was Lady des Voeux, and, as an officer of the All People's Association, used to argue violently with her husband on points of international amity. Now they work together for the same objective—peace.

Lady Wrench is chic, slim and beautiful, using no make-up and needing none. She and Sir Evelyn are just back from a trip to the Orient, and have lectured their way across Canada from Nova Scotia to British Columbia.

Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock has gone to Pinehurst, N. C., for a stay. Mr. Fahnestock's stylish sister, Mrs. Henry Drummond-Wolff, sailed earlier in the week on the Queen Mary to return to her home in London. She was accompanied by her daughter, Miss Marsyl Stokes, who was to have made her debut here. Miss Stokes appeared at a few Capital parties for the younger set, dazzling everybody with her attractive personality and clothes.

* * * *

A NUMBER of Mrs. Walter Denegre's friends entertained at a surprise birthday party in her honor last evening. The unusual thing about the affair was that it was given in her own home! The maids and butler were in the conspiracy, and Mrs. Denegre's friends kept her out of the house all day so that preparations could be made . . . Count Jerzy Potocki, Polish Ambassador, returned in triumph with some small game from the hunting trip Senator Guffey gave for Vice President Garner and some other notables. The Ambassador failed, however, to shoot a deer, "because," said one of the embassy attaches, "only ladies came his way, and you are not allowed to shoot anything but the men deer." The Ambassador's estate in Poland, "Lancut," is famous for the hunting parties.

BRINKLEY SMITHERS has adopted a son, resigned his position here, and bought a farm in Connecticut all within the past few weeks. So it is likely that Mr. and Mrs. Smithers will be leaving the Capital in the near future. They are at present residing in the home of former Senator and Mrs. Thomas Gore . . . Mrs. Ralph Harris, Republican national committeewoman from Kansas, and Mrs. Bertha Bower, ditto from Illinois, are in Washington to see John Hamilton on business. They are stopping at the Mayflower.

MRS. ROBERT WHITNEY IMBRIE writes in to say that she is selling some autographed books at the tea on Monday for the benefit of St. Gertrude's School. Authors represented will be Bruce Barton, Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, who wrote "Woodcarver of the Tyrol," His Ecellency Amelito Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate, Edward Knoblaugh, author of "A Correspondent in Spain" and Genevieve Wimsatt, who will donate her latest book on China.

Assisting at the book stall will be Mme. Ernest Schlaterr, Senora de Viteri, Mrs. Russell Snodgrass, Miss Evelyn Walker, and Miss Mary Louise Johnson.

Miss Hooper Is Married to J. D. Anderson

Ex-Member of The Post Staff Becomes the Bride of Tenneseean.

In a setting of white chrysanthemums and smilax, Miss Elizabeth Edna Hooper, daughter of Mrs. Florence Wilkes Hooper, became the bride last night of James Douglas Anderson, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James Douglas Anderson, of Madison, Tenn. The ceremony was performed at the Dodge Hotel by Dr. Rufus Weaver.

Bride's Sister Is Matron of Honor

Mrs. Raymond L. Woodward, the bride's sister, was the matron of honor. She wore a floor-length gown of royal blue velvet trimmed with brilliants. She carried deep yellow roses. Miss Mary L. Scaife, the maid of honor, was attired in American Beauty velvet trimmed with brilliants. Her flowers were cream-colored roses.

Raymond L. Woodward, brother-in-law of the bride, was best man. The ushers were Dan Terrell, Archie Detweiler and Fred Garibaldi.

Leave for South On Wedding Trip

The couple left for a wedding trip South, with the bride wearing a black dress trimmed in powder blue, a black coat with a lynx collar, and a black toque with lynx trimmings. They will visit New Orleans, Biloxi, Aiken and Nashville.

Their home will be in Pittsburgh, where the bridegroom has lived for several years.

Lindsays Give Luncheon Fete

Maurice Evans Is Guest at British Embassy; Second Party Is Planned.

The British Ambassador and Lady Lindsay entertained at a luncheon yesterday at the embassy, and will give another luncheon tomorrow. Among the guests yesterday was Maurice Evans, English actor who is starring in "Richard II," now at the National Theater.

The other guests were the Rumanian Minister, Charles Davila, Baron Paul Schell, Secretary of the Hungarian Legation, Charles Ritchie, Third Secretary of the Canadian Legation; Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Woodward, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hoyt, Miss Mary Lampson, Mme. de Streel, daughter of Mrs. George Cabot Lodge, and Miss Phyllis Thompson.

Edges Plan to Entertain Guests at Plantation

Mrs. Walter Edge will leave this evening to join Mr. Edge, former United States Ambassador to France, at their plantation, Summitt Hill, near Thomasville, Ga.

They will entertain a party of friends for shooting over the week-end, among them being Mr. and Mrs. Edward Curtis, of Rochester, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. George Howe, of Washington, and Baron and Baroness d'Espremesnil, of Upperville, Va.

* * * *

Col. and Mrs. Brady Ruttencutter will leave next Wednesday to spend the winter at Palm Beach and Miami. They also plan to attend the Mardi Gras in New Orleans.

They will return to their apartment in the Westchester in May.

Mmes. Hull and Swanson Attend Annual Doll Sale at Thrift Shop

By Elizabeth Ford.

(North Pole papers please copy.)

Buy your Christmas doll early . . . and have a cup of tea while you're doing it . . . was the motto of the Thrift Shop when its annual doll sale and afternoon-get-together went off like a house afire yesterday from 3 to 5.

The guests of honor, Mrs. Cordell Hull in a black coat and a small black hat with a short veil, and Mrs. Claude a Swanson, also in a black ensemble, arrived early. Another of the early guests was Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, one jump ahead of the photographers.

Business boomed as Mrs. John Allan Dougherty in black velvet trimmed with white lace collar and cuffs, and a hat with flaring brim, rushed here and there full-sale ahead.

Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, also present in a stunning black suit trimmed with silver fox fur was caught red handed buying a doll which must have been at least the biggest one in the collection.

The ranking doll of the afternoon, however, looking very petite in a peasant dress, occupied the very center of the front window. It was contributed by Mme. Pelenyi, wife of the Hungarian Minister. Tucked just beneath its pink skirt was a letter from Mme. Pelenyi. Whether the letter goes with the doll is a question that no one seemed able, at the moment, to answer.

In spite of the dolls (most of which were on the blonde side, and triple threats to Shirley Temple) a little black scottie, made entirely out of wool and sawdust, came pretty close to walking off with the show. At least he was receiving a great deal of favorable comment from Mrs. Swanson.

Among others present were Mrs. Joseph Hines, Mrs. Henry Miller, Mrs. Sidney Tolliver, and of course, Mrs. John R. Williams, who as chairman of the board of directors of the Thrift Shop, was, like Mrs. Dougherty, everywhere at once.

Aide to League Honored at Tea

Mme. Malaterre-Sellier Is Guest of Miss Minnie Mae Fleming.

Miss Minnie Mae Fleming, recently arrived in Washington from New York City, gave a tea yesterday afternoon at the Carlton Hotel in honor of Mme. Malaterre-Sellier, of France, who is visiting here.

Mme. Malaterre-Sellier, who is secretary of the Commission on Social Questions of the League of Nations at Geneva, is also president of L'Union Feminine for the League in France and president of the section on peace of the National Council of French Women. She has been decorated with the Croix de Guerre and is a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor.

Among those who were present at the tea were Senator and Mrs. Elbert D. Thomas, Senator James P. Pope, Representative Mary T. Norton, Representative Sam Rayburn, Representative Walter Lambeth, Representative and Mrs. Jed Johnson, Mme. Emmanuel Lombard, wife of the Military Attache of the French Embassy; Miss Katherine Blackburn, Mrs. Anne Johnson, Clark Eichelberger, Karl Crowley, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin D. Hildreth, Mrs. Henry Flather, Dr. Esther Brunauer, Miss Edith Duncan and Michael Francis Doyle.

* * * *

Col. Edmund W. Starling, chief of the White House Secret Service, and Mrs. Starling are now vacationing at Miami Beach, where they are guests of the Pancoast Hotel.

Other Washingtonians now enjoying the warm sunshine and surf bathing of the resort are Mr. and Mrs. Minor Hudson, Mr. and Mrs. Morris B. Hariton and Mr. and Mrs. John Edwin Smith and their daughter, Martha Jane Smith.

To Make Debut.

A late comer to the ranks of the season's debutantes is Miss Marjorie Gould Lincoln, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gould Lincoln. Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Camp Stanley will entertain at a dance in her honor on Wednesday evening, December 29, at their residence on Massachusetts avenue.

* * * *

Mr. and Mrs. H. Garrish Smith, of Riverside, Conn., are in Washington for a few days at the Carlton Hotel.

First Lady Heads Patronesses for N.Y. Fashion Show

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt heads the list of patronesses for the sixth annual Miami Biltmore Fashion Show and Ball, which takes place next Friday night in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria in New York. Col. Henry L. Doherty, of Washington, sponsors the ball annually for the benefit of Goddard Neighborhood Center, one of New York's oldest charities.

Other patronesses are Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., Mrs. Herbert H. Lehman, wife of Gov. Lehman of New York; Mrs. George Nichols, Mrs. Henry L. Doherty, Mrs. Junius Morgan, Mrs. Archibald Roosevelt, Mrs. David Milton, Mrs. Bernard M. Baruch and Lady Ashely Sparks.

Bettina Ripley Becomes Bride

Daughter of Professor Is Married to Joseph Nicholson.

Miss Bettina Ripley was married yesterday to Joseph Nicholson at the Episcopal Church in Newton Center, Mass. The bride is the daughter of William Z. Ripley, formerly a professor of economics at Harvard University, and Mrs. Ripley.

The wedding was attended only by members of the family and close friends, owing to the illness of Mr. Ripley. After a cruise, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholson will live in Philadelphia.

For the past few years the latter made her home in Washington, where she was associated with the Works Progress Administration. She lived at 2740 Thirty-fourth street with Miss Rachel Campbell, Miss Elizabeth Morison, Miss Sarah Jenkins Smith, Miss Ellen Bugge and Miss Barbara Donald, who at present is in Europe.

Mr. Nicholson, whose home is in Philadelphia, formerly was associated with the National Recovery Administration.

Portugal Envoy Returns to U. S.

The Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi will land in New York on Monday on the Normandie and will come to Washington the middle of next week.

They have been abroad since early summer, visiting Portugal and Madeira, where the Minister's family resides, and Paris. They also went to Brussels for the Nine-Power Peace Conference recently concluded.

Miss Sibilla Skidelsky, daughter of Mme. de Bianchi, will go to New York to meet her. She is at present staying with Mrs. Austin Kautz at the latter's residence on Nineteenth street.

Her Wedding Recent Event

Harris & Ewing.

MRS. FRANK HUME GRIMES, Jr., whose marriage took place Wednesday, November 24. She was formerly Miss Mary Louise Colliflower, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ernest Colliflower.

John W. Martin To Wed in Pa.

The marriage of Miss Nancy L. Byers, daughter of J. Frederic Byers, of Sewickley, Pa., and New York, to John William Young Martin, of Glyndon, Md., will take place on Monday at St. Stephen's Church in Sewickley, with a large reception following at the home of Mr. Byers.

Mr. Martin is well known in Long Island and Maryland, where his Worthington Valley estate is the scene each spring of the running of the Maryland Hunt Cup. Miss Byers is part owner with her brother, Buckley M. Byers, of the race horse Thorson, which won many events at Saratoga last season. Mr. Martin races a stable which was much to the fore last year.

Miss Byers attended the Fermata School at Aiken, S. C. and made her debut in 1932. Her mother, the late Mrs. Byers, was the former Miss Caroline M. Morris of Philadelphia. Mr. Martin is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel K. Martin of New York and is a nephew of Dr. and Mrs. Walter F. Wickes of Baltimore.

Miss Louise Myers' Wedding Is Slated For January 3

Miss Louise Chase Myers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, has selected Monday, January 3, as the date of her wedding to Lieut. John Pugh, U. S. A. Their engagement was announced several weeks ago.

The wedding will take place at noon at the Textile Museum, owned by Mr. Myers and adjoining his home on S street. It will be followed by a breakfast at the residence.

The attendants will be announced later.

Hines-Walker Nuptial Dec. 29

Ceremony Will Take Place at Fort Myer Chapel in Afternoon.

Miss Marjorie Walker and Lieut. John B. R. Hines, U. S. A., whose engagement was announced some time ago, will be married December 29 at the Fort Myer Chapel at 4 o'clock.

Miss Lillian Nalle will serve as maid of honor, and the bridesmaids will be Miss Letitia Knox, who will be presented to Capital society this month; Miss Gabriella Hines, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Nancy Hicks and Miss Cornelia Hicks. Miss Walker is the daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Walker, and Lieut. Hines is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard P. Hines, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Many parties are being planned for the bride-to-be. Miss Betty Hineman will give a bridge luncheon tomorrow, and on Tuesday Miss Marjorie Wallington will entertain at a shower for Miss Walker. Next Wednesday Mrs. James J. O'Hara will give a shower and tea, and on the following Friday the Misses Hicks will give a shower.

Mrs. Sinnott to Assist Gridiron Widows' Fete

Mrs. Arthur J. Sinnott, of Newark, N. J., has arrived at the Shoreham to remain until after Mrs. Roosevelt's party for the Gridiron widows on December 11. She will take part in the skits which will be a feature of the party.

Mr. Sinnott, who is editor of the Newark News, will spend the Gridiron week-end in Washington and, arriving at the Shoreham with him for the festivities incidental to the Gridiron party, will be Mr. and Mrs. George A. Horton, of Short Hills, N. J., and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chipman, of Eaton, Pa.

Near East Sale Here Next Week

Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman announces that the annual exhibit and sale of the handicrafts made by the refugee women in the Near East, under the supervision of the Near East Foundation, will be held at the Carlton Hotel on Friday and Saturday, December 10 and 11, from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. Mrs. Tuckerman is general chairman of a large committee of Washington women which is sponsoring the bazaar.

Many new and fascinating exhibits were brought over from Greece by Mrs. Florence Spencer Duryea early this year and will be included. Mrs. Duryea, who has directed the Washington sale for years, spent several weeks working with Mrs. Harry Hill, who is in charge of this work in Athens, in planning ways to diversify the stock.

Out in the refugee camps, the women showed Mrs. Duryea how they cook and dry the cocoons, spin the floss and weave the material.

Mrs. Hill, whose father, Prof. Edward Capps, of Princeton, was formerly Minister to Greece, has made an exhaustive study of the costumes of Bible lands, making possible a surprising variety of Near Eastern dolls. Wild hymettus honey, of which the ancient poets sang; silver jewelry, Egyptian copper, bags, purses, luncheon sets, runners, kimonos, wall panels and many interesting novelties give the bazaar the color and romance of eastern Mediterranean countries.

This work of their hands is the only means of livelihood for several hundred refugee women with an average of four dependents each, who lost their husbands, fathers, sons, the homes, and even their homeland, when Smyrna was destroyed in the aftermath of the World War.

Mrs. Morgenthau Shows Treasury Art Works to 20th Century Club

Far-Reaching Esthetic, Social Possibilities Are Seen by Speaker.

Secretary's Wife Points Out Productive Work of 2 Departmental Units.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, yesterday addressed the Twentieth Century Club at its monthly meeting in the Y. W. C. A., describing the Treasury Department's art program and tracing the association of art and the Treasury from the early history of the country. She illustrated her talk with an interesting group of slides.

Mrs. Morgenthau mentioned Washington's having invited to this country the famous Benjamin Latrobe to rebuild the Capitol after it was burned by the British in 1814, and Jackson's appointment of Robert Mills as our first advisory architect, marking the beginning of the Treasury's service as the Government's architectural agency. "At present, the Treasury Department's architectural activities affect communities of every State, from coast to coast, and even include our insular possessions," she said.

Discussing the department's art program and the murals and sculpture which have been installed in Federal buildings, she pointed out the far-reaching esthetic and social possibilities it held.

"We do not think of Federal architecture and the fine arts in connection with the Treasury, and yet the Treasury constructs nearly all of our Federal buildings, postoffices, courthouses, marine hospitals, mints, Coast Guard stations and other buildings," she said.

The supervising architect's office and the section of painting and sculpture are in the public buildings branch of the procurement division, she explained, referring to the President's authorization of the creation of this division in the Treasury Department. Painting, sculpture and architecture are thus brought together as a coherent, productive unit.

The formation of this section was inspired by the success of the Government's first art program, the Public Works of Art Project, which began on December 8, 1933, she said, paying high tribute to Edward Bruce for his distinguished administrative abilities.

In the slides Mrs. Morgenthau again introduced her subject by turning back the pages of history and showing early examples of American mural painting by Constantino Brumidi, who decorated the dome of the Capitol in the middle of the 19th century; John La Farge, John Sargent, and others. Then came a remarkable series of contemporary murals accompanied by succinct and suggestive critical comments. The slides showed the frescoes in the Justice Department building by Henry Varnum Poor and other murals in Washington, among them those by Boardman Robinson, Leon Kroll, John Steuart Curry and Ward Lockwood.

Mrs. Morgenthau also showed many works done in other cities, illustrating for her audience the new realism so characteristic of contemporary murals and presenting it against a background of the past. As slide followed slide, the audience saw mural paintings which have been installed under the Treasury Art Program in various Federal buildings from coast to coast.

The Twentieth Century Club, in addition to the program, had its monthly luncheon with Mrs. Morgenthau as guest of honor. She wore a black crepe dress with sash of red and bright blue and touches of the same colors on her blouse and sleeves, a small, high black velvet hat and a corsage of gardenias. She sat at the right of Mrs. Karl Fenning, president of the club, who wore black satin with a line of gold sequin trimming at the neck and wrists, and a black sailor hat with a trimming of green. At Mrs. Fenning's left was Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, who wore black with white trimming.

Others at the guest table were Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Mrs. Virgil Jackson, Mrs. William Charles White, Mrs. Genevieve Forbes Herrick, Mrs. Samuel Herrick, Mrs. Harold Fowler, Mrs. Richard Fay Jackson, Miss Clara Lutz, Mrs. Bruce Clark, Mrs. E. G. Montgomery, Mrs. William R. Moyer, Mrs. Arthur Spencer and Mrs. Joseph Falk.

MRS. HENRY MORGENTHAU, jr. Bachrach.

Lafayette Home, School Club Plans to Decorate Grounds

Association Will Provide Tennis Courts, Baseball Diamond and Garden Plots for 580 Pupils.

The Lafayette Home and School Association has no intention of letting the building now under construction to accommodate the 580 pupils of Lafayette, out-distance the grounds in the matter of progress. The new school is expected to be ready for use in April and, by that time, the association hopes to have a program well under way for converting part of the wooded acreage around it into tennis courts, a baseball diamond and perhaps garden plots and a nature study tract for the children.

The new building will supplement the present school, built in 1932, and will relieve overcrowded conditions which have made it necessary to build two portables and to transport one class of pupils to E. D. Brown School until the additional facilities are available. It is on a site of 12 acres on Broad Branch road and serves the district between Chevy Chase Circle and Rock Creek Park, an area which has had rapid development within the last five years.

When the parents of Lafayette children formed the Home and School Association at the time the present school was opened, the kindergarten room accommodated them at their meetings. They outgrew this and moved up into the main hall, which they now tax to capacity.

There will be an auditorium in the new building which will give a place for school assemblies and entertainments and will also be used for the meetings of the association.

The organization was addressed at session Tuesday night by L. R. Barrett, co-ordinator of recreation for the District, who outlined the plans originally worked out for improvement of the school grounds but not carried out for lack of appropriations, and N. A. Coe, chief of the architectural division, who also discussed the possibilities for use of the school grounds. A. M. Dickson heads a committee from the association which will take steps to see what can be done to develop the area and what assistance the association can give in the project. McLain Smith heads the association, which has monthly meetings, one in the afternoon and the next in the evening to give opportunity for the fathers as well as the mothers to be present. There is usually an attendance of nearly 200 at the sessions, with everybody taking a lively interest in discussions of projects for the good of the school.

D. A. R. Member Drive Spurred

Mrs. Curry Holds Meeting of Her Committee to Discuss Campaign.

Mrs. Elmer E. Curry, State chairman of membership for the District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution, last night held a meeting of her committee at the Willard Hotel to discuss the campaign now in progress to increase the membership to 4,000 by July, 1938.

Mrs. Curry, who is a past regent of E. Pluribus Unum Chapter, has just been unanimously indorsed by the group for the office of State vice regent. She has served the chapter in many capacities and on many State committees including entertainment, music, national defense, resolutions, geneological research, Constitution Hall finance, by-laws and the committee for the preservation of historic spots.

As State chairman of the committee on geneological research, she made a valuable contribution to the D. A. R. library by securing permission from the oldest churches in the District to copy their early records.

Mrs. Curry is a member of the State Officers' Club, a member of Chapter L of the P. E. O. and a former State vice regent of the Daughters of American Colonists. She is now serving her second term as State registrar and State chairman of membership.

Young People's League To Hold Special Service

The Young People's League of the B'nai Israel Synagogue, Fourteenth and Emerson streets, will conduct its special Y. P. L. services at the Synagogue tonight at 8:15 with Rabbi Henry Segal officiating, and Abraham Hofferman, prominent young attorney of Philadelphia, as guest speaker. His subject will be "Immortality of Youth."

Copeland's Wife Talks To Writers

New Author Addresses D. C. Branch of Pen Women's League.

Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, wife of Senator Copeland and author of "Mrs. Copeland's Guest Book," yesterday addressed the book review luncheon of the D. C. branch of the League of American Pen Women and was welcomed not only as a guest of honor but as the league's newest member. She said it was the first organization she had joined since coming to Washington. Other speakers were Mrs. Louis Shapiro, who described the hand process of bookbinding, and Mrs. Theodore Tiller, chairman of the book review luncheons, who reviewed Mrs. Roosevelt's book, "This Is My Story."

Mrs. Copeland, like many other authors, attributed her venture in literature to an illness following an accident, which kept her in bed for several weeks and resulted in her seeking writing as an outlet. She explained that she had no desire to slander anyone, and that whatever she wrote or might write in the future, she would promise there would be no unkind comment for, she added:

"I was always taught that if I didn't like anyone, I could always walk across the street and not speak to them."

Discussing her book, which includes suggestions on how to entertain and the rules of social Washington, she said she had found the Capital a different city from New York in many points of social procedure, and designed her guest book to make things easier for the newcomer.

She mentioned incidentally that she had given up trying to go sight-seeing with visiting constituents herself, except for trips from the Capitol to the Senate Office Building on the little underground trolley.

Proceeds from the sale of her book, now in its third edition, will be devoted to the education of her two grandchildren, to whom it is dedicated.

Mrs. Shapiro, whose late husband, Dr. Louis Shapiro, was a physician with the Rockefeller Foundation, told of her experiences in Siam, where she was admitted as the only woman student in the Siamese School of Arts and Crafts while her husband was carrying on medical researches. There and in Costa Rica she picked up all the knowledge she has of bookbinding, she said. She showed books from the beginning of the process and explained each step necessary in producing a leather-bound volume, such as she finally displayed, the cover decorated with delicate leather inlays.

An exhibition of her work and her demonstration of the process will be a fetaure of the annual fair of the league next Friday and Saturday.

Members of the league will have a preview of the fair, when it entertains at tea Wednesday, at the Grafton, in honor of Mrs. Roosevelt, its most distinguished member. Guests will be limited to members of the District of Columbia branch, members of the national executive board and representatives of the press. In receiving Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Marguerite Merigold, the president, will be assisted by the first and second vice presidents, Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler and Miss Phronsie Marsh; the reception chairman, Mrs. William W. Scott, and the vice chairman of reception, Mrs. Ben Johnson.

Mrs. Roosevelt will discuss her writing problems and how she meets them.

Here From New Mexico.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Eben Burnside have come from their ranch in New Mexico and are making one of their regular visits in Washington, stopping at the Shoreham. They expect to be in the Capital for two months.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

MEMBERS of the Washington Chapter of the National Cathedral School Alumnae Association will meet at the school Monday from 3 to 6 to dress dolls to be given at Christmas to little girls who might otherwise have none. Members of the classes from 1930 to 1937 have been particularly invited to come, bringing their thimbles. Lucy Mackall, Barbara Ruffin and Margot Chase will act as hostesses of the tea party to follow the doll dressmaking bee.

HELEN McGERR.

• • • •

HELEN McGERR, a lawyer in the Department of Justice, has recently been appointed regional director of the National Association of Women Lawyers. In January she will call a conference of her region, which includes, in addition to the District of Columbia, the States of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and Ohio.

Miss McGerr, a sister of Grace McGerr, who is secretary of the Newspaper Women's Club, is a graduate of Yale University School of Law and was engaged in private practice of law in Lincoln, Nebr., for several years before coming here.

• • • •

MRS. HENRY CARAWAY, president of the Women's National Republican Club, will be here from New York City on Monday to address the League of Republican Women at its monthly meeting at the Mayflower. A forum will follow her talk.

The general meeting of the league will be preceded by a session of the executive board, called by Mme. Cantacuzene, the president, for 11 o'clock at the clubhouse, 1301 Seventeenth street.

• • • •

CHILDREN of the D. A. R. approved schools will have some story books from Santa Claus this year. Members of Janet Montgomery Chapter of the Maryland D. A. R. will bring new books to the meeting at the home of their regent, Mrs. Peyton Whalen, in Bethesda, Tuesday afternoon, and these will be sent as Christmas gifts to the mountain schools.

• • • •

TODAY the Washington Soroptimists will install a library of 300 books in the Home for Incurables. Daisy Reed is president of the club which, in addition to having its weekly meetings, keeps busy doing good in the community.

• • • •

TOMORROW NIGHT Ethel Hayden, honored queen of Bethel No. 4 of Job's Daughters will be hostess to members of the Bethel and their friends at a dance at the Hayden studio.

• • • •

MRS. IRVING FAIRWEATHER, newly-elected president of the American War Mothers, and Mrs. Emil Walter, state president, will be guests of honor this evening at a reception in which the District of Columbia, Bicentennial and Admiral Coontz chapters of the organization will join. Amelia Thiele, past state president, is arranging the party, which will be at the national headquarters at 8 o'clock, with heads of departments of other patriotic groups in the Capital as guests.

• • • •

SEVERAL MORE distinguished patronesses have been added to the list for the card party being given on Tuesday at the Shoreham by the Kenmore Association. They include Harry G. Meem, Mrs. Arthur Mason Chichester, Mrs. William Bowie and Miss Jennie Morris Moore.

• • • •

SOMETHING in the nature of a round-up of alumnae of Converse College, Spartanburg, S. C., is taking place in the Capital just now, in preparation for a luncheon being planned this month at which Dr. Edward M. Gwathmey, the president and Miss Helen Allen, executive secretary of the college will be present as guests of honor. The exact date has not been announced but the party is to be at the A. A. U. W. and Mrs. John R. McMullan is in charge of reservations. So, now is the time for all the Spartanburg girls to speak up and say they'll be there to greet their college head.

• • • •

ANOTHER COLLEGE alumnae group which is making plans to entertain in honor of the president of its alma mater, is Wilson College of Chambersburg, Pa. There are about 75 alumnae of Wilson (the Chambersburg one) in Washington and they are already making arrangements for a dinner to be given at the A. A. U. W., February 5, for President Paul S. Havens and his wife, with all the graduates there to welcome them.

The club meets this afternoon with Madge Cooke, at her home, 1870 Wyoming avenue, at 3:30, and one of the members, Jessie Coope, who attended the meeting of the World Federation of Education Associations in Tokyo last summer, will tell of her trip.

Shrine to Serve Turkey Dinner

4,000 Pounds of Fowl to Be Prepared by Sacred Heart Parish.

The 3,000 pounds of turkey served last year will be increased to 4,000 this season to provide for the throng expected to attend the annual dinner sponsored by organizations of the Shrine of the Sacred Heart on December 8 and 9. The turkey dinner has been given each winter for the last 25 years and is the largest affair of the parish.

The parish hall is to be transformed into a woodland setting for the occasion and 31 tables will be placed, to accomodate 310 persons at one serving. Mrs. William Morris, who has supervised the cooking for 15 years, will be in charge as usual; Mrs. Martin McDonald will have charge of the steam tables; Mrs. William McCarthy of general arrangements; Miss A. Cooksey, of the decorations; Mrs. Charles Curtis of refreshments; Miss Frances McDonald, of waitresses; Mrs. F. DeFontages, of the pantry; Mrs. Mary Meligan and Mrs. Anne Connor, of the silver; Mrs. Elizabeth King, of dishes; Mrs. George Trapp, of coffee; Mrs. J. C. Cotton and Mrs. Martha Callon, of service.

The women have been working together for years and have arrangements down to a system so they go like clockwork. Hostesses for the dinner will be Mrs. John Early, Mrs. Rieman Chesley, Miss Blanche Cooksey, Mrs. Mary Ellery, Mrs. Frank Weller, Mrs. Jeremiah Flynn, Mrs. James O'Shea, Mrs. Clarence Lee and Mrs. Mary Hannon.

No Cash Involved in Two Major Deals at Annual Baseball Meeting; Melillo and Cantwell Are Shipped.

By the Associated Press.

Milwaukee, Dec. 2.—The St. Louis Browns tonight traded Outfielder Joe Vosmik to the Boston Red Sox for Pitcher Buck Newsom, Shortstop Red Kress and Outfielder Buster Mills.

The deal, second big league swap of today's player mart, sent the temperamental Newsom and Kress, who played with Minneapolis, of the American Association, last season, back to their old St. Louis Brown stamping grounds.

Newsom was traded to the Red Sox last summer with Outfielder Ben Chapman for the two Ferrell brothers, Wesley and Rick, and Mel Almada.

Vosmik, traded to St. Louis by Cleveland last year, has been sought after by several American League clubs since the Milwaukee market opened. He batted .325 in 144 games for the Browns. Mills batted .291 for the Red Sox in 123 games while Kress, hitting the comeback trail after long American League service, batted .334 for Minneapolis in 158 games.

Newsom, in the regimentals of the gold plated boys from Boston, won 13 and lost 10.

Tigers and White Sox 1 Six-Player Deal.

Milwaukee, Dec. 2.—Managers Jimmy Dykes, of the Chicago White Sox, and Mickey Cochrane, of Detroit's Tigers, two old baseball pals who've long been trying to outsmart each other as "ivory traders," swung one of the biggest player-for-player deals of recent years today.

Putting new life in a minor league meeting which threatened a new "low" in actual major league transactions, the White Sox traded Pitcher Vernon Kennedy, Outfielder Dixie Walker and Infielder Tony Piet to Detroit for Outfielder Gerald Walker, Infielder Marvin Owen and Catcher Mike Tresh.

The deal, in which no cash was involved, was announced after a brief conference in the hotel suite of J. Louis Comiskey, White Sox owner. The quick decision to act came after two days of bickering between Dykes and Cochrane.

Had to Have Pitcher.

"I had to bolster my pitching," said Cochrane, "and with Kennedy winning between 18 and 20 games we will be tough next season, even though I had to sacrifice hitting and defensive strength by letting Gerald Walker and Owen go."

Dykes, who has been after Gerald Walker for three years and who

Skins Alter Attack for Title Game

Special Dispatch to The Post

Rye, N. Y., Dec. 2.—Here at the swank Westchester County Club where relaxation is the watchword of New York's tired businessmen, Washington's Redskins are furiously preparing for Sunday's battle with the Giants.

9 a. m.—Breakfast.

10 a. m. to 11 a. m.—Blackboard drill portraying both Redskin and Giants' plays.

Noon—Lunch.

2 p. m. to 4 p. m.—Outdoor practice on the Westchester Polo Field which has been converted into a gridiron.

6 p. m.—Dinner.

8 p. m. to 9 p. m.—Blackboard drill.

11 p. m.—Lights out.

New Conditions.

The bustle in the Redskins' camp has been occasioned by the new conditions the Washington Club must meet when they step out on the field against the Giants. For the first time this season, the Redskins will be playing a team that specializes in the five-man line.

The Giants' defensive formation has caused Coach Ray Flaherty to alter radically the Redskins' attack. With three backers-up playing close to the front-line defense, two defensive backs playing close to the backers-up and the safety man also playing close, the Giants will be presenting a defense the like of which the Redskins have never encountered.

The New York club's five-man line has been effective, Flaherty is aware. If not, he need only glance at the records of all teams in the league, which reveal that the Giants have yielded fewer points than any other club.

With the Redskins thus encountering a crying need for blockers, Flaherty is prepared to start Ernie Pinckert, his best blocking back, and continue Pinckert in the game without a substitute as long as the latter can maintain his blocking pace. Pinckert played only a comparative few minutes against the Green Bays in Washington last Sunday.

Same Line-up.

Flaherty declared tonight that his starting line-up against the Giants would be identical with the team that took the field against the Packers. Thus Sammy Baugh will be restrained on the bench until there is need to open up the Giants' defense with his passes.

The starting quartet of Redskin backs wil be Cliff Battles, Riley Smith, Pinckert and Don Irwin. The latter, whose line-bucking qualities were virtually lost to the Redskins against the Packers when he was injured early in the game, has fully recovered and is expected to share with Battles the brunt of the running game.

The headquarters of the New York club reported the most lively ticket sale of the season, with all choice seats long since sold. A capacity crowd of 50,000 and a $60,000 gate looms for the game.

The Giants will need only a tie with the Redskins to win the Eastern division title and the right to meet the Chicago Bears in the East-West playoff. The Redskins must win the game or be eliminated from contention.

Blue Plate Special or Potpourri.

To Whom It May Concern:

The Redskins' share of the Polo Grounds proceedings against the Giants Sunday will be 40 per cent of a gate that promises to reach $60,000 . . . Mrs. Payne Re-elected Links Head

Congressional Member Receives Third Term.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

For the second time in its history the District Women's Golf Association elected a three-time president yesterday as Mrs. Ralph W. Payne, Congressional, was swept into office by a unanimous vote in the annual meeting at the Kenwood Club. Mrs. T. J. Johnson, elected secretary, was the only replacement in last year's slate of officers.

A new ruling that will tend to equalize the handicaps of the members with other cities was voted for the 1938 season, whereby two scores turned in for the handicaps must be from two other clubs, in addition to the three home course rounds.

Under the previous rule the five scores necessary to obtain a handicap could be turned in, all from the member's home course. The handicaps will be more uniform and representative of the player's ability when playing a strange course.

Others Re-elected.

Mrs. Roy C. Miller, Kenwood, first vice president; Mrs. James W. Beller, Columbia, second vice president, and Mrs. Theodore Peyser, Woodmont, were re-elected, with Mrs. Payne. Mrs. Woodward, vice president last year, will move

'Elbows' McFadden Features Turner's Night of Champions

By Bob Garrison.

He isn't sure that the adage originated from his activity in the ring, but it might well be said that the first person to really "elbow" his way to fame was George McFadden, old-time battler. The once famous lightweight will be Joe Turner's guest at his "Champions' Night" to be held in conjunction with his weekly fight show at the W Street Arena, Monday

There won't be any champions fighting. All that will be taken care of by Cowboy Howard Scott and Irish Eddie Dunn who clash in the feature bout and the boys on the supporting card, whose only connection with the word champion is that they hope to some day be addressed in that fashion. But one title-holder, two former rulers and McFadden, who in his day was regarded as an uncrowned king, will be present.

Harry Jeffra, world's newly crowned bantamweight champion; Benny Leonard, retired undefeated lightweight monarch, and Joe Dundee, who once ruled the welterweights, will be on hand to take a bow, but it's doubtful if anyone of these ring-greats can relate a story to match that of McFadden.

Over 400 Fights.

You see, he fought over 400 fights at the turn of the century and came out with a proud record that was accomplished through resourcefulness, as well as skill. At the age of 63, he can remember the days when his stubby fists, aided by cleverly manipulated elbows, beat some great fighters, and twice knocked out the man who is oftimes called the greatest lightweight of all time—Joe Gans.

Today he's a moon-faced, wide-eyed individual who claims that all the fame attached to his method of ring craftsmanship is a bit misleading.

"Sure, I used my elbows," he was saying yesterday, "but I only used them as offensive weapons once in my career. That was against Battling Nelson when I knocked him out in 1912. He was a rough and tumble type of fighter and I had to go to work on him."

"I used to let the other fellow wade in and that way it looked as though I was wielding my elbows instead of my fists, which was untrue.

In High Regard.

He holds a high regard for the men he fought, all except Nelson. And of all the fighters who ever lived he lists Tommy Loughran the greatest boxer, including Gene Tunney, whose father was a fellow longshore worker with his.

Leonard will be in the corner of Irish Eddie Dunn directing his campaign against Scott. Jeffra will take bows from the ringside, then settle back to watch the proceedings, but it is hinted that he will be here to do business with Goldie Ahearn.

Dundee has a protege, too, in the person of Eddie Walker, who was signed yesterday to meet Vince Bonavari, former local Golden Gloves Champion, in a 4-round preliminary bout. Vernon Carmire, Boston, will oppose Calvin Calp, Baltimore, in another supporting event. Additional bouts will be closed before the week-end, Ahearn announced last night.

State Department Defeats Veterans

State Department's fast breaking, smooth working quint established itself as one of the stronger teams in the Government Y League last night on the Y court by decisively trouncing a fighting team from the Veterans' Administration, 36 to 21.

In the roughest game of the night, which saw 21 players used by the two teams, Patent Office drubbed G. A. O. (Postoffice division), by a 19-to-5 count.

Hoyas List 18 Games on Court Card

An 18-game basketball schedule, featuring New York University at Madison Square Garden and a renewal of relations with Fordham University, was announced for Georgetown University last night by Gabe Murphy, graduate manager of athletics.

The Hoyas will open their season December 16, engaging Western Maryland at Tech High School, which again will be the scene of all home games. This, incidentally, is the lone game before the Christmas holidays. The season ends with St. Bonaventure February 28 at Buffalo, N. Y.

Maryland, one of the outstanding games on the list, will be met January 12 at Tech, which is much earlier than usual. Army, Yale and Syracuse are the only other non-conference opponents scheduled. The complete card:

December 16, Western Maryland.
January 5, at New York U.; 10, Temple; 12, Maryland; 21, at Pittsburgh; 22, at Penn State; 29, at Syracuse.

James Defeats Giant Russian

For this fellow, who rode out of the west (on a train, not a horse) seeking the world's championship had the public on his side, much the same as the first to bear that name, the minute he stepped into the ring to come to grips with Henry Kulkovich, gigantic Russian.

Twelve minutes later he had the Russian on his side, also, spun him about with a kangaroo kick, and pinned him to culminate a great demonstration of wrestling holds and feats of physique that stamped him as championship material.

Ed Don George, former world champion, returned to Washington after an absence of more than a year to pin Jack Singer, California wild man, in one of the semi-wndups after 11 mnutes of groaning with a crotch hold and body slam. Steve "Crusner" Casey, of Ireland, displayed his brawn and beef, to pin Len Macaluso, with a body press and air-plane spin, in 30 minutes of clean wrestling.

In other bouts Billy Hanson, Sweden, threw Banka Zelezinak, Russian Cossack, in 17 minutes with a flying tackle and arm-lock; and Patty Mack, Ireland, and Jack Zarnes, Greece, struggled through a 30-minute draw.

Schmeling Boycott May Move Title Go.

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1937, for The Washington Post.

New York, Dec. 2 (U.P.).—He'll yank the big June fight and $10,000,000 right out of New York.

"Schmeling and Thomas should draw about $100,000—with Madison Square Garden scaled from $2 to $10," explained the wrathful promoter. "If the gate fall much below that, I'll know the answer. And if Schmeling beats Thomas, as most people expect, I'll guarantee you that Max and Joe Louis will not fight in New York in June."

* * * *

While Jacobs fumed in his office at the Hippodrome, two pickets were marching up and down the sidewalk in front of the Hip's ticket booths. One man carried a sandwich sign which asked all prospective purchasers to boycott the Schmeling-Thomas fight. The other carried a large caricature of Hitler on a stick. As the man pulled a string the Hitler effigy waved its arms constantly to attract attention. Signs on the effigy blared news of the Schmeling boycott.

* * * *

These pickets—something new in the fight racket—were getting on "Uncle" Mike's nerves. No—Jacobs wasn't sure whether they would have any effect on the gate. Or whether the publicity blurbs and whispering campaign conducted by the nonsectarian Anti-Nazi-League would keep customers away from the Garden on December 13. But he w-a-s certain of what would happen if they did.

* * * *

"If that 15-round bout fails to draw, I'll know that the people of New York are willing to cut off their noses to spite their faces," Mike said. "And I'll make plans immediately to stage the Schmeling-Louis championship fight in some other city. I wonder how the New York hotel men and other business people will like that?

* * * *

"This Louis-Schmeling return match in June shapes up as the most attractive heavyweight bout since the second Dempsey-Tunney fight. Aside from its gate, more than $10,000,000 will be spent by out-of-town fans who come to whatever city is chosen as the site. Leonard Hicks, of the Morrison Hotel, in Chicago, estimates that visitors for the Louis-Jim Braddock bout last June spent more than $5,000,000 in Chicago. Compare that fight with the Louis-Schmeling attraction and you'll see what I mean."

* * * *

Jacobs emphasized that Chicago wants the next title fight. He pointed to a framed letter hanging among the sports pictures on the wall. It was a letter from Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois, congratulatig Mike on the success of the Louis-Braddock brawl. One sentence said, "That you will return to Chicago is heartily hoped by me." Also, Philadelphia—with its huge municipal stadium—would like to get the fight.

* * * *

"I'm getting fed up with this persecution of Schmeling,' Jacobs continued. "And that's exactly what this campaign is. They've singled Schmeling out. Why didn't they boycott Gottfried von Cramm or other German tennis players who performed here? Why didn't they boycott the German auto racer, Rosemeyer, who won the Roosevelt Speedway race and took about $30,000 home with him? Why aren't they boycotting the six-day bicycle races at the Garden now? Why didn't they boycott those races last night, in particular, when the bicycle promoters staged a 'German night' in honor of Kilian and Vopel? See what I mean? They've singled Schmeling out in sports for persecution."

This boycott, which is approved by Samuel Untermeyer, of the nonsectarian. Anti-Nazi League, creates an unusual situation in a city wherein there are approximately 4,000,000 Jewish people. Schmeling, pride of Nazi Germany, is being vigorously defended by Promoter Jacobs, who is Jewish, and by Manager Joe Jacobs, who also is Jewish. In addition, many Jewish boxing fans who admire Herr Maxie for his amazing knockout over Louis in their first meeting, have assured Promoter Jacobs of their allegiance.

Mike appealed to the anti-Nazi League, asking it to lift the boycott against Schmeling for the Thomas fight. He emphasized that the former heavyweight champion is not meeting the Chicago battler to make money, but to get into condition for the June title fight.

* * * *

Samuel Untermeyer blasted any hope of removing the boycott when he replied that the boycott was levied against any bout in which Schmeling "is a beneficiary." The boycott would continue against all Schmeling bouts unless Maxie agreed to leave his earnings in the United States. The league was primarily interested in preventing American money from going to Nazi Germany.

Meanwhile the pickets continue to parade before the Hippodrome; Schmeling continues to train at Summit, N. J., and Thomas continues his workouts at Pompton Lakes. Promoter Jacobs watches the ticket sale and wonders what his answer will be on the night of December 13.

Commission Must Ratify Track Dates

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Dec. 2.—Maryland's 1938 racing schedule, subject to formal approval of the Racing Commission, was drawn up today by Representatives of the four major courses.

It contains the usual 100 days, 25 each for the big league tracks and it is a decidedly equitable arrangement in the matter of Saturdays and holidays, the most desirable of racing dates. The schedule:

Spring:
- Bowie—April 1 to April 14 (12 days).
- Havre de Grace—April 15 to April 30 (14 days).
- Pimlico—May 2 to May 14 (12 days).

Fall:
- Havre de Grace—September 16 to September 28 (11 days)
- Laurel—October 1 to October 29 (25 days).
- Pimlico—November 1 to November 15 (13 days).
- Bowie—November 16 to November 30 (13 days).

Thus we find that Bowie receives four Saturdays and Thanksgiving Day. Havre de Grace, faring better than usual, gets five Saturdays and Easter Monday.

Pimlico will have only four Saturdays, but in the fall gets election day and Armistice Day. Laurel will have its usual five Saturdays and Columbus Day.

Since the tracks themselves have selected these dates, approval by the commission is more or less a formality. Under the 1938 set-up, dates of some of the big races of the season in Maryland will be Preakness Stakes, Saturday, May 14; Dixie Handicap, Saturday, May 7; Chesapeake Stakes, Saturday, April 23; Eastern Shore Handicap, Saturday, September, 17; Havre de Grace Handicap, Wednesday, September 28; Selima Stakes, Saturday, October 22; Washington Handicap, Saturday, October 29.

Pimlico Futurity, Saturday, November 12; Endurance Handicap, November 19; Bryan & O'Hara, Wednesday, November 30.

Munhall Named Manager of Card Basketball Team

Munhall announced acceptance of his new duties yesterday after a huddle with Cotton.

"This is a great job," Bud grinned. "It gives me a chance to see the other fellows work and also an opportunity of making the trips with th squad."

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KINDLE, $3.40, $3.40, $2.40; BOULDER DAM, $7.60, $3.80; MONOLOGUE, $3.00.

KINDLE, first out of gates, was rated while setting pace but had to be put to pressure in closing sixteenth to barely last ahead of BOULDER DAM. The latter was steadied close to pace, rallied when placed to drive to better position, but hung in final 30 yards. MONOLOGUE saved ground to move up and gained gradually through stretch.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:32½. Off 2:33½. Winner, B. F. Christmas' ch. g. (3), by Mud—Just. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:25 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CLOUDY WEATHER, $8.20, $5.00, $3.20; BLACK BRIGADE, $7.40, $4.60; GRIERLAD, $16.00.

CLOUDY WEATHER, close up front at start, improved position steadily on outside, took command when called upon but had to be kept to drive to end. BLACK BRIGADE took short lead going to first turn and was close to winner thereafter under hard handling. GRIERLAD saved ground entering stretch and closed gamely.

DAILY DOUBLE, KINDLE AND CLOUDY WEATHER, PAID $12.80.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:02½. Off 3:07. Winner, Mrs. L. A. Daly's br. f. (4), by Aucilla—Rani. Trained by L. A. Daly. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:55.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RANICILLA, $7.00, $3.80, $3.00; PENWAY, $5.80, $4.60; EASTER HERALD, $4.00.

RANICILLA, allowed to settle into best stride, gained gradually when put to drive, came between horses to reach contention and was up in concluding strides. PENWAY was close up from start and fought it out willingly in stretch. EASTER HERALD went to front at once, set good pace, but weakened in closing sixteenth. SEA FINN was in close quarters approaching finish

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $500. The Berkeley. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:37½. Off 3:41. Winner, T. Presgrave's br. g. (3), by Sea Rock—Sweeter Than. Trained by C. Feltner. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:29 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SEA DOVE, $26.00, $12.60, $4.60; VICTORY MISS, $180.80, $27.00; GOLDEN VEIN, $2.80.

SEA DOVE, sent to front going to first turn under hustling tactics, was hard handled throughout, swung over on VICTORY MISS leaving backstretch and was kept to drive to end. VICTORY MISS was forward factor from start, was shut off when moving and came gamely in final drive. GOLDEN VEIN raced wide throughout. JEAN LEE was knocked back at start.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:09½. Off 4:14. Winner, Mrs. G. C. Breton's ch. g. (6), by Diaphon—Lespedem II. Trained by G. C. Brenton. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:52.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DIAN, $21.20, $10.60, $4.00; DEPARTED, $7.00, $3.00; INACTIVE, $2.60.

DIAN, rated close to leaders to backstretch, took command when asked and held sway thereafter under drive. DEPARTED improved position gradually, came to outside in final bid and could not menace winner while put to intermittent punishment. INACTIVE weakened after running RED LABEL into defeat. COSMIC PRINCE was poorly handled. BUGLE CALL closed gamely.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:39. Off 4:41. Winner, L. Clement's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAHI, $9.20, $5.40, $4.00; TAIPAN, $7.80, $6.60; QUEEN ELIZABETH, $3.20.

MAHI, first away, shook off WITTEKIND to take lead and, under strong handling, outlasted TAIPAN. The latter, always close, moved up to press pace of winner and fought it out with good courage. QUEEN ELIZABETH closed willingly. WITTEKIND pressed early pace and tired gradually. The others were outrun.

CharlesTown Feature Won By Sea Dove

Victory Miss Second, Golden Vein Third, in Carr Purse.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town Race Track, Dec. 2.—While newcomers to this track have been taking many of the purses, it remained for an "all-Charles Town" combination to take down the feature honors today. Sea Dove, the horse; T. Presgrave, the owner; Claude Feltner, the trainer, and Lou Feltner, the jockey, teamed to win the Miss Kitty Carr Purse, outstanding event on the program and witnessed by the West Virginia society beauty for which it was named.

Sea Dove won the 7-furlong battle by a length and a quarter, but the official sign was not displayed until the judges had heard the foul claim of Jockey G. Gleason, who rode Victory Miss, the second horse. Sea Dove bore over on Victory Miss when the latter was attempting to go through on the inside. However, the stewards heard all sides and finally ruled the interference insufficient for a disqualification.

Sea Oove paid a formidable $26 mutuel, but that was small fry to the $180.80 mutuel to place on Victory Miss. Had the foul claim been allowed, Victory Miss would have paid $262 to win. Golden Vein, the favorite, was up to his hips in bandages and was a disappointing third in the field of eight.

"After Washoe Valley had jolted the short-shot betters in the first race by galloping away with her field at a $41 mutuel, owner B. F. Christmas and Jockey Freddy Faust, Washington boy, made a personal victory out of the daily double by superintending the running of Kindle and Cloudy Weather. This combination paid $12.80 in the "double" and individual mutuel of $3.40 and $8.20 respectively..

Rancilla, one who tried without success at Bowie came through with a victory by a neck margin in the fourth race. The filly came from last place to be up in time to take a neck decision from Penway and Easter Herald, third.

Dian, owned by Mrs. G. C. Breton, upset the favorites in the sixth race, winning by two lengths from Departed to bring his backers a $21.20 pay-off. Inactive was third in the limit field of eight. Jockey G. Napier, gave the winner a good ride.

In a nose finish that went to the inside horse, Mahi took the measure of Taipan after the two had battled it out for most of the mile and an eighth in the day's finale. Jockey Laurin, who rode Taipan, made a futile claim of foul. The two horses ran the final quarter side by side. The winner paid $9.20.

Pittsburgh's 98.8 Average Tops College Elevens

California Is Rated Eleventh by System

Close of Season Finds Panthers at Head of Nation's List With Crimson Tide and Rams Rated Behind in That Order; Final Ratings Due Jan. 1.

By E. K. LITKENHOUS.

12	Arkansas	83.8	25	Baylor	79.5
13	Tennessee	83.4	26	Yale	79.3

As the major elevens rounded out their seasons by playing tough opposition, the difference-by-score, calculus-determined, playing-power-point, national football ratings reached the high accuracy of 90 per cent on a victory-or-less basis during the past week-end.

Pittsburgh, the top ranking team in the Nation, topped the Duke gridders in the toughest battle of the week by the predicted margin. Alabama, next in line, overcame Vanderbilt, sixteenth in the list. Fordham routed N. Y. U. as L. S. U. took the measure of Tulane.

The Cadets of Army gave the Middies of the Navy the scheduled ducking by the scheduled score difference, one touchdown. Holy Cross rolled over Boston College. T. C. U. took S. M. U., Nebraska sank Kansas State, Rice won from Baylor, U. C. L. A. topped Missouri and Michigan State trimmed San Francisco in predicted victories.

The Columbia-Stanford tie, indicated by less than a touchdown difference between the two teams, rated 70.1 and 74.9, respectively, again demonstrates that the difference-by-score ratings between Far Eastern and Far Western teams is correct in actual performance. Notre Dame's predicted win over Southern California shows the same thing.

Next week's release will tabulate the standings in conferences throughout the country. These tabulations will give the conference teams in exact playing power order and not in game percentage order. For instance, one team may play all the weaker teams in a conference and win more games than a stronger team which has lost or tied a game.

The season's accuracy and the one-two-three order standings for the Nation will be summarized in the final 1937 ratings, which will be released about January 1.

Southeast Court Loop Cards Two Contests

Two attractions are scheduled for tonight in the Southeast Community Center Basketball League at Hine Junior High.

In the first game at 8 o'clock, National Savings & Trust plays Bureau of Investigation Blues, and at 9 o'clock Riggs Bank tangles with Miller Furniture, only undefeated team in the league.

Standards, Treasury In Softball Contest

Although both Bureau of Standards and Treasury have lost their lone starts in the second half of the Community Center's Indoor Softball League, considerable interest is being shown by their supporters, who promise to turn out in full force for their game tomorrow night at Tech gym.

$2,000 Seniors Golf Tourney To Hutchison

Augusta, Ga., Dec. 2 (AP).—Jock Hutchison, 54-year-old former British Open champion, captured the professional golfers' inaugural $2,000 seniors' tournament today, carding the only par round of the event to finish with a 54-hole total of 223.

The Chicago shot-maker, added a 72 to his first two rounds of 76 and 75 to finish eight strokes in front of George Gordon, of Rumford, R. I., who posted a 73 on his final round to turn in a score of 231. The tournament was held over the Augusta National Course under the sponsorship of the Professional Golfers Association.

With the field divided into three age classes, David Ogilvie, sr., of Augusta and Cleveland, defeated Fred McLeod, of Chevy Chase, Md., in a playoff for the championship of the 55 to 59 division after each had turned in cards of 234 in the tournament.

Ogilvie turned in a 76 to McLeod's 78.

Alex Campbell, Dayton, Ohio, oldster, carded a 246 to lead those in the 60 years and over class.

Victory for Hutchison was worth an unannounced amount of cash and possession for a year of the $1,500 Alfred S. Bourne Trophy. The trophy, a perpetual award, will be inscribed with Hutchison's name.

Women's Golf

from the city and Mrs. Johnson will step in as secretary.

Mrs. Payne was presented with a diamond ring imbedded in a basket of flowers by the ten chairmen of the club's golf committees. A luncheon preceded the meeting, attended by over 100 of the association's members.

The various reports were read by the committee chairman on the year's activities. All club champions and cup winners were presented.

Mrs. N. J. Waldron, team captain, announced a tentative line-up for the coming season that included a second and third team for Army and Navy, Beaver Dam, Congressional and Columbia; first, second and third teams for Chevy Chase and Manor; first and third for Indian Spring, and second teams only for Washington, Woodmont and Kenwood.

The list compares with the 1937 team play in the number of second and third teams, but is two less than the five-club first team total.

Mrs. Payne is expected to announce the new committee within a month.

The installing of the new system of the day's meeting, as an unlimited discussion occupied the meeting for more than an hour. It was finally passed with few dissenting votes. The five scores must be turned in two weeks before the season's first tournament.

Jim Londos to Head Mat Card Next Week

The first appearance of Jim Londos in more than three years has been scheduled for a Washington ring by Promoter Joe Turner, who announced last night that the Greek wrestling Adonis had been signed to headline next Thursday's show at the W Street Arena.

Billy Bartush, California grappler, who has been seeking a bout with the man, whose abdication caused the creation of numerous championship claims, is being sought as Londos' opponent, Turner said.

Victory Post Wins From Sogimas, 12-7

Playing like a bunch of shoemakers in the field, Victory Post of the American Legion was forced to slug out a 12 to 7 win over Buddy Nau's fighting Sogimas to win its seventh straight victory in the Community Center Indoor Baseball League.

Paced by Chet Gebhardt and "Tots" Long, the Legionnaires unlimbered its heavy artillery with 14 hits, three of which were triples, into the left field stands. The fielding and base-running of Sogimas was little short of sensational.

Steffes fanned 14 of the losers and allowed but one earned run, so ragged was the fielding of the victors.

Ida Simmons Regains Title For 15 Games

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Dec. 2.—Ida Simmons, Norfolk's No. 1 ranking bowler, regained her 15 woman's game world's record here tonight by rolling consecutive games for an 1,866 total, after previously announcing that she would attempt the feat. She bowled with George Showalter at the Health Center alleys, under N. D. C. rules, with foul line judge and official scorer.

Lorraine Gulli, the Washington, D. C., ranking bowler, broke Miss Simmon's previous record on Thanksgiving Day when she completed a record mark of 1,866 at the Lucky Strike alleys. Miss Simmons allowed less than a week to pass before regaining her title.

The Norfolk ace rolled a first block of 635, from games of 112, 143, 131, 130 and 119. The second set was 124, 125, 100, 106 and 117. She finished strong with a 629 set for the 1,876 total with 127, 135, 114, 137, 116.

Games Tonight.

Third-round games in the unlimited division of the Heurich Cup League are scheduled for tonight at the Heurich Gym. In the first game Little Tavern plays Fort Myer at 7:30. Other games pit Bureau of Investigation against Delaware & Hudson at and Heurich Senate Beer against the Marine Reserves at 8:30 p. m.

Sports Postscripts

The past week has seen the return of two familiar faces to the District . . . HARRY (the horse) RASKIN, trainer par excellence (he'll tell you) of fighters, is back after a two-month sojourn to New York, where he was administering the liniment for JOE GOULD'S stable of athletes . . . and J. F. SCOTT, known the country over to race horse men as "SCOTTY" . . . HARRY reports that PETEY SARRON had a helluva time making the weight for the ARMSTRONG championship fight in October . . . HARRY was in charge of the Syrian's conditioning and states that he was 3 pounds over the limit three days before the bout, and, through proper dieting, lost a pound a day to hit the 126 for the bout . . . then hit the canvas . . . such is life . . . MAX ROUSCH, the promising Texas heavyweight that HARRY introduced to Washington last year, is doing a bit of all right in his native State, HARRY has learned, having scored a knockout in hi slast fight several days ago . . . SCOTTY turned to soccer, and coached the Goldy College team in Wilmington, Del., to many victories after the horses left Delaware Park . . . he's in town, trying to negotiate a game with a local club to be played here sometime this winter . . .

Speaking of winter, a sure sign of the first freeze was forecast yesterday afternoon when DAVE HERMAN, who handles publicity and passes for JOE TURNER and GOLDIE AHEARN, stepped into the office sporting spats . . . it later turned out that he was trying to dress the part of an announcer . . . for he subbed for JIMMY LAKE as ballyhoo man last night at the rasslin' matches . . . it might be said that he microphoned the "Herman" side of the news . . . that mysterious group of campus questioners at George Washington University is busy canvassing the colonial students on an issue that should be of vital interest to FOOTBALL COACH JIM PIXLEE and his staff . . . it concerns their jobs . . . the FREDDIE STEELE-HOBO WILLIAMS fight here last summer, Washington's biggest fight promotion, was a Variety Club-WASHINGTON POST enterprise, not a TURNER-AHEARN job, as stated in an afternoon sheet, yesterday.

JOE HOLMAN'S book of poems, "Freckle Face and Other Poems," is due off the press today, bound and illustrated . . . and they said the former local sports writer couldn't do it . . . well, it looks as though the Nats' chances of getting a pitcher away from JIMMY DYKES are about as slim as a skeleton's whistline, now that he's swapped VERNON KENNEDY to the Tigers . . . DALE BURNETT'S return to the New York Giant line-up for the Redskin game bodes no good, as he's been ripping the line to shreads in scrimmage.

BOB GARRISON.

5 Nebraska Stars Make All Big Six

Oklahoma, Kansas State Place Two Each on 1937 Selection.

By the Associated Press

Kansas City, Dec. 2.—Nebraska's gridiron opportunists—they whipped Indiana on the first scrimmage play, came from behind twice to beat Minnesota and almost downed mighty Pitt—placed five men on the Associated Press Big Six all-star football team.

The conference champions dominated the all-star line and won the quarterback position in their first season under the coaching of Maj. Lawrence (Biff) Jones. The runner-up Oklahoma team and Kansas State each placed two men on the all-star squad, selected with the advice of coaches, sports writers and other critics.

Kansas and Iowa State each is represented by one player. Missouri failed to land a man.

Only Repeater.

Fred Shirey, Nebraska's slashing tackle celebrating his third year as an all-star choice, is the only repeater on the team of nine seniors and two juniors. The juniors are Edwin Bock, Iowa State guard, and Charles Brock, Nebraska center.

Aside from quarterbacks, there was a dearth of outstanding backs and as a result the all-star backfield offers the unusual picture of three quarterbacks and a fullback. Howard Cleveland of Kansas State and Jack Baer of Oklahoma, quarterbacks, became halfbacks in the balloting.

Pete Smith, Oklahoma end, and Shirey were the only unanimous choices. The closest contest was for center, with Brock edging out Oklahoma's Mickey Parks.

The line averages 191 pounds and the backfield 177.

FIRST TEAM.

Pete Smith (Oklahoma) ..... End
Elmer Dohrmann (Nebraska) .. End
Fred Shirey (Nebraska) ..... Tackle
Anthony Krueger (Kans.St.) Tackle
Robert Mehrtens (Nebraska) . Guard
Edwin Bock (Iowa State) ... Guard
Charles Brock (Nebraska) .. Center
Johnny Howell (Nebraska) .... Q.B.
Howard Cleveland (Kans.St.) H.B.
Jack Baer (Oklahoma) ..... H.B.
Clarence Douglass (Kansas) ... F.B.

prices have been upped from $4.40 per seat to $5.50 . . . The 0-0 ties played by Pitt and Fordham during the past three years leads to the suspicion that they haven't been using a ball in that game . . . there will be some surprises in the All-American team of the Associated Press to be published by The Post tomorrow.

Goldie Ahearn and Joe Turner are not worried by the invasion of the fight promoting field here by Howard Livingston . . . not much . . . "Sure, I wish him de bast of luck, vot thaell," said Ahearn . . . Tony Galento is now ranked as the third best heavyweight in the world . . . Galento, who quit the stable of Jimmy Ervin to fight under the managerial wing of Jack Dempsey, discovered Dempsey did not have time to bother with fighters and joined up with Joe Jacobs, Schmeling's manager . . . When Buck Everett was knocked out in two rounds in Chicago in 1934, the newspapers said: "Everett was knocked out by an "unknown" named Joe Louis."

Green Bays' Packers, while in Washington, declared that one of the pro league's greatest stars is so "punchy" from being tackled hard that he is round-heeled . . . and only two years out of college . . . one of his Redskin teammates vows that Slingin' Sammy Baugh has been secretly wed these many months . . . at the end of the football season, Halfback Cliff Battles and End Charley Malone, will join up with the Dr. Pepper Bottling Company here . . . Pepco Revenue Up, Net Lower For October

Net Income for 10 Months, $4,097,754, Is 9.3% Over Year Ago.

The Potomac Electric Power Co. in its monthly statement to the Public Utilities Commission yesterday reported operating revenues for October of $1,235,236.30, which compares with $1,204,322.12 for the corresponding period last year, an increase of 2.74 per cent. Operating expenses, however, amounted to $765,384.73, an increase of $51,069.89, or 7.15 per cent, over October, 1936.

Net revenues from operations totaled $469,851.57, off $18,155.71 from October last year. The usual income deductions from gross for interest requirements amounted to $82,762.84 and a reduction of $5,994.37 from a year ago, or almost 7 per cent. This left a total net income for October of $387,089.20, against $415,972.49 in October, 1936, a decrease of $28,883.29.

Reporting for the first ten months of this year, the Potomac Electric Power Co. noted a total net income of $4,091,754.80, against $3,743,105.59 in the like 1936 period, making a gain of $348,649.21, or 9.31 per cent. As November and December are always "big months," this means that the year's net income is certain to be highly satisfactory.

Operating revenues in the ten months amounted to $12,181,040.08, a gain of $520,754.94, or 4.47 per cent. Revenue deductions to cover operating expenses required $7,315,501.10, an increase of $240,709.85, or 3.46 per cent. This left net operating revenues of $4,865,538.98, an increase over last year of $275,045.06 and a pickup of 6 per cent, the report to the Utilities Commission stated.

Washington Gas Light.

The monthly report of the Washington Gas Light Co. filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission shows operating revenues of $582,156 for October, compared with $510,759 for October last year, an increase of $71,397. Operating expenses increased $46,942, from $450,827 in October, 1936, to $497,769 this October, due principally to the much larger volume of gas sold and because of increased taxes.

These figures result in net operating revenues of $84,387 in October this year and $59,932 in October last year, an increase of $24,065. The net result of the month's operation, after all deductions for interest and amortization, was a net income of $14,088, an increase of $23,154 over the net for the unusually warm October last year. Earnings for the ten months of the current year were $473,047, compared with $489,833 for the same period last year.

Frost Damage In Argentina Raises Wheat

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 2.—Fresh upturns of almost 2 cents a bushel in Chicago wheat prices today accompanied reports that Argentina frost damage "is beyond anyone's previous guess."

Argentina's wheat crop situation was asserted by one dispatch to be "deplorable." Other advices, however, said crop losses in south Argentina would be offset by better than expected yields in north Argentina.

Influenced by late profit taking, Chicago wheat futures closed at a reaction from the day's top, unchanged to 1⅜ above yesterday's finish, December 94@94⅛, May 92½@92⅝, July 86½@86⅝, corn unchanged to ⅞ up, December 52⅞@53, May 56@56⅛, oats ⅛@⅝ advanced, rye showing 1@1⅜ bulge and provisions a jump of 12@20 cents.

Bank Clearings Slump 25.2% Under Year Ago

New York City, With Drop of 31.7% Reports Largest Decrease.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 2.—Bank clearings in 22 leading cities for the five-day week ended December 1 totaled $4,604,181,000, a drop of 25.2 per cent under the $6,154,592,000 for the like 1936 week, also a five-day week, Dun & Bradstreet reported today. The Thanksgiving Day holiday fell in both periods.

In the preceding week volume was 19.1 per cent under a year ago.

New York City clearings at $2,767,958,000 for the latest week were 31.7 per cent under last year. For the group of cities, excluding New York City, the aggregate was $1,836,223,000, a decrease of 12.6 per cent under a year ago.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Leading world currencies were a little higher in terms of the dollar yesterday in quiet foreign exchange dealings.

At New York the guilder advanced .03 of a cent to be quoted at one time at 55.56 cents. The Swiss franc was up .02½ of a cent to 23.12 cents.

Sterling lifted ⅛ of a cent to 4.99⅛ and the franc gained .00¼ of a cent to 3.39¼ cents. The belga advanced .00½ of a cent to 17.00 cents.

In London the dollar dropped ⅛ of a cent to close at 4.9818 to the pound, compared with sterling in New York overnight at $4.98⅛. The dollar in Paris closed at the equivalent of 3.392 cents to the franc, against 3.39 cents in New York overnight.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Move Slowly With Irregular Price Trends; Prices Improve at Close.

New York, Dec. 2.—Stocks were mixed throughout on a turnover that again fell below a million shares by a small margin. Prices were harder in the late trading than in the early dealings. A few issues responded to dividend news and the main body of stocks shifted lazily over a narrow space with rails moving up quickly at the close. May wheat rose ¾ of a cent to 92¾ cents a bushel.

The lower drift in stocks set in again shortly after a steady opening, but by midafternoon conditions had improved and some of the leading issues managed to rally and gain a little something on the day. Steel opened unchanged at 54⅝, sank a point and then rose 2 points above its low. Most stocks were poorest in the first hour or two. At their worst the declines were as large as 4 points.

Western Union lost a point or so but the company does not seem to be unduly alarmed over the anti-trust suit. A decline of 4 points in duPont was caused by no new development. Caterpillar Tractor, Westinghouse, Manville, U. S. Gypsum and Chrysler fell 2 points or more. Nickel Plates were firm on the Wheeling & Lake Erie dividend. Rails were irregular until the late rally, but the market is now expecting a 10 per cent freight rate increase.

Traders Skeptical.

Stocks looked with rather fishy eyes on the obvious efforts of members of the Administration to talk down the depression and to talk up recovery. Thus Chairman Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board saw the usual "healthy reaction" in stocks which would permit progress from this point without the unsound inflation that characterized the last effort—an observation that certainly takes first place in mental and economic gymnastics. Secretary Roper assured business of President Roosevelt's earnestness in wishing that he could have happy days again. Whatever is in store for us in the next few months, few will dispute that the wish for good times is widespread, in and out of Washington and Wall Street, where, incidentally, unemployment is rapidly rising.

United States bonds were little changed, pending details of the December financing plans, and dollars were steady. Banks and dealers in Government securities expressed their pleasure over the Treasury's announcement that there would be no new cash raised at this month's tax date, and also over the prospects that there would be no further dosage of excess reserves either by the desterilization of gold or by the open market purchase of United States securities.

Reserve Purchases.

The Federal Reserve banks are likely to discontinue such purchases during the period of Treasury financing. The market feels fairly confident that the offering of new securities on December 15 will be either eight-year 2½s or five-year 1¾, or possibly both. Because the amount to be offered for cash will be only $450,000,000, there is already concern as to whether there will be enough to go round for immediate use.

Meanwhile no one suspects the Treasury of planning a capital levy. We have enough of them now, what with the capital gains tax, the undistributed profits tax, the estate tax and, for many people, taxes on income in general which, after settling necessary living expenses, compel the use of capital with which to satisfy the Government's claim. However, an indirect capital tax looks less dangerous than a direct affair—for the Government, at least. The undercover circulation of blanks to be filled out by all those with incomes of over $100,000, showing all property owned, whether revenue producing or not, naturally is disquieting. No one supposes that the matter necessarily will stop with the large income class, but if the big fellows submit to it the smaller fry will have to do so.

Capital Levies.

Whatever the purpose of the inquiry may be it will provide a lot of material for any one who might wish to toy with a straight assessment on capital. The personal inventory in other countries has been the first play of the capital levy gain. If that game isn't the object, there is no possible excuse for making the first play. Capital levies are not unknown. Russia began in recent years with its little 100 per cent operation. Lloyd George toyed with it for a while in Great Britain with his land increment tax, Czechoslovakia has an up and coming capital levy. Switzerland began one a few years ago, but dropped it like a hot potato. Italy recently slapped on a 10 per cent capital levy, disguising it somewhat by extending payments over several years. Germany for long has had a fine system of "forced loans," which in a country of monetary dictatorship and fictitious value for the currency means a capital levy.

The Blum government in France was all set for a capital levy last summer, but found when the time came for it that the capital had taken French leave and would not be back until it was all over over there. No more was heard of a capital levy in France. Poland also has tried the forced loan and along with Hungary, Lithuania and other central European countries has "appropriated" land and distributed it among the have-nots. Property taxes are capital levies, but the Federal Government is now taking a strange step under the shadow of its authority granted by the income tax laws. If the Treasury ever compiles a list of citizens with detailed inventories of property holdings, it will find its way into the hands of Congressmen, and then it will be available for legitimate and illegitimate commercial interests.

Wheeling Votes First Dividend in 20 Years

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—Directors of the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railway, controlled by the Nickel Plate, declared today a dividend of $5 on the common stock, the first since the stock was listed on the New York Stock Echange in 1917. It is payable December 18 to shareholders of record December 14.

Quit Harassing Business, Says Head of A. B. A.

Adams Lists as Burdens Capital, High Income and Profits Taxes.

New York, Dec. 2.—An end to Governmental attacks on business was called for by Orval W. Adams, president of the American Bankers Association, here tonight, in an address delivered at the twenty-fourth annual forum dinner of the New York Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, as a means of business revival and stimulation of employment.

"Continue to threaten and harass industry," he said, "and no amount of financial pump-priming will ever bring recovery. We cannot be blind to the fact that constant harassing of public utilities and industry, the imposition of such burdens as the capital gains tax, high income tax and undistributed profits taxes all tend to restrict the ability of the country to protect the unemployed and to further the interests of labor."

Mr. Adams, who is executive vice president of the Utah State National Bank, at Salt Lake City, urged the bankers present to do their part in bringing about a proper public understanding of what is happening "to our industrial organization and to our Government" and to do their part to "put an end to the forces threatening the destruction of individual initiative in business and of democracy in Government."

He called the present social security set-up a special income tax on the public, and asked how many "expectant beneficiaries of the social security act understand that the moneys they and their employers contribute for their benefit are not being saved but spent."

Mr. Adams declared that five years of pump-priming of business by the Government had been offset by five years of what he called "pump-smashing."

"Did a farmer ever try to get water out of a pump by priming it with one hand and smashing it with the other?" he asked. "Five years of experiment sohuld have taught us that to get water ou of a pump the pump must first be made workable. No amount of priming will get water out of a broken pump," he asserted. "Fortunately," he added, "the industrial pump can do what the old well pump never could do: it can cure itself if it is just left practically alone.'

Western Union Retires $8,745,000 Bonds

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—Western Union Telegraph Co., has arranged bank borrowings to meet maturity of $8,745,000 collateral trust 5 per cent bonds on January 1, 1938, it was announced today.

G. A. Hunter, treasurer, told the Public Service Commission that the Chase National Bank and Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co., would make a loan of $8,500,000 due within three years at interest ranging from 1 per cent to 2½ per cent over the prevailing rediscount rate of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. That rate at present is 1 per cent.

Zinc Price Cut To 5 Cents a Pound

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—The price of prime Western zinc was cut ¼ cent today by leading producers to 5 cents a pound in the second reduction in the past week.

The new level is the lowest for 1937 and compares with a high of 7.50 cents established March 8. Quotations are East St. Louis base price.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 2.—The stock market closed quiet with chief speculative interest concentrated in the gold mining group. Price movements were mixed and the industrial section was somewhat easier, with rayon, steel and shipping shares in supply. Transatlantics remained dull and gilt-edged securities and German bonds sold lower.

Paris.—A firm tone prevailed at the close of the bourse, although government bonds were easier; rentes declined 40 to 65 centimes. Royal Dutch also lost 75 francs while Suez Canal moved up 60.

Liverpool—Wheat rallied sharply in late dealings following the advance at Winnipeg, and finished ¼d to ½d net higher. The market was lower early. American selling of cotton futures encountered local buying and prices closed 1 to 3 points down. Larger private American crop estimates had no influence.

D. C. Jury Indicts 11 for Attack on Operator of Bus

Eleven men, who allegedly attacked William F. Dixon, a driver for the Greyhound Lines, November 26, were indicted by the District grand jury yesterday on charges of simple assault and assault with a dangerous weapon.

The men are alleged to have used automobiles to dart about the bus Dixon was driving on New York avenue until he was forced to the curb, where some of the alleged attackers jumped into the machine and beat Dixon.

Those indicted are George Denning, Albert Kipe, Harvey Cressman, Sam Tabricio, Allan T. Barr, Joseph A. Warrick, Charles Burke, Joseph Trumfheller, Charles Coates, Henry Wines and Arthur Quigley. They will be arraigned next week in District Court.

Meanwhile, the strike called by the drivers has been amicably settled with a pay increase but with refusal of the company to recognize the closed shop proposed by the union members.

HOW TO WIN

1. Read the ads in this Gift Guide carefully. In the two open spaces (top part) of the illustrated cartoon figures above write, type, or print what you think the little figure and Santa are saying to each other.

2. The conversation must contain the name of an advertiser whose ad appears here, and something about any gift that he advertises. Only ads in this Gift Guide and the names of the advertisers are considered.

3. Yes, it is necessary to clip out the cartoon illustration to fill in the words you wish to write in the two open spaces (balloons).

4. Daily prize of $2 for the BEST conversation (do not color or decorate). The cleverness and originality in the way you word the conversation is what counts.

5. The first daily prize is a gift order on advertisers herein (your own selection), and 3 pairs of theater tickets to the next three winners. Prizes will be awarded on the third day after printing of each cartoon picture. For the picture that appears today, your answer must be in by 6 p. m. tomorrow. The winners' names will be published here on the third day.

6. You can submit as many entries as you wish, but each must be written in the space of a separate cartoon picture. Send same to Judges of Christmas "Gift Guide," care of The Washington Post, Washington, D. C.

7. Here are some sample conversations for above cartoon:

Tuesday, November 30th, Winners:

1st Prize: $2 Gift Certificate:
O. R. Cooley, 911 23rd St. N.W.

2nd, 3rd and 4th Prizes: Theater Tickets:
Charles Gillikin, 1426 B St. S.E.
Mrs. Margaret Daily, 1445 Park Rd. N.W.
Miss Marjorie Stuart, 1349 Randolph St. N.W.

Your merchandise certificate or theatre tickets may be obtained at the counter in the lobby of The Post upon proper identification.

Bob Burns Says—

It's a funny thing to me that when we need the advice of a doctor or a lawyer we think nothing of calling in the highest authority and paying fancy prices for it, and yet when we're puzzled by some perplexity of life we try to figger it out ourselves instead of going to the best authority, some old person who has been through the mill.

When my Cousin Lobelia's fella come to call on her one night, he met Grandpa Snazzy comin' out of Lobelia's house. Grandpa says "Young fella, you look nervous—what's the matter?" The young fella says "Why, I'm gonna propose to Lobelia tonight and I'll bet she'll be surprised to death." Grandpa says "Well, she gave her little brother a dime to go to bed at 6:30—she hung four cupid pictures on the parlor wall—she moved the sofa to the darkest corner of the room—she got her Paw and Maw to go callin' next door—she put the dog in the celler and right now she's sittin' at the piano, practicin' 'Because I Love You'."

High Ambition Hinted in Talk By LaGuardia

New York Mayor Serves Notice of Future Plans at Research Dinner.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 2.—In an impromptu speech before a wholly urban audience describing farm relief as the greatest American necessity, Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York tonight virtually served notice that he has larger—perhaps national—political aspirations.

LaGuardia appeared before the twenty-fifth anniversary dinner of Survey Associates, a research organization, with Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan, Prof. Felix Frankfurter and other nationally known figures.

The mayor brought the Presidency into the consciousness of the audience by referring obliquely to a statement some time ago by William Allen White, Kansas editor, to the effect LaGuardia was a Presidential possibility.

"We have one man of great discernment here," said the mayor, smiling broadly. "He is Mr. William Allen White, of Kansas. He said I was good."

Only recently it was disclosed LaGuardia, nominally a Republican in the past, had cut every affiliation with that party, formally joining the new American Labor Party. This development alone had caused much speculation that the mayor might be projecting some third-party national effort for 1940; tonight's attitude seemed to disinterested watchers to add to such a view.

Murphy earlier declared his faith tonight that industrial peace was "within our reach," but said management and labor both must be ready to make concessions.

Employers, the Governor added, must "abandon the conception of the workmen as a mere part of the machinery of production," and labor must accept the philosophy that the "proper way to settle grievances is not by taking possession of property, but by resorting to the orderly procedure of collective bargaining."

"As a measure of intelligent self-preservation," he went on, "and to insure the fulfillment of its obligations to society, it is to be hoped that industry will develop a program of orderly and regulated production.

The experiments of government, he added, had "not been uniformly successful," but it was by "such experiments that government gradually will evolve effective agencies . . . for the impartial airing and settlement of differences."

Prof. Felix Frankfurter, former dean of the Harvard Law School and a liberal adviser to President Roosevelt, said in his address prepared for the anniversary dinner that today's—and yesterday's—"major domestic issues . . . turn essentially on the relation of government to money-making and of money-making to government."

For half a century, he said, cries of "socialism, alien ideas, dictatorship, bureaucracy, centralization and their like" had been raised against attempts to "remove abuses of our system."

"If every attempt to remove abuses of our system or to promote its avowed ends has encountered the obstruction of abstract notions about government as the enemy of society . . . such abstract notions are discredited by the record of history."

"The Government must step in, first, to rein up self-interest where it is doing harm, and secondly, to perform those tasks of mutual aid which must be done communally," he added.

Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., offered a studied defense of capitalism, despite its "abuses in exceptional instances."

". . . I feel," he said, "that more than anything else it is encouragement to enterprise and it is leadership and management, produced more often than not from the ranks, that is the basis of our exceptional progress in material well being."

Capital, he added, was not the "favorite child" so many seemed to think it was, but often "the least beneficiary of what goes on."

Police Accuse Two in Phone 'Slug Racket'

Quick-Witted Operator Helps Blow at $40,000-a-Year Robbery.

A quick-witted telephone operator—whose name was kept secret for fear of possible reprisals against her—yesterday led to the first and drastic blow to a "slug racket" that last year milked the local phone company of $40,000.

Exactly six minutes after two men are alleged to have put in a long-distance call for Lancaster, Pa., using a genuine nickel and three quarter slugs, Detective Sergt. J. K. Baker had arrested the pair. At police headquarters the two were charged with violating the act of August 16, 1937, making it illegal to use slugs in pay telephones and vending machines.

The arrests were the first to be made under the new "slug law." The men gave their names as Anthony Willgoose, 63, 1115 M street northwest, and John M. Murphy, 51, 308 V street northwest. Murphy was released after posting $1,000 bond. Willgoose was held in lieu of $1,000 bond.

Although the arrests were based on only 75 cents in spurious coins, phone company spokesmen indicated the action might be a real deterrent to petty racketeers who monthly rob the phone company of $3,500. In 38 states where similar laws have been enforced, company officials said losses had "dropped tremendously."

French Woman League Aide Urges Firm Stand for Peace

Mme. Malaterre-Sellier Calls for Democracies to Stand Together to Repress Aggressor Nations.

Whether or not the United States joins the League of Nations is strictly its own business, declared Mme. Germaine Malaterre-Sellier, only French woman delegate to the League, at a tea given in her honor at the Hotel Carlton yesterday by Miss Minnie Mae Fleming, of the League of Nations Association.

The peace-loving countries must be firmly united, however, Mme. Malaterre declared, before settlement of world problems can be assured.

"Only by the democracies' firm resolution to halt aggression, even to the employment of sanctions, will the dictatorships see that peaceful co-operation will serve them best," said Mme. Malaterre, who is making a six-weeks' speaking tour through Eastern United States and Canada. "But sanctions would be unnecessary if the aggressors knew that peaceful countries were determined to preserve international morality."

Stating that "law-breakers must not be rewarded with concessions," Mme. Malaterre admitted that the German demand for colonial restoration is a matter for "serious consideration." She expressed alarm, however, at the Italo-German encouragement of population growth simultaneously with rising demands for increased territory.

A nurse throughout the World War, Mme. Malaterre was wounded at Soissons, and was decorated with both the Croix de Guerre (three citations) and the Legion of Honor. Since 1932, she has been technical adviser to the French delegation at Geneva. She is president of the section on peace, National Council of French Women.

Flurries of Snow May Descend on Capital Today

Wasningtonians shivered yesterday, and turned up their coat collars as the temperature plunged and the maximum reading was but 41 degrees at 3:10 p. m. Thursday's minimum was 35 at 7 a. m.

The Weather Bureau ordered storm warnings from the Virginia Capes to Nantucket, Mass., as a disturbance centered about 200 miles east-southeast of Cape Hatteras moved northward, bringing moderate gales along the Middle Atlantic and Southern New England coasts.

Paris Seeks Forts On Swiss Frontier, Daladier Reveals

Paris, Dec. 2 (AP).—Edouard Daladier, minister of national defense, tonight told the Chamber of Deputies France is seeking to scrap that section of the Versailles treaty which forbids her to fortify her frontier with Switzerland.

He said conversations with the Swiss government have been "going on for a year."

The disclosure came after Deputy Rene Burtin declared there "is a grave menace" the German armies might attempt to swing around the maginot line and attack France across northern Switzerland.

Pepco Heads Appointed On A.I.E.E. Committee

The appointments of William McClellan, president of the Potomac Electric Power Co., and of Harry W. Osgood, electrical engineer of the same organization, as honorary chairman and chairman, respectively, of the general committee to arrange for the 1938 convention of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers in Washington in June, 1938, was announced yesterday.

Named as the other officers of the committee were Charles A. Robinson, general manager, Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., vice chairman George L. Weller, of the same firm, secretary, and Alfred E. Horn, manager Washington office of the General Electric Co., treasurer.

Bradbury Heights Body Plans Children Census

Mrs. F. E. Monar was elected corresponding secretary and delegate to the D. C. School Federation by the Bradbury Heights Citizens Association meeting last night in the northeast community's Methodist Episcopal Church.

Cyril E. Albright was appointed chairman of the committee which will make a census of children living in the section, as part of the association's campaign for a school and community center.

Policemen Seek Job for Father Of Boy Peddler

After reluctantly arresting 12-year old Donald Preston on Wednesday for peddling shoe-laces in a restricted zone, police yesterday turned to District officials and the public for solution to the economic difficulties of Donald's family.

The youngster, whose home is at 704 Third street northwest, was the only support of his father, William Preston, his mother and four brothers and sisters.

Captain Harvey J. Callahan, commanding the First Police Precinct where Donald was arrested, yesterday conferred with D. C. Commissioner Hazen over possibilities of finding a regular job for the father.

William Preston, Callahan said, has worked only irregularly in the 16 months he has lived here since leaving North Carolina. Recently the $1.50 a day Donald earned selling shoe-laces on sidewalks has been the family's only income.

"I admire the youngster," Capt. Callahan said, "but we just had to break up the practice of dozens of small boys peddling on the sidewalks in the downtown area. We just had to do something to keep down the complaints."

A long series of warnings preceded the arrest Wednesday by Policeman W. W. Whittimore, Callahan added. And police will ask for only a lecture and suspended sentence when the case comes into Juvenile Court, he said.

Donald was released in the custody of his father. He was charged with selling without a license.

Konigmacher Rites Conducted in D. C.

Funeral services were held yesterday at Chambers undertaking establishment for Joseph Konigmacher, 62, of No. 72 Floral avenue, Takoma Park, a descendent of the German pioneer Seventh Day Baptists, who migrated to the United States from their homeland in 1735.

Konigmacher died at his home after a lingering illness Tuesday. He had been a desk clerk at Washington Sanitarium, and before that had worked as a nurse and a painter in Pennsylvania, where he was born, and in Battle Creek, Mich.

Surviving Konigmacher are his widow, Mrs. Alice Konigmacher; two sons, Paul and Martin Konigmacher, and two daughters, Mrs. Dorothy Bowman and Mrs. Ruth Dunkinson.

Two Gunmen Hold Up Market, Collect $94

Two white masked men, both armed, last night held up Olson's Giant Market in Hyattsville and escaped on foot with $94, of which $8 was in checks. The men were described as 30 and 35 years old, both of medium build.

Three clerks employed in the store, Sam Towsend, Warren Kidwell and E. L. Scates, were closing the store when they were held up and forced to reopen the doors. They said the bandits fled around a nearby corner.

Youth Alliance to Meet.

National trustees of the Alliance for Guidance of Rural Youth and the Washington branch of the Alliance will meet tomorrow at 8:30 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, 15 Dupont circle northwest. Speakers will include Dr. O. Latham Hatcher, president of the Alliance; Dr. Mordecai Ezekial, adviser to the Secretary of Agriculture, and Adrian J. Dornbush, assistant director of the Resettlement Division of the Farm Security Administration.

Army Commissions.

Three Washington residents have accepted commissions in the Reserve Corps, United States Army. They are Robert E. Lee, 428 P street northwest, second lieutenant, Infantry Reserve; Roger B. Payne, 401 Twenty-third street northwest, second lieutenant, Coast Artillery Reserve, and Howard J. Stark, 2114 O street northwest, Chemical Warfare Reserve.

Providence Club Formed.

The Providence College Club of Washington was organized at a dinner meeting last night at the Hotel Harrington. Thirty graduates were present. The following officers were elected: President, Robert T. Murphy, '36; vice president, John M. O'Connell, jr., '32; secretary-treasurer, Joseph A. Roney, '26, and chaplain, the Rev. Philip C. Skehan, O. P., of St. Dominic's Church, former professor political science at Providence College.

Governor Tells Of Reserve Policy

M. S. Szymczak, governor of the Federal Reserve Board, last night told 75 members of the Engineer Chapter of the Reserve Officers Association that the present aim of the board was to restrain credit available for speculation while pursuing an easy monetary policy toward its member banks who serve industry, commerce and agriculture.

Tracing the history and structure of the Federal Reserve system, Szymczak declared at the meeting in the Mayflower Hotel that "there is an orderly sequence to our policy, in spite of the popular impression that no one can tell what those people in Washington will do next."

Thanking the speaker, Col. Fred B. Ryons, president of the chapter, expressed the hope that the Federal Reserve Board eventually might attain "complete independence of all political influence and a position comparable to that of the Supreme Court."

Rate Cut Sought In Prince Georges

The Prince Georges County Federation of Citizens Associations, meeting last night in the Bladensburg Fire House, launched a campaign for lower electric rates and streetcar fares.

The federation voted to request the people's counsel of the Maryland Public Service Commission to attend the hearing to be held in Washington on the proposal to reduce Potomac Electric Power Co. rates. Present rates in the county, except for communities along the District Line, are 7 cents a killowat hour, as compared with 4 cents in Washington.

The nominating committee selected last night consists of Blair Riggles, Decatur Heights; Elmo Jones, Bradbury Heights, and W. G. Coppley, Silver Hill. Election of officers will take place at the January meeting.

Stag Night Held By Kiwanis Club

With members of the Metropolitan Police Boys' Clubs throwing leather at each other in four bouts, and with Col. Jimmy Lake and another Charlie McCarthy alternating as masters of ceremonies, the Washington Kiwanis Club celebrated its annual stag night at the Hotel Mayflower last night.

Guests of honor were Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and Dr. Custis Lee Hall, surgeon, who performs free orthopedic operations on needy children. George Mangum, president, presided. A. B. van Voorhees, president-elect, headed the committee.

Hitch-Hiking Duckling Escapes Sriminal Charge

Polly Pintail (Duck), exact age unknown, of Roaches Run, Va., was arrested yesterday on the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway by a park policeman who charged her with attempted hitch hiking.

The more serious charge of being a fugitive from the National Park Service wild fowl sanctuary at Roaches Run was not lodged against the duck because examination disclosed that one wing was injured, possibly in a collision with an auto as she was preparing to land on the lagoon. The pintail was returned to the sanctuary.

Washington State Group Renames Smith as Head

Representative Martin F. Smith, of Hoquiem, Wash., has been re-elected president of the Washington State and Alaska Society. Representative John M. Coffee, of Tacoma, was elected president for western Washington and Representative Charles H. Leavy, of Spokane, was elected vice president for eastern Washington.

Other active officers elected were Mrs. Lloyd A. Nelson, treasurer; Miss Ruby L. Bakken, corresponding secretary; Miss Margaret Carpenter, recording secretary; Miss Bogue, historian, and Timothy O. McDowell, Miss Daphne Anderson and William P. Taylor, executive officers.

Tree Group to Meet.

The executive committee for the lighting of the National Community Christmas Tree will hold a luncheon meeting at 12:30 p. m. today in the Harrington Hotel.

Son at American U. Hears From Father Imperiled in China

The missionary father of a first-year student at American University has notified his son here that he plans to remain in China, despite the peril from the Sino-Japanese War.

William Hector Sherertz, the son, revealed yesterday that his parent, Prof. D. L. Sherertz, in a letter dated October 24, said, "No matter what you hear about Americans leaving China, we'll still be there."

Dr. Sherertz, his wife, four children and Mrs. Sherertz's mother, Mrs. W. H. Park, were among a group marooned at Mokanshan, in the center of hostilities between Shanghai and Nanking. Yesterday anixety was expressed for their safety, as for that of other missionaries. At the time his son received the letter, Dr. Sherertz reported all were well and safe.

Hector, a graduate of the American School at Kuling, came here October 18 to enter American University.

'Big Apple' Disease Relief Is Reported

New Orleans, Dec. 2 (AP).—A new brain operation for the relief of athetosis, an agitating nerve disease which makes its victims appear to be constantly doing the "Big Apple" dance, was announced today before the Southern Medical Association.

Dr. Roland M. Klemme, of St. Louis, Mo., said he successfully had treated four patients by removing part of the cortex, or brain covering.

Girl Leaving Bus Waylaid, Robbed

An attractive 19-year-old girl of Montgomery Hill, Md., told county police she had been robbed and assaulted by a man who accosted her last night after she had stepped off a bus at Seminary road.

Threatening her with what seemed to be a revolver, the man ordered the girl into an unfinished house and seized a diamond engagement ring and $6 in cash.

Lady Kingsford-Smith Married in Australia

Melbourne, Australia (Friday), Dec. 3 (AP).—Lady Kingsford-Smith, widow of Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, famous Australian long distance flier, and Alan Tully, corporation executive, were married here today. Sir Charles, who disappeared in November, 1935, while on a projected England-Australia flight, was pronounced legally dead April 1, 1936.

Forum to Hear Marsh.

Benjamin C. Marsh, executive secretary of the People's Lobby, who has just retured from Europe, and Herbert Zam, editor of Social-i- Review and foreign editor of the Socialist Call, will address the Capital City Forum at 8:15 p. m. today at the Workmen's Circle Lyceum, 150 Fourteenth street northwest, on "International Democracy and the Foreign Policy of Great Britain."

Inquest Planned.

A coroner's inquest will be held today to determine if pneumonia which caused the death yesterday of Milton Eyeler, 67, of 912 H street northwest, could have resulted from injuries suffered in an automobile accident last September. An autopsy determined pneumonia was the cause of death, Coroner A. Magruder McDonald said.

you will have slept when you draw your first old age security pension. Don't wait until you are 65 before retiring with comfort and security. Choose a bed today from the LAFAYETTE BED SHOP, just around the corner from Conn. Ave., 1747 R. I. Ave. N.W. Select from 50 styles!

Girl, 4, Adopted By a McCormick, May Get Millions

Chicago, Dec. 2 (AP). — Harold Fowler McCormick, chairman of the Board of the International Harvester Co., disclosed tonight his daughter, Mrs. Muriel McCormick Hubbard, granddaughter of the late John D. Rockefeller, had adopted a 4-year-old girl.

The child, adopted from an institution in the east, stood in a position to succeed to a share of the fortune of two of America's wealthiest families—the Rockefellers and the McCormicks.

It was possible, too, the adoption would alter the complicated succession to the Rockefeller oil millions.

Retired Navy Captain Found Dead in Thicket

Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 2 (AP).—Capt. William Herbert Reynolds, 63, retired Navy officer, was found dead in a thicket near his suburban home here today. He had been missing since Monday. Officers said he did of natural causes, apparently cerebral hemorrhage. He was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1897 and retired in 1923.

Mistrial Is Declared When Juror Gets Job

Summoned to work immediately—or not at all—he handed a telegram to Kings County Judge George W. Martin, who promptly declared a mistrial and sent Juror Kruger on his way with the hope the job would provide his family a "Happy Christmas."

Druggist Weds Heiress.

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—Beverly MacFadden, 19, youngest daughter of Bernarr MacFadden, physical culturist and publisher, was married to Roland Hebert, a pharmacist, of Holyoke, Mass., on November 15, in Elkton, Md., it was announced today.
